TIDAL WAVE SWEEPS CHILE AFTER VIOLENT EARTHQUAKE

Vast Damage Done to Property and Many Persons Killed and Seriously Injured—Telegraphic Lines Carried Down and Communication Crippled.

100 PERSONS REPORTED DEAD AT CAPIAPO

Buildings at Chanaral and Other Towns Wrecked by Immense Seas Rushing In—Thousands Driven From Homes.

By the Associated Press.

SANTIAGO, Chile, Nov. 11.—An earthquake of great magnitude and farspread effect rocked Chile from end to end today. It was accompanied by a tidal wave and the combined force of the earth tremors and the sweep of water did vast damage, the extent of which it is impossible to estimate because telegraphic lines were carried down at various places cutting off communication.

The Provinces of Antofagasta, Atacama and Coquimbo suffered most, the central points of the quake lying in the latter two provinces, and so far as advices show, Copiapo, in Atacama, has the largest casualty list, with about 100 killed and many seriously injured.

It was for a time feared that the city of Atofagasta had suffered a great disaster, but most of the damage done at that place was due to a tidal wave, which drove the people out of their homes over a considerable area. No report of loss of life has yet come from Antofagasta.

Chanaral, in Atacama, has virtually been abandoned by the inhabitants, as many buildings were wrecked by the immense seas sweeping in when the earth shocks had ceased.

Reports from Concepcion and Talcahuano, to the south, make no mention of damage or casualties. At Concepcion, a strong earth movement from east to west was felt for about three minutes at midnight. At Talcahunano a todal wave occurred, following the subsidence of which the water level was lower than normal. The movement was steady and caused no damage.

Destruction in Coquimbo.

Throughout the province of Coquimbo hundreds of houses were leveled, while the residents fled to the hills. At the Port of Coquimbo a tidal wave beat over the entire sea front, flooding a large section and wrecking many buildings.

From the southern part of Chile come reports of severe shocks, but little damage.

Another earth shock was felt here at 4:45 o'clock this afternoon. It was of 10 seconds' duration.

A message from Vilos, in Aconcagua, north of Valparaiso, says an earth shock and tidal wave at midnight destroyed 11 fishermen's houses and the greater part of the mole there. Four children were injured.

Advices from Yerbas Buenas, province of Coquimbo, say the region toward the north is in ruins and that many houses have fallen.

Tidal Wave Causes Greatest Damage in Province of Atacama.

By the Associated Press.

ANTOFAGASTA, Chile, Nov. 11.—Upwards of 100 persons were killed and many seriously wounded by the earthquake, which overturned many buildings early this morning in Copiapo, capital of the province of Atacama.

The first shocks were felt in Antofagasta City a few minutes before midnight last night. These were prolonged and very severe. The citizens were greatly alarmed and almost immediately the telegraphic lines that connect the north with the south were broken down.

About 1:30 this morning a tidal wave inundated part of the city, flooding scores of buildings close to the beach. The radio station was completely flooded and the waters cut away the radio machines, surging for more than a mile over the dunes. Then soon waters ebbed several hundred yards.

Alarms were sounded by the Marine authorities and firemen and workmen were called out to assist various craft from their dangerous position, save quantities of goods

PORTER GILVIN, LONG DEPUTY WARDEN AT PENITENTIARY, DIES

Prosperous St. Louisan, Former Convict, Who Gave Him Auto Last Year, at Deathbed.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Nov. 11.—Porter Gilvin, 60 years old, for many years Deputy Warden of the State penitentiary, died here today after a brief illness. Gilvin came to the penitentiary from Sturgeon, Boone County, in 1897, as a guard. By gradual promotions he became Deputy Warden and held the post through several changes of administrations. He was Warden during the Gardner regime, but was discharged to make room for a Republican soon after Gov. Hyde's board took charge of the institution.

Though a strict disciplinarian, Gilvin was beloved by many of the convicts, a large number of them pleading to be allowed to visit him when his serious illness became known. This request was granted and groups of convicts visited the Gilvin home under guard.

One former convict, befriended by Gilvin when the man, then a youth, came to the penitentiary from St. Louis, and who since his discharge several years ago has made a marked business success in St. Louis, hurried here at news of the Deputy Warden's illness and remained until the last. This man last year had given Gilvin an automobile as evidence of his gratitude.

Funeral services will be held here at 1 p. m. Monday, and all activities in the penitentiary will cease for one hour in respect to Gilvin's memory.

He is survived by his widow.

INDICTMENTS AGAINST BERGER FOR WAR OBSTRUCTION DROPPED

Cases of Four Other Socialists at Milwaukee Also Have Been Dismissed.

By the Associated Press.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Nov. 11.—Three indictments, charging Victor L Berger and four other prominent Socialists with obstructing the Government in the prosecution of the war, were dismissed by Federal Judge Geiger, May 8, of this year, it became known today.

The other defendants were Oscar Ameringer, formerly county organizer of the Socialist party, now connected with the Oklahoma Leader, a Socialist newspaper in Oklahoma City; Edmund T. Melms, present county organizer; Leo Krzycki, now general organizer for the National Clothing Workers' Union and formerly prominent in the Socialist party in Milwaukee; Louis A. Arnold, Socialist Tax Commissioner and of the Social Democrat Publishing Co., publisher of the Milwaukee Leader.

The indictments had been hanging fire because the Government was prosecuting Berger on the same charge in Chicago.

HENRY FORD ANNOUNCES A BIGGER PLANT FOR ST. LOUIS

Present Factory at Sarah Street and Forest Park Boulevard Will Be Abandoned for Site on West or East Bank of the Mississippi.

5 TIMES CAPACITY OF ONE IN USE PROPOSED

Although Nothing Definite Has Been Decided, Detroit Manufacturer Says Construction May Be Started Within Year.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 11.—Henry Ford told a Post-Dispatch staff correspondent today that the Ford Motor Co. was preparing to abandon its assembly plant at Sarah street and Forest Park boulevard, St. Louis, and to erect in its stead one of larger proportions on the west or east bank of the Mississippi River in the St. Louis industrial district on a site not yet chosen.

He was not prepared to say definitely at this time what the proportions of the new plant would be or name the date of its construction. Plans now drawn, however, contemplate a plant approximately five times the capacity of the present one, with provisions for further expansion into manufacture as well as assembly if some future condition should make manufacture of some parts of the Ford automobile in St. Louis expedient. Construction likely, though not positively, will begin within the next year.

One site that has been suggested to Ford is the Busch-Lemp tract of 30 acres, an irregular stretch extending along the river from Utah street to the United States Arsenal and having a general boundary on the west by the Missouri Pacific Railway and the Manufacturers' Railway, though at points the tract touches Broadway. The price quoted to Ford is approximately $750,000.

He has under consideration other sites on the east bank of the river, where the acreage is so much cheaper that a saving of about $350,000 would accrue to him, but is giving ear to assertions of the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce that better labor and shipping facilities in St. Louis soon would absorb this difference in original site investment.

Tentative Plant Plans.

The plan as drawn contemplates a single story main plant 1500 feet long, or about five average St. Louis blocks, and 300 feet wide, which, with site and equipment, would entail an investment of about $5,000,000 and the employment of approximately 1200 men. Auxiliary plants for woodworking and the manufacture of parts, not engine parts, are provided for in the general plan, although not contemplated at the time of the erection of the assembly plant.

Ford said that the new St. Louis plant was part of an expansion program made necessary by the increased business of the Ford Motor Co. and in accordance with his general industrial theory that manufacture should take place as close to the market as possible. One of the things in American industrial life which Ford ridicules is the shipment of raw materials to some distant point and their return in the form of finished goods to the point of their production. He cited as an illustration the shipment of Missouri hogs to Chicago and their return to the Missouri farmer in the form of pork chops at a price for a pound many times the price at which the farmer sold the hog on the hoof.

Reasons for Expansion.

Some comprehension of the necessity of expansion, which has led Ford to plan the enlargement of his St. Louis plant, as well as those in San Francisco and St. Paul in the West, and at several Eastern points, may be had from the following figures given to the correspondent:

The Ford Motor Co. produced 1,000,000 motor cars last year. This year production in Detroit reached 1,000,000 cars in August. In September, it rose to 5100 cars a day. At this time, production is 5300 cars a day and by the end of the year it will be at the rate of 1,500,000 a year, in addition to 400 Fordson tractors a day turned out at the River Rouge plant here and 300 at Cork, Ireland.

In view of the inability of some

FUMBLING PLAYERS ORDERED TO CARRY FOOTBALLS A WEEK

Kalamazoo Coach to Oust Men From Team if They Are Caught Without "Pigskins."

By the Associated Press.

KALAMAZOO, Mich., Nov. 11.—Because seven of his players fumbled the ball in today's game with Valparaiso University, Coach Ralph Young, of Kalamazoo College, gave each of the men a football at the close of the contest and ordered that they carry the pigskins with them everywhere they went during the next week. Should any of them be found without the ball in their possession, no matter where it was, during the week, he said, they would be thrown off the team.

Kalamazoo won from Valparaiso, 21 to 15, the visitors making their touchdowns as a result of fumbles.

CLEMENCEAU, WITH HAT, CANE AND VALET, SAILS FOR U. S.

Former French Premier Would Bring About Complete Understanding Between Nations.

By the Associated Press.

HAVRE, Nov. 11.—A short, stout, sharp eyed, brown faced man of 82 was the most noticed person on the steamship Paris which sailed from here this afternoon for New York.

He was Georges Clemenceau, France's war-time Premier, on his way to carry out a long cherished dream—that of visiting the United States for the first time since his youth and doing his utmost to bring complete understanding and sympathy between that country and France.

Although the departure of "The Tiger" was unrecognized officially by either the French or American Governments, he is looked upon as one of the most important figures ever to leave the shores of France. Besides his valet, Albert, he is accompanied, as he characteristically remarked, only by his hat and cane.

SAYS GERMANY, TO LIVE, MUST WORK TWO HOURS MORE DAILY

Stinnes Declares Country's Existence Demands Production of 200,000,000 Gold Marks More Per Month.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Nov. 11.—Germany must work two hours more daily for 10 or 15 years in order to be able ever to exist, the Imperial Economic Council was told by Hugo Stinnes, the industrial magnate, in a speech published in the Deutsche Allegemeine Zeitung.

Herr Stinnes dwelt upon the unproductivity of the country and estimated that it must produce at least 200,000,000 gold marks more per month to live. Then all that would ensue would be the possibility of having something with which to pay reparations.

A loan of 500,000,000 gold marks now would merely be wasted within a few months, he told the council. The people, he thought, could be induced to work longer hours if the Entente withdrew the army of occupation from Germany.

KEMALISTS REPEAT DEMAND ALLIES QUIT CONSTANTINOPLE

Belief Expressed Martial Law May Be Necessary in Recrudescence of Crisis.

By the Associated Press.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 8.—(Delayed through cutting of cable near Chanak)—The Kemalists have reiterated their request that the allies withdraw their land and naval forces from Constantinople.

Continued insistence by the Kemalists upon abolition of interallied control of the gendarmerie, customs, railroads and censorship of the Turkish newspapers has caused a recrudescence of the crisis and the belief is voiced that it may be necessary to proclaim martial law.

Rafet Pasha, Nationalist Governor of Constantinople, has summoned Omar Yaver Pasha, First Court Chamberlain, and Col. Ekrem Bey, commander of the Imperial Guard, from the palace, informing them that they must consider themselves detached from the imperial court and henceforth subject to orders from Angora.

TWO ARMISTICE DAY PARADES HERE; WILSON TALKS TO 7000 PERSONS AT CAPITAL

EX-PRESIDENT, IN FIRST SPEECH IN THREE YEARS, BIDS U. S. HELP WORLD

Declares Only Co-operation for Justice, and Not Amiable Phrases, Can Abolish War; Predicts Providence Will Overcome "Puny" Obstructionists.

POINTS TO RESULT OF "BLIND PARTISANSHIP"

Hearers, Who Jam Street and Climb Trees to See Him, Cheer Frantically When He Appears Leaning Upon Attendant.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
Wyatt Bldg.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—Woodrow Wilson delivered this afternoon the first public message to come from his lips in three years. Out of the seclusion into which illness drove him during his Western speaking tour in September of 1919, he emerged with dramatic unexpectedness, vastly improved in healthful appearance and vigor of voice, to utter again the principles he was fighting for when he was stricken.

The incident was notable above all else for the nature of the message—a prophecy that America's sense of justice will yet sweep blind partisans from the path and bring peace to the world. And this in itself was given as the former President's comment on Tuesday's elections.

7000 Admirers Hear Address.

It was impressive for the wild fervor of more than 7000 admirers who were massed upon the steep slope of S street before the Wilson home. It was particularly fitting, for it came upon Armistice day, which had brought these crowds there to pay a tribute, as they did a year ago, to the man who had pointed the path which he is still following as steadfastly as his broken health permits.

It was likewise deeply moving for the pathos of a scene in which an ex-President, leaning heavily upon the arm of an attendant, rises above physical infirmity to sound again the keynote of his convictions through all the storms of politics that have swept him, could not escape even rabid dissenters.

To these few thousands of admirers, perhaps half of them women, crowding every space within earshot, disposed upon tree branches, walls and a high embankment across the street, the moment meant the invisible mass emotionalism. Women wept freely. Men stood with their hats off.

As for Mr. Wilson, his left arm still limp, but hi scane graped firmly in his right hand, he came very slowly out of his doorway to a place on the low stone step, relinquished his attendant's aid, and waved his silk hat, smiling no set smile but one of genuine pleasure.

There was the utmost simplicity to the crowd's program today. Its members proposed simply to go to the Wilson home and briefly remind him of their allegiance. The Wilson doorstep was heaped with bouquets and baskets of gay flowers.

Air Split With Cheering.

It was upon this bright sunlit scene that the former President smiled. The air was split with cheering. It rose again and again until Henry Morgenthau, former Ambassador to Turkey, had subdued it finally by movements of both hands. Then Morgenthau read an address purposely brief to spare Mr. Wilson a long strain of attendance.

As soon as Mr. Morgenthau had stopped, Mr. Wilson moved nearer the edge of his doorstep and in his now greatly restored voice that carried well to the crowds, spoke for nearly 10 minutes.

Mr. Wilson told his hearers that world peace could be brought about only by "active co-operation for justice" and 'not by amiable phrases." America always has stood

Text of Former President Wilson's Address to Armistice Day Visitors

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.

THE text of Mr. Wilson's address, which was in reply to one delivered on behalf of the delegation by Henry Morgenthau, former Ambassabor to Turkey, follows:

"I am very much moved by this wonderful exhibition of your friendship and approval and I have been reflecting today that Armistice day has particular significance for the United States, because the United States has remained contented with the Armistice and has not moved forward to peace.

"It is a very serious reflection that the United States, the great originative nation, should remain contented with a negation. Armistice is a negation; it is a standstill of arms; it is cessation of fighting and we are so bent on a cessation of fighting that we are even throwing our arms away.

"It is a singular circumstance to which Mr. Morgenthau has in part adverted, that while we prescribed the condition of the armistice we did not concur in the establishment of permanent peace. That, of course, was brought about by a group in the United States Senate who preferred personal partisan motives to the honor of their country and the peace of the world.

"They do not represent the United States, because the United States is moving forward and they are slipping backward. Where their slipping will end, God only will determine.

"And I have also been reflecting upon the radical difference between armistice and peace. Armistice, as I have said, is a mere negation; it is the refraining from force. But peace is a very positive and constructive thing as the world stands today, because it must be brought about by the systematic maintenance of common understanding and by cultivation—not by amiable phrases, but the active co-operation for justice; and justice is a greater thing than any kind of expediency. America has always stood for justice and always will stand for it. Puny persons who are now standing in the way will presently find that their weakness is no match for the strength of a moving providence. (Here the former President jocularly remarked: "If you will pardon an invalid for putting on his hat, I will promise not to talk through it."

"I think then we may renew today our faith in the future, though we are celebrating the past. The future is in our hands and if we are not equal to it, the shame will be ours and none other's. I thank you from a very full heart, my friends, for this demonstration of kindness by you and bid you and the nation godspeed."

PRESIDENT HONORS UNKNOWN DEAD IN SILENT CEREMONY

Simplicity Marks Placing of Wreath Upon Warrior's Tomb—Stillness Broken Only by Guns and Bugles.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—President Harding laid a wreath of remembrance today on the tomb of the Unknown Soldier at Arlington National Cemetery. It was set there as a wordless greeting from the heart of America to a valorous, honored son and commemorated the first anniversary of his homecoming from France.

And the utter simplicity and sincerity of the tribute today was in a way as gripping to the few who saw it made as was the day-long tide of emotional fervor that marked the homecoming. It set a custom for the national observance of Armistice day in the future that will make the unknown from France the keeper of America's annual expression of pride and glory in her sons, who fought in France, be they living or dead.

There were many other tributes brought to the tomb during the day. Sometimes little groups of men and women from distant cities made the journey to lay bright flowers on the molded stone work that holds the body of a nameless American for whom no honor has been too high; sometimes the blossoms were laid there by men moved to individual tribute to the dead. It was thus that Gen. Pershing's offering was placed.

The man who commanded this humble sleeper and the surging ranks of his comrades in France and had hoped to go himself and alone to carry his tribute to the fallen to the tomb, was called elsewhere to talk with patriotic men on living issues in the nation's life and reluctantly assigned his aide to go after all others had come and gone with their flowers and place his offering on the tomb.

Handful of Spectators.

Grouped over the wide steps that lead up to the entrance to the amphitheater a mere handful of spectators and a little detachment of soldiers, sailors and marines, representing the fighting forces of the nation, had found their place. Two score of Boy Scouts also had trudged over from the capital and were drawn up beside the way the President would pass.

The far rumble of a gun brought the soldiers to attention. The President was passing through Fort Myer over the road, on his way to the cemetery. One by one the thudding echoes counted out the roll of 21 guns of the national salute. Then again there was stillness until the clatter of hoofs told that the cavalry escort and the little string of official cars was drawing near. The troopers turned aside to sit with sabers at present as the President's car rolled on toward the terrace. The bugles of the Boy Scouts called softly the flourishes army regulations prescribe for the commander-in-chief. Then the car turned the corner out onto the wide terrace and stopped near the tomb.

President Harding and Secretaries Weeks and Denby stepped out to stand with heads bared as the soldiers and sailors and marines presented arms. Behind them were the President's military and naval and marine corps aids, resplendent in the gold braid of full military dress. Major-General Harbord, as Gen. Pershing's deputy, also had come to honor a dead comrade again.

No Word Except Commands.

There was no word spoken on the terrace sweep, where the tomb lies except the commands that moved the rifles of the guard of honor to salute.

The President seemed to feel a deep significance in the moment, as though he sensed the solemn approval of the hundred million of his countrymen in what he did in their name. He placed the great wreath against the stonework of the tomb, then stepped back to pause a moment, looking down on the plain block of masonry that covers a plain soldier chosen to typify the greatest among the nation's heroes. The hush on the terrace was almost breathless and every eye was fixed on the still figure of the President standing with bared head bent as though in reverie. Slowly, almost as though it were unconsciously, the President raised his hand in military salute to the dead, his shoulders straightening. Then he turned away and a moment later was speeding back to busy affairs in Washington, behind the trotting cavalry.

REED MAKES PATRIOTIC ADDRESS AT THE ARMORY

Senator in Second Utterance Since Election Denounces Klan; Acting Mayor Aloe Says 18th Amendment Was Passed While "Boys Were Overseas."

2200 PASS IN REVIEW ON 12TH BOULEVARD

Former Service Men, Regular Army Soldiers, Civil War Veterans, Gold Star Mothers and Fraternal Organizations March.

St. Louis was reminded again of its sacrifices and its compensations in the world war, of tearful partings with its youths and their triumphal return, and paused to give homage to those who did not come back, but whose names live after them, in yesterday's fourth annual celebration of Armistice day.

There were two parades that served to awaken these thoughts and which were the chief opportunity for the public to take part in the celebration. The principal one, under the auspices of the American Legion, was witnessed by thousands of spectators along the route from the Twelfth boulevard plaza to the First Regiment Armory.

At the Armory, Senator Reed was the chief speaker and he shaped his address on the subject of patriotism, but included a vigorous denunciation, by innuendo, of the Ku Klux Klan, and mentioned favorite topics, such as national isolation and the preservation of personal liberties. It was his first address in St. Louis, and his second of importance, since his reelection Tuesday.

Twelfth boulevard, the court of honor when the troops came home in 1919, was thronged with spectators when the parade started, promptly at 1:45 p. m. It was with difficulty that the marchers and riders, who numbered about 2200 men, women, boys and girls, pressed through and swung into Locust street.

Hundred in the Review.

The cppings and walks outside the Public Library were black with onlookers. At a burlesque theater the cast and chorus, costumed for the call of "curtain," but cloaked, waved a welcome from a balcony. Nearby members of the Y. W. C. A. applauded from their doorway. The crowd became thinner farther out. West of Jefferson avenue there were numerous negro spectators who greeted members of their race in the parade. Automobile row was politely interested. Hundreds of persons filled the reviewing stand and adjacent open spaces in Lindell cut-off.

At Grand and Lindell boulevards the throng was dense, many persons having vantage points on the steps of St. Francis Xavier's Church, and, to the south, in front of St. Louis University and on other terraces. High school pupils, watching a football game in their park at Laclede avenue, turned to view the procession. Many persons watched the marchers enter the Armory.

There was not much noise, save for the stirring bugle calls and martial music. The day was strangely unlike that Nov. 11 four years before, when exultation moved the crowds. An assemblage of approving Americans, thankful for the achievement which the pageant symbolized, watched the marchers.

This was the formation of the parade, which was 45 minutes in passing the reviewing stand.

Police Capt. Hanna, with a platoon of mounted policemen, followed by a group of white-gloved

NEWBERRY, IF HE DOES NOT RESIGN, MAY BE EXPELLED

Belief Prevalent in Republican Circles in Washington He Will Save G. O. P. Face by Quitting.

RE-OPENING OF CASE ASSURED BY FERRIS

Majority Against Newberry Almost Certain — Case of William Lorimer Furnishes Precedent.

By CHARLES G. ROSS.
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—If Senator Newberry of Michigan does not belatedly save the face of the administration by resigning, he will almost certainly be expelled by the Senate upon the reorganization of this body in the next Congress. The belief is prevalent in Republican political circles here that he will resign.

The Democratic sweep in last Tuesday's elections in which Newberryism was the paramount issue in the Senator's home state, and an important issue in several other states, converted a majority of five in his favor into a clear majority against him. On a roll call of the new Senate with all members present and voting, except Newberry himself, he would be ousted by a majority of probably not less than 11 votes. This estimate gives the Michigan Senator the benefit of the assumption that Hiram Johnson would not again be detained by a snowstorm—his excuse for not voting on the proposed expulsion of Newberry last January—and would cast his ballot with the Old Guard Republicans.

Democrats Against Him.

With the exception of the late Senator Watson of Georgia, who refrained from voting, all the Democrats on that occasion voted against Newberry. It is a fair assumption that all the Democrats in the next Senate, including Watson's successor, George, will vote the same way. This gives 42 votes for unseating.

To the Democratic total it is safe to add the votes of Borah of Idaho, Capper of Kansas, Jones of Washington, Ladd of North Dakota, La Follette of Wisconsin, Norbeck of South Dakota and Norris of Nebraska, all of whom voted against Newberry last January; the votes of the incoming radical Republicans, Brookhart of Iowa, Howell of Nebraska and Frazier of North Dakota, and finally the vote of the Farmer-Labor member, Shipstead, of Minnesota. These 11 votes added to the 42 on the Democratic side give 53 for the ousting of Newberry.

Assuming that Newberry would muster all the Reupblicans who voted for him before and in addition would have the votes of Johnson of California, Fess of Ohio (who defeated Pomerene), and Greene of Vermont (successor to Page, retired), his total would be 42, or 11 less than the anti-Newberry total. From this it is seen that the score would run against him even if he should be opposed, on the Republican side, only by those who have already voted for his unseating. In other words, he could get the votes of Brookhart, Howell, Frazier and Shipstead (an inconceivable contingency), and yet be expelled by a vote of 49 to 46.

Reopening of Issue Certain.

Reopening of the Newberry case, in the event that he does not resign, is assured. Senator-elect Ferris of Michigan, winner over Townsend on the direct issue of Newberryism, has announced that he will open fire immediately after taking his seat. He will be supported, of course, by the Democrats and by the liberal group on the Republican side, including, notably, Borah and La Follette. In his final scorching arraignment of the old guard for its champioship of Newberry last January, the Wisconsin Senator said that the case inevitably would come before the Senate again.

The case of William Lorimer, as La Follette then noted, furnishes a precedent. Lorimer, accused of obtaining a seat through bribery of the Illinois Legislature, was first whitewashed, but when the case was reopened in the next Senate, to permit the introduction of new evidence, was ousted.

The parallel between the Newberry and Lorimer cases holds good even in the matter of additional evidence, since the opposition to Newberry is prepared to bring forward facts which the Spencer investigating commtitee carefully sidestepped. The Spencer committee, it will be recalled, refused by a partisan vote to summon Newberry as a witness, to compel the attendance of B. F. Emery, the disappearing witness to whom others "passed the buck," or to allow the Newberry family bank accounts to be subpenaed.

Reed Heads Opposition.

The defeat of Senator Pomerene for re-election in Ohio will make Senator Reed the highest ranking Democratic member of the Committee on Privileges and Elections. Reed will thus become the titular head of the opposition to Newberry. With Senator Spencer leading the Newberry defense, the two Missouri Senators are brought face to face as opposing champions in a famous tilt.

It is interesting to note that of the 13 Republican supporters of Newberry whose terms expire with the present Congress, only three will be in the next Congress. These are McLean, re-elected in Connecticut; Hale, who was returned in the September election in Maine, and Lodge, who squeezed by with a greatly reduced majority in Massachusetts.

One of the 13—Page of Vermont—was not a candidate for re-election and two—New of Indiana and McCumber of North Dakota—were beaten in their Republican primaries. All the others—Dupont of Delaware, France of Maryland, Townsend of Michigan, Kellogg of Minnesota, Frelinghuysen of New Jersey, Calder of New York and Poindexter of Washington—were beaten in the elections last Tuesday.

MILLIONAIRE DISFRANCHISED FOR SPENDING $86,050 IN OBTAINING 12,000 VOTES

Fred Edwards, Manufacturer, Who Sought to "Clean" Politics Got "Cleaned"—Ran for U. S. Senate Nomination in West Virginia.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., Nov. 11.—C. Fred Edwards, millionaire mattress manufacturer, whose "bed ticks to politics" campaign for the Republican nomination for United States Senator resulted in his being deprived of the right to vote for three years and a fine of $1000 in Common Pleas Court here yesterday for violation of the State corrupt practices act, will devote his time in the future to cleaning up politics, he declared today.

Meanhile, before starting his work of purging the West Virginia political situation, he will attack the constitutionality of the State corrupt practices act, under which he was sentenced by Judge D. E. Matthews, in the State Supreme Court. A stay of 60 days having been granted by the Court to permit John Marcum, Edwards' attorney, to file notice of appeal.

History of the Campaign.

Edwards' sentence came as the climax of a sensational campaign for the nomination in the August primaries. Last spring the wealthy manufacturer announced his candidacy and immediately began a vigorous campaign for the Republican nomination, opposing Senator Howard Sutherland, who was defeated by M. M. Neely, Democratic candidate, last Tuesday; H. C. Ogden, Wheeling newspaper publisher, and A. A. Lilly, former Attorney-General of West Virginia. He spent money lavishly for publicity, and the State became an Edwards photographic gallery, with every telegraph pole and fence post a niche for his likeness.

On Aug. 1 he polled 12,000 votes in the State rpimary, Sutherland winning the nomination by a vote of 48,000. Practically all of Edwards' vote was polled in the southern part of the State, with Huntington and Cabell County giving him more than a quarter of his total. He was considered beaten and it was thought that he had passed into political limbo of defeated candidates.

List of Beneficiaries.

However, his name and his unsuccessful race was brought to the front again on Sept. 11 when Houston G. Young, Secretary of State, cited him for delinquency in filing his return of campaign expenses and the next day his expenses list was made public, listing the cost of his campaign at $96,000. The State allows a total of $4125, or $75 for each county in the State. His return showed that he had distributed his money as follows:

Sherman C. Denham of Clarksburg, business and political partner of Virgil C. Highland, Republican national committeeman, $35,000.

James H. Stewart, State Commissioner of Agriculture, $5000.

Ira Harshbarger, former Sheriff of Cabell County and twice Mayor of Huntington, $30,000.

James A. Hughes, former Republican Congressman from the Fourth District, $7500.

William Sommers, chief of the Bureau of Markets of the State Department of Agriculture, $5000.

Miscellaneous expenditures, $3500.

The list totaled $86,050.

Indicted on Two Counts.

The Cabell County grand jury on Oct. 5 returned indictments against Edwards on two counts, charging him with delinquency in filing his return of campaign expenditures and with spending $37,500 in Cabell County, the money given Hughes and Harshbarger, in violation of the law.

Edwards immediately had subpenaes issued for Denham, Highland, Thomas, Burke of Clarksburg, so-called field representatives of the Republican party; Stewart and Sommers to testify at his trial. He made public at the time a statement charging that Highland and Denham had pledged their support to him in the primary and had "thrown him over" after he had lavished his money on the Republican organization.

When the case was called for trial yesterday Marcum, his attorney, entered a plea of nolo contendere to the two indictments, contending that Edwards had not been guilty of violation of the law to his own knowledge and that he had spent money freely without any intention of corrupting voters.

Daugherty Is Quoted.

"Why, the Attorney-General of the United States, Mr. Daugherty, told Mr. Edwards in Washington that the ruling of the United States Supreme Court in the Newberry case permitted him to expend as much money as he chose for legitimate purposes," Marcum told the court. "He was unaware that he had violated any law."

He declared that the expenses in Cabell County would not have been so large if Gov. Morgan had not telephoned Dave Gideon here and complained that "Edwards was not putting sufficient money into the campaign."

Dave Gideon is publisher of a local Republican newspaper. In his statement to the Court he gave Hughes and Harshbarger a clean bill but insisted that the rest of the money had not been spent in the best interests of the Edwards campaign.

Judge Matthews in fining Edwards $1000 for delinquency in filing his return and disfranchising him three years for spending more than the law allows, praised him for his honesty and upright character. He recalled that Edwards, his lifelong friend, had told him several years ago that it was his ambition to enter politics and clean up the situation.

Statement to Court.

In his statement to the court, Edwards asked that his vote not be taken from him.

"When I entered this campaign I knew little of politics," he said. "I do know now that there is a lot of dirty politics in West Virginia and I would like to be free to aid in the cleaning up of the situation during the next three years."

Immediately after sentence had been passed Edwards' counsel withdrew the plea of nolo contendere and gave notice of appeal, saying that he would attack the constitutionality of the corrupt practice acts in the Supreme Court.

The sentences imposed on Edwards came as a distinct surprise. The fine of $1000 was the maximum allowed under the State law for delinquency in filing a return of campaign expenses, and as Edwards was only one day late it was thought that the minimum of $50 would be imposed.

WILSON TALKS TO 7000 PERSONS AT CAPITAL

for justice, he declared, adding that the "puny persons" now standing in the way would find presently that "their weakness is no match for the strength of a moving Providence."

Mr. Morgenthau, in his address, had declared that the principles enunciated by Mr. Wilson during the war would prevail and that on last Tuesday it had been demonstrated that "the American people are escaping from selfishness and are preparing again to recognize their solemn and inexorable duty towards their fellow nations in Europe."

During most of the speech Mr. Wilson had stood hatless, but in the midst of his message he interrupted himself to say, "If you will pardon an invalid for putting on his hat, I will promise not to talk through it."

That flash of his wonted good humor delighted his hearets, who both laughed and applauded, because it was another indication of Mr. Wilson's improved condition.

Having concluded, he waved incessantly to his cheering audience, and resorted again to his attendant, Mr. Wilson turned and re-entered, taking Mrs. Wilson's hand to help him over the inner step. Shortly thereafter he appeared at a second-floor window, which was thrown open, and the cheering continued—for him and for the League of Nations—at which last he joined in by a vigorous waving of his right hand. There was more singing of Southern negro songs, while Mr. Wilson happily gazed at the crowds.

A fervid voice, unmistakably of Italian quality, burst in from a point well up on the wooden embankment opposite, to proclaim, "Mis' Wilson, greates' man in the world." It brought its owner a special smile and salute from Mr. Wilson.

Mr. Wilson held a cluster of white carnations from among the heaps of flowers gathered in from the doorstep. They were still held in his hands a few minutes later when he set forth for his afternoon ride.

Wilson, in Letter, Says Nation Must Be Given Service it Needs in 1924.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—Woodrow Wilson in a letter to Senator Caraway, Democrat, Arkansas, concerning the recent elections, said: "We must now clear our minds and purify our hearts to offer to the country in 1924 exactly the service it most needs and the candidate who can best render that service."

The letter, which was made public tonight, was in reply to one from the Arkansas Senator who said: "All your friends rejoice as much as you in the result of the recent election which is a vindication of the principles for which you fought."

In reply, Mr. Wilson said: "It makes me very proud that you and other generous friends should attribute the result of Tuesday's election in some measure to the people's thought of me and I am truly grateful for your own generous expression of confidence and approval."

DEMOCRAT MAY BE NAMED TO SUCCEED JUSTICE PITNEY

Impending Resignation From Supreme Bench Would Give Harding Opportunity to Please Both Parties.

By CHARLES G. ROSS,
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 11.—It is now certain that one of the next two appointees to the bench of the United States Supreme Court will be a Democrat, but who that Democrat will be and whether he will be named to succeed Justice Day, who has already resigned, or to fill a later vacancy, are still matters of speculation.

Until recently it was commonly supposed that a Democrat would be given the Day seat. Now, however, it is considered equally probable that a Republican will be named for this place and that the Democratic appointment will come second. That the President is now inclined to make the appointments in this order is a fair inference from recent outgivings at the White House. He has let it be understood that in any event a new Democratic member will shortly augment the slim minority on the bench. The latest authoritative word on the subject is that the President doesn't at the moment know whether the next appointee will be a Democrat or a Republican, a Northerner or Southerner, but that the country may rest assured he will give first consideration to fitness and not to politics or geographical location. The President, it is stated, has no desire to make the court partisan.

If the President carries out his present intention, he will send the name of Justice Day's successor to the Senate on the opening day of the next session of Congress.

Pitney to Retire.

The fact that the President will be able within a short time to name a Democrat and also satisfy the claims of his own party to further consideration is due to the impending retirement of Justice Pitney, who is in seriously impaired health. Justice Pitney by his 10 years' service has fulfilled one of the perquisites to retirement. It is settled, however, that Congress soon will be asked to pass a special act permitting him to retire on account of his health. He would in that case receive the full salary of a justice for the rest of his life. There is precedent for congressional action of this kind.

There is renewed gossip that Secretary of State Hughes, having laid the foundations of the Administration's foreign policy, is slated for a return to the Supreme bench. That this is so is highly questionable. Hughes may have the Supreme bench in mind for some distant date, but the emphasis he gave to his party regularity in his campaign speeches indicates that for the present he may have a more alluring objective in view.

Hughes and the Presidency.

Hughes, of course, is not campaigning for the presidential nomination in 1924. One may reasonably assume, however, that should Harding be eliminated as a factor, Hughes will not be averse to being considered. His chances of receiving such consideration were obviously not lessened by the wallop given the Harding administration in the recent elections, or by the defeat of Gov. Miller, a potential presidential candidate, in New York.

Two names that continue to be prominently mentioned in connection with the Democratic appointment to the Supreme bench are those of Senator Shields of Tennessee and John W. Davis, former Ambassador to Great Britain. Shields, undoubtedly, has been placed well forward on the President's list of possibilities, and many careful observers reached the conclusion some time ago that he would be named. Shields stock, however, fell with the recent reiteration at the White House of the President's "disinclinations" to choose for a life position anyone over the age of 60. Shields is 64.

A likelier prospect at present is that the choice will fall on Davis. His selection would be popular with the Democratic party, in which he is an outstanding figure without factional entanglement, and with the American Bar Association, of which he is the president. He comes, moreover, from West Virginia, in a section which for a long time has had no representative on the Supreme bench. Davis made a brilliant record as Ambassador.

PARTY LEADERSHIP IN NEW CONGRESS TOPIC IN CAPITAL

Important Places Which Are Held by Mondell, Kitchin and Underwood Must Be Filled.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—Probable changes in the leadership of both great parties in the next Congress took a predominating place today in post-election discussions here and in conferences among members of Senate and House as they arrived in increasing numbers for the extra session which begins a week from Monday.

Agreement was general that sweeping alterations would occur in the roster of party managers after March 4 in both branches, and it became apparent the impending readjustments would provide continual negotiation and jockeying throughout the next four months.

Defeat of Representative Mondell of Wyoming, Republican floor leader in the House, in his campaign for election to the Senate, retirement from the Democratic House leadership of Representative Kitchin of North Carolina, because of ill health, and announcement by Senator Underwood, of Alabama, that he would not accept re-election as Democratic leader, make it certain new selections must be made for three of the chief places of party responsibility.

Already many aspirants for leadership are springing up and there has been much private sounding out of sentiment.

Effect of Possible Extra Session.

The party caucuses in which the question of leadership will be settled are not to be held until the eve of the convening of the Congress, but the situation is obscured further by uncertainty as to when that will take place. Ordinarily, the sixty-eighth Congress would not meet until a year from next December. Should an extra session become necessary after the present Congress expires next March, however, the leadership shakeup would be advanced accordingly.

Senator Lodge of Massachusetts, Republican Senate leader, was reelected and is expected to seek to hold his place. But, if ill health should force him to retire, a half dozen candidates are in prospect. Among them are Curtis of Kansas, Watson of Indiana, Wadsworth of New York and Jones of Washington.

Simmons Mentioned.

On the Democratic side, Senators mentioned as possible successors of Underwood included Simmons of North Carolina, Robinson of Arkansas, Walsh of Massachusetts, Harrison of Mississippi and Welsh of Montana. Under established precedents, Senator Simmons has the "call" for the place under the custom of electing the ranking Senator in point of service

A change in the office of president pro tempore of the Senate, now held by Senator Cummins of Iowa, also is expected. Cummins' associates say that because of his health it is unlikely that he will ask for reelection. Senators Curtis and Jones are mentioned for the place.

Wisconsin Angle.

In the House it is possible the delegation from Wisconsin, regarded as a compact bloc of "Progressive voting strength," may hold the balance of power, doubt being expressed whether the expected Republican slate providing for the re-election of Speaker Gillett and selection of Representative Longworth of Ohio, as Republican leader, could be put through unless approved by the Wisconsin group.

Since the election there has been much talk of James P. Mann of Illinois, for Speaker or leader. Representative Burton of Ohio, also has been mentioned as leader.

On the Democratic side, there is also the prospect of a lively fight for the leadership, the choice apparently being between Garrett of Tennessee, acting leader, and Garner of Texas.

stored in the customs house cellar, and rescue the occupants of the dwellings.

Dispatches from the province of Atacama say that the center of the earthquake was an area roughly defined by Copiapo, Ovalle (In the province of Coquimbo), Vallenar, Chanaral and San Fernando. Of these places so far as is known Copiaho suffered most. At Chanaral Great tidal waves swept over the commercial section of the city, wrecking the post office among other buildings. It is reported that the city has been virtually abandoned by the residents.

All the affected areas are badly in need of relief. Communication with Santiago, Valparaiso and Southern Chile is interrupted.

Violent Quake Recorded on St. Louis University Seismograph.

An earthquake of "violence and destructive intensity," estimated to be about 4800 miles southeast of here, probably in the neighborhood of Bolivia, was recorded Friday night on the seismograph at St. Louis University. The tremors began at 10:43:54 p. m., and continued until 1:31 a. m.

The second shock was recorded precisely nine seconds after the first, or at 10:52:54 p. m. The principal shock was felt at 11:01 p. m., and the last at 1:31 a. m. The entire time covered by the disturbances was 2 hours and 47 minutes.

The last quake recorded here was on Oct. 24, and was calculated to be about 5200 miles south of Washington, D. C. Another quake was recorded here Oct. 11, and was traced to Peru.

Seismographs in Germany Recorded Violent Shocks.

HEIDELBERG, Germany, Nov. 11.—An earthquake lasting three hours and as violent as the Messina quake of 1908, was registered by the seismographs of the observatories here and Koenigstein, Prusia, this morning.

The first tremor came at 5:47 o'clock, and a first heavy shock at 6:14 o'clock. The estimated distance and direction were not announced, but the site of the quake is thought to be some thousands of miles away.

Quake Recorded by Seismographic Stations at Brussels and Florence.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Nov. 11.—The seismographic stations at Brussels and Florence registered violent oscillations today at 4:46 and 5:46 a. m., respectively. Calculations made at the Brussels stations indicated the earthquake was in the proximity of Mount Titicaca, in the Andes. The seismograph needles at Florence oscillated for more than four hours, describing sharp angles and ellipses which recalled the oscillations registered at the time of the Valparaiso and Buenaventura earthquake in 1906.

Hilo Bay Swept by Nine Tidal Waves in 18 Hours.

By the Associated Press.

HILO, Island of Hawaii, Nov. 11.—Nine tidal waves swept Hilo Bay in the 18 hours ending at noon today. The first six were the largest. They came between 8:53 o'clock last night and 1:10 o'clock this morning. The others swept in shortly before noon today.

Sampans belonging to Japanese living along the water front were washed ashore in numbers and 10 were carried out to sea, where they soon sank. It is not believed anyone was aboard them. Many Japanese packed their belongings and hurried inland when the first waves came, but a number of them returned to watch the second group of waves today. Crowds assembled on high ground saw the water rush through the breakwaters and sink back with a rush like that of a mountain torrent. Many Japanese children, regardless of the danger, gathered up fish cast high on the beach by the tide.

Cocoanut Island, in the harbor, is inundated.

St. Louis industries to see for themselves any benefit from the recent revival of the Mississippi River for shipping, it is interesting to note that Ford's chief condition as to site is that it shall be contiguous to the river.

Sees River as Key to Future.

Ford believes that the Mississippi holds the future greatness of St. Louis. It is recalled that, at one time, he said to a Post-Dispatch correspondent that dams should be built in the river to provide power, to provide a constant channel for navigation and to control floods. He even expanded the idea to include dams in all tributaries of the Mississippi so that cheap power would be spread throughout the entire valley to establish its economic independence from Eastern financial dominance.

He referred repeatedly to this scheme toady and chided the correspondent because St. Louis, and other cities in the valley, had not taken steps to bring the dam into existence. He noted approvingly that Senator Reed in a recent speech at Kansas City had advocated the expending of $1,000,000,000 for such a project.

"St. Louis has the greatest natural advantages of any city of my acquaintance," he said. "Look at it, in the very heart of the greatest productive region of the country and with the Mississippi at its doors! The Mississippi has a fall of 400 feet between St. Louis and New Orleans. Muscle Shoals is a toy in comparison. If I get Muscle Shoals, I'll show what the Mississippi could be made to do.

Plans to Use River.

"I have already begun plans to use it at one spot, St. Paul, where I have purchased 200 acres adjoining the dam which the Government recently installed to make Minneapolis the head of navigation. Five big dams in the Mississippi river between St. Louis and New Orleans would do for a starter. After that, the dam could be extended up the river and up its branches.

"Water power could line the Mississippi with towns whose prosperity would be more secure than that of any other cities in the country. Coal would be wiped out, even for heating. I have a little log cabin over yonder (pointing in the direction of his home in Dearborn, which is on the banks of the Little River Rouge, a stream not as large as the Meramec.) In the cabin, I have an electric stove. The electricity comes from a dam which I put in front of my home. The water that goes over that little dam yields ten times the power necessary to heat and light my home and keep that stove in the log cabin burning the year round.

"I am planning now to bridge the Ohio so that I can extend my railroad (the Detroit, Toledo & Ironton) to the coal mines the Ford company owns in Kentucky. When I bridge the river, I will electrify the Detroit, Toledo & Ironton with the water power now idle along its course."

Son's Visit Recalled.

When asked if his immediate desire for a site along the river for his new St. Loius plant was to use it for shipping, he replied:

"Why not? There are boats running, and shipping by water is cheaper than by rail."

It is recalled that Edsel Ford, president of the Ford company, visited St. Louis Oct. 17 and, during his visit, toured the St. Louis and East St. Louis industrial district with Henry Miller, president of the Terminal Railroad, and Herbert W. Cox, its real estate agent. At the time, it was believed that his visit had to do with the expansion of Ford facilities, but he declined to say anything further than that when he had completed his tour of assembly plants in other cities, he might have something to propose. He has completed that tour and has asked for data on St. Louis industrial district sites.

Henry Ford said today that his son was more familiar with the details of the company's plans for St. Louis than he, but believed that no further announcement could be made at this time.

Site Only Remaining Detail.

However, it is clear that the only remaining detail not wroked out, is the site. That lies between St. Louis and some east bank point, probably East St. Louis. It is said that the Fords regard the East Side more favorably because of delays they feel would be experienced in shipments from Detroit crossing the river.

The St. Louis Chamber of Commerce has replied that it is proposed to give the Free Bridge a south approach to connect with the Manufacturers' Railway which, with the Missouri Pacific, would serve the new plant if, as it is suggested, it is built on the Busch-Lemp tract. This new bridge approach of course, is dependent on the outcome of the proposed bond issue in St. Louis.

It is cited further that cars of a type desired for automobile shipment will be more available in St. Louis than at any point on the East Side. Cars entering the east side area are largely stock and coal cars, unfitted for automobile shipment, while desirable cars available in St. Louis are comparatively numerous. The car supply of St. Louis is stated to be, on the whole, 50 per cent better than, that on the east side.

Favoring Busch-Lemp Tract.

The desirablity of the Busch-Lemp tract is stated as follows:

It is a district specially established by the zoning ordinance for unrestricted industrial use.

It is served by five street car lines and has within two miles southwest a large tract reserved by ordinance for residential purposes and served by all the car lines that serve the industrial tract.

It is further stated that though some parts of the tract have a valuation of $1.25 a square foot, because of purchase in a 30-acre tract, a price of 90 cents can be obtained.

The labor question also has been called to Ford's attention. It is pointed out that, even though he should select an East Side site, the majority of his employes would reside in St. Louis and would feel entitled to a larger higher wage on the East Side than in St. Louis to compensate for time lost and expense of going across the river and back again.

It is probable that selection of a site will be made speedily.

"Discussion of a site reminds me," Ford said, "that the present Ford plant at Highland Park likely would have been at Dearborn (15 miles from the center of Detroit) had it not been for one stubborn man. We had a site in Dearborn acquired except for one small plot. That owner held out. Well, he is still holding out and kicking like fury every time he gets a tax bill."

EQUAL RIGHTS PROGRAM OF WOMAN'S PARTY

Campaign Planned for Equality in Home, Church, Industry and Government.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—Officers of the National Woman's Party, representing women of 33 states, today unanimously adopted a far-reaching declaration of rights as the basis for a country-wide campaign demanding equal rights for women in the home, church, industry and government.

Debate at the opening session of the two-day equal rights conference centered principally around two planks in the declaration, which demanded that "restrictions upon hours, conditions and remuneration of labor shall apply alike to both sexes," and "that women shall no longer be barred from the priesthood or ministry, or any position of authority in the church, but equally with men shall participate in ecclesiastical offices of dignities."

Labor Question Argued.

Speakers on the labor question argued that industrial regulations applying to hours and conditions should apply alike to women and men, and that women did not ask special legislation. Led by Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, national president of the party, other speakers declared that as women were the mainstay of the church and principle educators of their children in religion, they should enjoy equally privileges of leadership in the pulpit.

To carry out the plan of equality, the conference then adopted a plan of campaign reaching into every state, where Legislatures are to meet this year, to stir sentiment among men and women in favor of the equal rights declaration. Equal rights sentiment would be stimulated, not only in state Legislatures, but in Congress as well, through the working of congressional committees in each state.

To effect this, it is planned for women over the country to work toward having women nominated as candidates for every local and state office, and appointed equally with men to positions under local, county and state governments.

Women Lawyers to Confer.

Mrs. John Rogers of New York, chairman of the advisory council of the party, presided over today's session. Tomorrow morning there will be a conference of women lawyers from all parts of the country, and in the afternoon the conference will reconvene for the disposal of several important party questions.

Had the Hilltoppers from Dallas University been as defensively strong in the second half of yesterday's game with the Billikens of St. Louis U. as they proved in the first or, conversely as Referee Euclid used to put it, had the Bills been as weak on the offense in the second section as they were in the two opening quarters, the final score of the contest might have been 0—0. As it was, the Hilltoppers wilted as the Billikens rallied and the count, at the finish, was 14—0, with the Billikens credited with the 14.

It is hardly likely the Dallas team would have scored had they played all week, as their offense was missing. On the defense, however, they showed amazing well for the first half and the Billikens were unable to pass the line. On two occasions, St. Louis was in a position to count but, held by the Texans, was forced to try a desperate forward pass over the opposing goal-line. These two passes grounded and touchbacks resulted. Two long runs, both by St. Louis players marked the peak of the home school offense in the first half. Schaeffering made the first of these—a dash of 32 yards around right end. After two futile passes, Schaeffering tried for a field goal, but the effort was short and the Texans took the ball. McConachie, playing through the game and performing starrily, got away in the second quarter, but the St. Louis attack was not working smoothly and, though the ball was constantly in Dallas territory, the Bills could not push it over the scoring line.

Action in the Second Half.

The second half was filled with action. Dallas kicked off and Kelly ran it back 10 yards. Schaeffering failed and a pass grounded, so Hannegan had to kick. Then, came the break of the game. After one useless try at the St. Louis line, Dallas punted, or almost did. Kelly blocked the kick and, picking the ball up, ran to the Texas 20-yard line. Dallas was penalized 10 yards and a touchdown seemed certain, but a Billiken lineman held and St. Louis was sent back 15 yards. They were not to be denied, however, for Schaeffering skirted the Dallas right end for a 25-yard gain and put the ball on the three-yard marker.

The next play was a plunge but when the pile of players was disentangled the ball was still a few inches short. It was first down, though and, on the following play, McKenzie went over for the first score of the game. Schaeffering drop-kicked neatly for the extra point. The Dallas defense was tightened up with a substitution or two and, though the Bills seemed able to gain greatly in

GEORGIA TECH BEATS GEORGETOWN TEAM, 19-7

By the Associated Press.
ATLANTA, Ga., Nov. 11.—The Georgia Tech Yellow Jackets administered their fourth consecutive defeat to the Georgetown (Washington) eleven here this afternoon, 19 to 7, in a game featured by the long gains of Brewster, Barron, Hunt and McDonough for the locals and the brilliant playing of Flavin, who went into the game in the second half for the visitors.

Tech scored touchdowns in each of the first two periods quickly after play started. Brewster crossing Georgetown's goal line for the first one, and McDonough counting the second one.

The Georgetown team stiffened with the entry of Flavin into the conflict in the third period, showing both improved offensive and defensive play, Flavin soon taking the pigskin around right end for his team's first and only touchdown. Tech also scored again in this period, McDonough carrying the ball over.

Castner and Wood in Kicking Duel As Army Ties Notre Dame, 0 to 0

West Point the Stronger Team in First Half, but Hoosiers Threaten in Later Periods—Army Successful in Intercepting Notre Dame's Frequent Attempts at Forward Passing.

By the Associated Press.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Nov. 11.—Notre Dame and Army battled to a scoreless tie before a crowd that filled the enlarged stands on the plains today. Both teams had chances to score, the Army in each of the first two periods and the Hoosiers in the last quarter.

The Cadets were on the offensive throughout the first half, but could not maintain a consistent attack. Notre Dame was stronger in the later two periods, but also lacked the punch to carry the ball over.

Except in the last period, Army forward passing was superior to the widely heralded air offensive of Notre Dame, White and Meyers, Army ends, intercepting many of the Hoosier tosses.

Notre Dame had the best chance to score. Starting from its own 42-yard line in the last quarter, the Hoosier machine, mixing short passes with a variety of quick plays, advanced down the field, making four first downs. Crowley, substituting for Layden at left halfback, was given the ball on the four-yard line, but tackled so severely that it bounced out of his grasp. Lawrence, substituting for Dodd, Army right halfback, fell on the ball. Notre Dame was penalized five yards and Wood punted out of danger.

Castner's Kick Fails.

Castner later tried a drop-kick from the 40-yard line, but failed. Garbisch, Army center, also failed when he tried a placement kick from a similar distance. As the game ended Wood attempted a drop kick from midfield for the Army, the whistle blowing as it touched the ground 10 yards short of the goal.

The long punting of Castner and Wood, the opposing fullbacks, was one of the game's features. There were several long range duels, but neither eleven gained an advtantage by this route.

There were few long runs in the game, Layden, Notre Dame, making the longest, 30 yeards, on a dash around right end.

"Peewee" Kaiser Boxes Draw With Harry Leonard

St. Louis Bantam Makes Favorable Impression in First Eastern Bout.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—Johnny "Peewee" Kaiser, bantamweight boxer from St. Louis, made his Eastern ring debut at the Commonwealth Sporting Club here tonight and celebrated the occasion by boxing a rattling fast draw with Harry Leonard, of New York and Philadelphia. The battle went the scheduled 12 rounds, but there never was a minute in which there wasn't action.

Kaiser started off exceptionally well. He proved himself to be a good two-handed hitter, and he earned a big lead in the earlier rounds by his cleverness and clean hitting. Especially at long range fighting, did the St. Louis lad show skill, and Leonard served as a target for his sharpshooting punches. As the battle progressed, however, the visitor seemed to tire, largely from his own fast pace, and from the sixth round Leonard began to even the score.

Plenty of infighting marked the closing half of the battle, and at this style of milling, the cleverness of the visitor availed him naught. Leonard was the stronger, and he gradually wore down his opponent at this style of battling, so that at the finish there was little to choose between them. There is no doubt as to which was the stronger at the end, but the St. Louis lad's great exhibition in the earlier rounds made it impossible to give him worse than an even break when it came to the judge's decision.

The bout was an interesting one from start to finish. Not once during the contest was there an idle moment, and the crowd was kept on edge throughout.

Matches scheduled for today are: Morning—Stratton and Hogan vs. Kamman and Fitzsimmons; Devoy and Suetter vs. McBride and Cornoyer. Afternoon—Mahon and Riley vs. Painter and Gradwohl; Daly and Horn vs. Durkin and Gerweiner; Kamman and Fitzsimmons vs. Haggemeyer and French.

PENN STATE WINNER OVER CARNEGIE TECH

By the Associated Press.
STATE COLLEGE, Pa., Nov. 11.—Penn State, displaying old-time form, defeated Carnegie Tech, 10 to 0, today, before a crowd breaking Penna day crowd of 15,000. The Tech team, which had tied Washington and Jefferson, made a game fight and twice in the first half got to State's 10-yard line but was held. The brilliant work of Harry Wilson of State on off tackle runs was the outstanding feature.

EAST ST. LOUIS HIGH DEFEATS BENTON, 27-12

East St. Louis High School defeated the Benton High School of Benton, Ill., yesterday in a bitterly fought game at Polo Park. The Benton eleven has been regarded as the champions of the western portion of the State of Illinois for the last three seasons. The final score was: East St. Louis 27, Benton 12.

Stanley and Ingrahm, the East Side halfbacks, were the individual stars of the game and scored all the points for the East Siders. Two of the scores resulted from onside kicks, a 60-yard run accounted for another while straight football caused the fourth. The Benton scoring came as a result of the old-style game.

NAVY WILL NOT PLAY GEORGIA TECH IN 1923

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—Negotiations for a football game in 1923 between the Navy and Georgia Tech at Atlanta were called off definitely in letters from Rear Admiral Wilson, Commandant of the Naval Academy, and Theodore Roosevelt, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, made public today by Senator Harris of Georgia. Admiral Wilson wrote that much as he would like to arrange the game, it would be impossible for the Navy team to go to Atlanta because it would interfere with the Cadets' school routine.

Missouri's Rally In Fourth Quarter Fails, Sooners Win

Tigers Uncover Brilliant Shifting Attack After Oklahoma Has Game Won.

By the Associated Press.
NORMAN, Ok., Nov. 11.—Despite a fighting comeback in the fourth quarter after the Sooners had gained a lead of three touchdowns, Missouri's Tigers were unable to catch up and went down to defeat here this afternoon by a score of 18 to 14. The game ended with the ball in Oklahoma's possession on Missouri's four-yard line, after the visitors had resisted three attempts to put it over.

The Oklahoma victory was marred by the collapse of a specially constructed stand on the north side of the field, in which seven persons were hurt. One unidentified boy, who was under the stand, suffered serious injuries. The uninjured spectators gathered on the side lines and watched the game through.

Fifteen thousand home-comers cheered the Sooner teamer to its first Missouri Valley victory, and hung on the minutes as the game drew to a close with the Tigers struggling to score the third touchdown which would mean victory.

The first period of the game saw Oklahoma bowed before the sweep of the Tigers' offensive which took the ball in a 50-yard march straight down the field to the Sooners' six-yard line, only to lose it on a fumble. But after it was punted out of danger, the Oklahoma goal was not again threatened in the three first periods.

In the second period Oklahoma, with a strong wind helping, scored twice, but both failed to kick goal. A brilliant broken-field run by Johnson, Oklahoma's quarterback, netted the first touchdown, and several long passes by Bristow put the ball over for the second.

The aerial route helped the Sooners to their third score in the third period. Short passes, followed by longer runs, carried the ball down the field and Johnson took it over the goal. Again Bowles failed to kick goal.

Missouri's Brave Effort.

Missouri opened up a brilliant, shifting attack to score her two touchdowns in the final period. Passes and end runs put the ball over twice and goals were kicked both times.

Bond carried the ball over for the first Missouri counter after a march down the field from Missouri's 40-yard line. Bond, Fowler, Knight

Alert Tigers Pounce On Loose Ball Twice To Score 10 Points

Gehrke's Muff of a Pass on 20-Yard Line Paves Way for Touchdown and Spaulding's Failure to Hold a Punt Is Followed by Baker's Field Goal.

By Heywood Broun.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 11.—Destiny wore orange and black today and Princeton won its first game in Cambridge since 1896. The score was 10 to 3. As a matter of fact, it was the first Princeton victory in the Stadium, which was not built at the time of the last Tiger triumph. And to complete the record it was the second triumph for Roper over the Haughton system.

Bill Roper might well write a companion book to the one by Percy Haughton. Its title would be "How to Watch the Ball."

The Tigers played their traditional game. They were not particularly dashing in attack, but they were eternally vigilant. They waited for a loose ball and Princeton seldom waits in vain. There is some hypnosis in their system which makes the pigskin uneasy. It has no intention of becoming loose, but sooner or later the glare of the Tigers tempted it to a spree which is almost invariably fatal.

It would have been entirely possible for Princeton to have won today's game without making a single touchdown. As a matter of fact it took two successful rushes to put over the touchdown.

Midway in the second period Harvard had the ball on her own 20-yard line. Gehrke fumbled a direct pass. The loose ball anticipated by the Princeton system had materialized. Indeed, it was even looser than usual. There was not a Harvard man within 15 yards of the bounding ball. Tigers, four of them, surrounded it. But each was eager.

Tigers Surround the Ball.

For the moment destiny got the go-by. It would have been easy for any one of them to have picked up the ball. If William H. Taft had happened to be on the field in Princeton uniform he would have had no difficulty at all in recovering the fumble and walking slowly and sedately across the line for a Princeton touchdown. But there was a lack of decision in the available Princeton players. Each one waited for somebody else to take action. And while they waited Harvard players were hurrying to the place of crisis from distant stations. Baker eventually ended the indecision by falling on the ball. It lay on Harvard's 17-yard line.

Destiny may have helped Princeton up to this point, but from now on Princeton did a good deal on its own account. Up to this time the Tigers had shown absolutely nothing on attack. Their first rush after the fumble was piled up for a gain of not more than a yard. Then came deception. Dinsmore, the tiny Tiger quarterback, who is only a second substitute, called for a fancy play. In execution it was by far the prettiest piece of football of the whole afternoon.

Princeton ought to have the initial credit of having put its best foot forward just at the moment when the demand was greatest. The play was a triple pass. The ball went from Cleaves to Crum to Gray. Harvard followed the first two stages of the hocus pocus intently, but it did not watch Gray sneaking around from his position at end. The Tiger claw was quicker than the Harvard eye. The legerdemain succeeded. Gray was away on his journey and it seemed as if he could not be stopped short of a touchdown. Owen, however, realized what was happening, belatedly, and managed to force the Princeton runner out of bounds on the two-yard line.

Crum Takes the Ball Over.

Having succeeded with stealth, the Tigers managed to drive home their points with sheer power. Crum made a frank and open assault on the Harvard line. It seemed as if his plunge was stopped, but he did no more than hesitate. There was a sort of hitch in his impulse, and then he went on and over the line. Dinsmore had the responsibility of making the goal after touchdown and shot over a pretty drop kick.

Harvard Scores First, but Fails to Profit by Its Opportunities

Harvard scored first, indeed, in the first period the Crimson loomed up triumphantly. The play was constantly in Princeton territory, but Harvard did not make enough of its opportunity.

All that came from any threats against the Tiger goal line was three points earned when Owen shot the ball between the posts and over the bar for a placement kick after a fair catch on Princeton's 34-yard line. There was nothing much to bother him but a slight angle. Buell was injured early in the second period and was forced to leave the game. This undoubtedly handicapped Harvard, but it cannot be said that the famous intellectual quarterback was anything like as effective as usual. He was far too conservative in his football philosophy. He seemed unwilling to take chances even when deep in Princeton territory. He made no forward passes until the situation so clearly indicated a play of this sort that Princeton was amply prepared, and on top of that Buell threw the ball without much control.

Hint at Break in Relations.

An incident which may have helped Princeton greatly occurred long before game-time. Speaking to a gathering of Princeton men on Friday night, Lothrop Withington, of the Harvard football committee, intimated that this might well be the last game between the Crimson and the Tigers. He suggested that Harvard in future might decide to save up all its resources for Yale. The intimation of a break in relation

Illinois Springs Biggest Surprise of Big 10 Season, Defeating Wisconsin, 3-0

Clark's Field Goal in Third Period Brings Only Points of Game —Iowa and Chicago Remain Unbeaten — Northwestern Gains First Victory Since 1920.

By the Associated Press.

MADISON, Wis., Nov. 11.—The University of of Illinois eleven, twice defeated in Western Conferene footfall games, today sprung the biggest surprise of the Big Ten campaign by defeating the powerful and heretofore unbeaten Wisconsin team 3 to 0. A home-coming crowd of 30,000 packed Randall Field.

The defeat virtually eliminated Wisconsin as a championship contender.

Illinois scored the only points of the game in the third period, when Rune Clark, quarterback of Zuppke's team, and a brother of "Potsy" Clark, an Illini star several years ago, sent a perfect drop kick between the posts from the 15-yard line. Illinois had carried the ball to the Wisconsin seven-yard line with forward passes, before Clark dropped back and booted the sphere between the uprights.

The Badgers had one chance to score, in the first period, when they carried the ball to the four-yard line. However, with three downs to make the distance, the Illinois line held and Wisconsin's chance to remain as an undefeated aggregation was gone.

Wisconsin used a baffling aerial attack in the first part of the second periods, but Zuppke's men solved this, and in the latter stages of the game they romped all over their opponents, making long gains by the use of forward passes.

Parkin Is Injured as Iowa Downs Gophers, 28-14.

By the Associated Press.

IOWA CITY, Ia., Nov. 11.—Fighting gamely against a team that was clearly superior in every respect, the University of Minnesota's football team went down before the Iowa's Big Ten champions, 28 to 14, on Iowa Field here this afternoon.

It was the fifth consecutive time the Hawkeyes have humbled the Gophers in their annual contest, and it put Iowa one step nearer the conference championship. Coach Jones' men started the scoring early in the first quarter, piling up two touchdowns against Minnesota's one, Locke and Parkin carrying the ball for long gains through the Minnesota line. Locke smashed the ball over from the nine-yard line for the first touchdown, after a long forward pass, and the stands went wild. Following the kick-off, Iowa went over for another score. Shuttleworth kicked both goals. Minnesota's score came following Iowa's failure to capture a punt that twisted from Parkin's hands within Iowa's 25-yard line. A completed forward pass and a line plunge tallied for the Gophers.

In the second period the Old Gold warriors pushel Locke over for two more touchdowns after the Iowa captain had hit the Minnesota line for 10 and 20 yard gains. Iowa played the third period with the most of the first team on the side lines. Parkin was injured, as was Rich, who took his place; Locke was taken out for a rest and many changes were made in the line.

Minnesota fought hard against the heavy odds of a 28 to 7 score and, in the final minutes of play on a forward pass following a series of long gains from their section of the field, put the ball over for the final score.

A home-coming crowd estimated at 25,000 witnessed the contest.

Pyott Stars as Chicago Defeats Ohio State, 14-9.

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 11.—Chicago defeated a revamped Ohio State eleven here today, 14 to 9, but only after a hard fight and after switching their much vaunted line-pounding game to open football. The Buckeyes led the Maroons, 3 to 0, during the entire first half, but fell before the open attack of the Chicago, in the third quarter, when forward passes and trick plays netted Coach Stagg's men two touchdowns.

After the Maroons had scored twice, Coach Wilce sent in a bevy of fresh players and a rally based mostly on a series of forward passes, netted his team a touchdown. Chicago then braced and the Buckeyes were unable to push the ball over again.

While the much shifted Ohio line held John Thomas, the Chicago fullback and battering ram, sufficiently to prevent a touchdown, they could not stop Pyott, his running mate. Pyott scored the Maroon's first touchdown early in the third quarter on a double pass and a swift run around left end. Only a moment later he tossed a forward pass on which Dickson netted 50 yards and the second touchdown. Pyott also drop-kicked both points after touchdown.

Ohio's first score came shortly after the opening of the first period. A Chicago fumble, recovered by the Buckeyes, gave them the ball inside the Chicago 30-yard line, and after several line plays, Workman booted a drop kick from his 30-yard line. The Ohio touchdown was made in the fourth period, after the Buckeyes had carried the ball from midfield. A series of forward passes in which Moorehead, substituting for Wilson at end, played a large part, carried the ball to the three-yard line and Blair bucked it over. Workman's attempt to drop-kick for an extra point was blocked.

The lineup:

Ohio.	Position.	Chicago.

Purple Gains 24-13 Victory Over Purdue.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Nov. 11.—Northwestern U. won its first Western Conference football game in two years today when it defeated Purdue at Evanston, 24 to 13. Northwestern won its last Conference game from Purdue in 1920, 14 to 0.

Purdue staged a sensational rally in the last few minutes of play and succeeded in pushing over a touchdown shortly before the whistle blew. Purdue scored in the first five minutes of play when Swank fell on Rembe's fumble behind the Northwestern goal. The final score was made when Praut circled left end from Northwestern's 15-yard line after a march down the field from Purdue's 25-yard line. Hal Ready kicked goal.

Princeton Takes Advantage Of Harvard's Fumbles to Win

whetted the ambition of the Tigers to make the last game a satisfactory one. They decided to give Harvard something by which to remember them. And yet the game was not as rough as many in which the two teams have engaged recently. A good many Harvard men were hurt, but from the top of the stadium these injuries seemed to be all in the game. If Dr. Richards, the Crimson doctor, is on a piecework basis he must have profited considerably by today's doings.

There was some little tendency in the Harvard stands to murmur over the slowness with which Princeton got off its plays late in the game. The Tigers were penalized several times for delays, but Harvard was not much more expeditious in snapping into action when the ball was in its possession. Frankly, it was not very good football on either side. Still, that of Princeton was good enough to win, which was eminently satisfactory to the Tigers.

An Impressive Ceremony.

There could be no complaints about the weather. A well-coached afternoon awaited the elevens. The day was warm and clear and the only complaint which might be made was that it hardly justified the annual display of furs. The afternoon fell on Armistice day and between the halves 21 guns were fired by the Harvard battery just outside the Stadium. Boom, boom, boom, they came with a curious moaning echo which ran around the top of the Stadium.

The 54,000 spectators stood still with heads bared. The roar of the cannon emphasized the quiet between the sound of the guns. All you could hear was the ticking of the telegraph instruments. Even the men who were sending running stories seemed impelled to whisper as they said, "They are all standing up. Twenty-one gune are being fired," and as the last echoing whine haunted the big stands for a moment and was gone there came a more intense hush. Somebody with a bugle began taps softly. It rose and fell mournfully and the 54,000 remembered back to days when football was a little thing and touchdowns did not matter. Why, in those days Princeton and Harvard did not even take the trouble to hate each other.

After the bugle the Harvard band blared out "The Star-Spangled Banner." An instant later the teams ran out onto the gridiron and again the game seemed important and all the young men on the field were ready to die for dear old Harvard or Princeton. Unfortunately the Crimsoin team did not seem to be capable of more useful sacrifices. Personally we find it distressing to record the fact that Harvard was beaten and still harder to add that Harvard was one-thought. We do not want to draw any comparison between the educational opportunities offered by the rival institutions, but the barb remains that this afternoon Princeton was the smarter team. They won their victory with very limited material. Harvard left the gridiron with numberless uncashed opportunities in its pocket. And for the first time in a good many years a Harvard team fumbled atrociously and earned numberless penalties which hurt.

Too Much Debate on Signals.

The team fought hard, but it looked like a beaten team all through the second half. There was no winning glamor about it. The line played excellently on the defensive. Again and again Harvard forwards sifted through and spilled Princeton plays before they were fairly started. But when Harvard had the ball indecision seemed to seize upon the backfield. There was far too much debate about the signals.

Having taken a lead in the first half, Princeton proceeded to draw ahead. Early in the third period Cleaves punted to Spalding. The Tiger ends did not cover the kick closely and the Harvard quarterback was anxious to be off again. He tried to start before the ball was fairly in his arms, and made a bad muff. Once again destiny had thrown a loose ball to the Tigers. They scampered after it like kittens and Stout recovered it for Princeton on Harvard's 30-yard line. Two rushes gained only two yards, and a forward pass was incomplete, but Baker dropped back and booted a pretty field goal.

Owen's Misfortune.

Harvard had one moment when victory seemed possible, even after the Tiger touchdown. It came late in the first half. From about midfield Spalding shot a forward pass to Owen. It was not a long toss, and there was a Tiger tackler almost on top of the Harvard back, but Owen shook him off. Suddenly he reversed his field and it looked as if he would get clear.

Four Princeton men leaped at him, but Owen shook them off. On he went running hard, but a little blindly. With the goal line only 22 yards away, he crashed into one of his own men, who was clearing a path for him. Down went Owen, and before he could scramble up, Dinsmore was on top of him and pinning him down. If a hero must be picked out of the game, it might well be this little Tiger quarterback, who was hardly thought of as a possibility at the beginning of the year.

Late in the game Harvard began to throw forward passes, long ones and wild ones. Owen, standing almost on his own goal line, threw the ball 35 yards into the arms of Fitts, but the Harvard player could not get clear, and was downed almost at the point where he made the catch. A few moments later the game ended.

If the spectator happens to be a Princeton rooter, the picture which he takes away from the game will be that of the Tiger rooters swarming down from the stands wild and hilarious at the end of the game. The Harvard partisan is more likely to think of the beginning of the second half, with Charlie Buell limping from the bench to give his teammates advice and encouragement, which is all that is left for him to give. And then one may remember neither incident and come away thinking only of the moaning sound which haunted the stadium as the last gun died away.

Alton Trims Webster.

Alton High School defeated the Webster Groves eleven yesterday at Alton by a 25-0 score. Webster succeeded in making first down on two occasions by means of forward passes, but was helpless during the rest of the contest. Alton employed an open game and the play of Cantrill, Bell and Bowers, who registered the Alton scores, was outstanding.

Kickers Not Given Enough Attention, Walter Camp Says

Man Who Knows How to Place His Punts Is Valuable Asset to Eleven.

By Walter Camp.

(Copyright, 1922.)

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—The kicking game is neglected by many football coaching staffs of today. This is a phase of the great gridiron sport which counts more than the average man in the stand believes. The trend of play this season shows that the running game has so dwarfed the kicking game in the minds of many that the finer points of punting, drop and place kicking have been lost sight of.

Perhaps as good an illustration of this as any is to be found in comments on recent games describing the punting as "fine," "excellent," "effective." Yet the punts in questions in many cases went directly across the goal line and permitted the defenders of the goal to come out and commence their scrimmage at the 20-yard line.

Contrast this with the kicking done by Kipke in the Michigan-Ohio State game, where repeatedly this man cut the side lines with his kicks, and some of them crossed within the five-yard line. A kick of this kind is worth 15 yards over the one that crosses the goal line. In addition it has a psychological effect in that it forces the player who kicks in return to stand behind his own goal line.

Any team which succeeded in gaining 15 yards on three forward passes would be praised highly for the work and yet each one of these kicks of Kipke's, when properly placed, gained that distance for the kicker's side.

Take the case of kicks which are made from back in the territory of the kicker's side. The man who can so place his kicks as to cross the side lines with them at the extreme of the kick always prevents any danger of a run-back.

The records show that even in games with big teams where the men are supposed to be excellent tacklers, it often happens that a caught punt may result in a very long run, or even in exceptional instances in a touchdown. This is one phase of the matter that, while it may be understood, is certainly not put in practice by the majority of punters.

The punter who has nerve and steadiness can hold back his kick slightly in point of time when the opposing line is well blocked or is not hurrying him particularly. A cool, collected kicker knows full well that every fraction of a second that he can delay his punt means just so many added feet or yards that his ends and one tackle can go down the field to nail the runner. A first-class fullback can kick quickly or slowly. He can put his kicks high with the wind or low into it, and the lineman on a team who undertsands blocking can often delay the charge of the opponents quite a bit and give the kicker a pause in which to let his ends sail down the field. These points seldom receive sufficient consideration and practice.

There is another phase of this kicking game that should be understood. An expert with a side swing can punt around a man who is coming at him. We see very few punters nowadays who are expert in this, but a good man with a sidestep can do it with comparative ease.

We do not see as much done with the punters as should be done in teaching them to kick "ugly kicks"; that is, those that are extremely hard to handle. There are men who can kick a ball that gives a back considerable concern, and a man who can do this is extremely valuable to any team. One single muff out of a dozen kicks may mean a touchdown, even from midfield. There are plenty of these in the records.

Soldan Barely Defeats Yeatman; Cleveland Trounces McKinley

North Side Eleven Holds West Enders to 7 to 0 Score While Carondelet Machine Triumphs 25 to 13 — Jimmy Cook's Team Goes In to Tie for First Place.

Soldan High School, by defeating the Yeatman Hight eleven 7 to 0 yesterday at High School Field, entered into a tie for the Interscholastic League leadership with Central, both the leaders having two victories and no defeats. Cleveland triumphed over McKinley, 25 to 13.

The opening game was hard fought. Yeatman from the start of the game adopted a defensive style of play and so close was its defense that but for the fact that a North Side flank guardian attempted to diagnose a Soldan play on his 15-yard line and made a last second shift, leaving a hole through which Capt. Beryl Meston plunged for a touchdown, the game would have ended without a score.

The Brown and Gold warriors of Coach Jimmie Cook advanced the ball on several occasions to within the shadow of the Yeatman goal, only to be resisted by a defense which would not budge. Twice the Soldan tide was stemmed on Yeatman's 3-yard line.

Penalty Hurts Yeatman.

Yeatman encountered hard luck in the opening period. A 15-yard penalty was assessed against Hill's gang on the first play after the kick-off. This forced Yeatman to abandon whatever thoughts of offensive play they possessed. From that point save for the occasional deep cuts through tackle by Charley Hannegan, the Yellow and Blue game consisted of kicking out of danger and keeping the surging Soldan horde from crossing the goal line for more than the single score.

The aerial game of Soldan was reduced to a minimum by the excellent work of the Yeatman flank men, and the sole consistent ground gainer of the machine was Capt. Meston who made good yardage on off tackle and end plays. The kicking of Hugh Meyers of Soldan played a large factor in the final result of the game as his duel with Nichols of Yeatman resulted in a gain for the West Enders on every exchange. Capt. Meston attempted two kicks from placement after the Soldan backs failed to gain by means of line plunges, but both of the kicks were wide of the mark.

The lineups:

Fumbling Costly to McKinley.

The second game as compared with the opener was a carnival of scoring. Six touchdowns were registered. The outstanding cause of the McKinley defeat was the inability of the Crimson to hold the ball during vital plays. The fumbling of the McKinleyites was terrible. Fumbling Fever hit Captain Bokern during the first minute of play. A boot from Starkloff of Cleveland nestled in the arms of Bokern, but he refused to hold on and Eddie Plank of Carondelet darted in and recovered the oval and raced 40 yards for a touchdown. Immediately after this play Heffern tossed a pretty forward pass to Syberg, who placed the ball on the Cleveland's 12-yard mark. Again the fever hit the Crimson and again "Wessel" Plank scooped it up. This time he cavorted 60 yards up the field before being downed. Another Cleveland touchdown was registered then by means of line plays, Konzleman taking the ball across.

In the second quarter McKinley employed an aerial game with good effect. Heffern tossed several perfect passes to his wing men until the ball was on the Cleveland four-yard line, and he then took it over on a line plunge. Quarterback Holleran spilled the beans by dropping a punt, which gave Cleveland the ball on the Crimson 20 mark. A series of line bucks put the ball in position for Pickering to score the next touchdown for Cleveland.

Cleveland was held scoreless in the third quarter, while McKinley added a touchdown, largely through the work of the Crimson ace, Bill Heffern, who gained approximately 70 yards during the period.

Pickering Makes Long Run.

The final score of the game resulted from a 45-yard run through a broken field, by Pickering, the Cleveland quarterback. McKinley threw a scare into the South Siders during the last few minutes of play by completing three forward passes for a total gain of 50 yards, but the game ended as the last pass was completed with the ball on the Cleveland five-yard line.

The lineups:

LIVELY BALL WILL STAY, JOHN HEYDLER ASSERTS

John Heydler, who is head of the National League, says the lively ball will stay in the game. Only a year ago the heads of the major leagues and the owners were strictly denying the existence of a lively base ball, claiming the heavy hitting was due to improvement in batting and poor pitching. Now they change their front, admit they are using lively balls and say they intend to keep on using the same kind.

According to Heydler, the club owners prefer the lively ball. He also says the public likes the increased hitting. More than 1000 home runs were driven out in the major leagues this year. Heydler says it peps up base ball and the people like it much better.

This means that the stolen base, the sacrifice, and the squeeze play are going to be on a continued vacation.

Tourney for 18.2 Billiard Crown Opens Tomorrow

Jake Schaefer, Champion, to Meet Hagenlacher of Germany in Opening Match.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—Why should Jake Schaefer be presented with a setup for his opening match in the international 18.2 balkline professional billiard championship?

That was the question several of the contestants propounded to the officials yesterday. They made no secret of their opinion that Erich Hagenlacher, the German champion, was not likely to extend the champion, who has twice defeated Willie Hoppe. When challenged to produce a volunteer to face Schaefer in the opening contest their opposition faded away. Therefore it was determined that the original schedule stands, the young American and the German leading off at the Hotel Pennsylvania Monday night in the first of the 500-point games.

Welker Cochran, the American, and Roger Conti, champion of France, who were among those who resented a favorable start for Schaefer, remain as the pair that will play in the first of the matinee matches at 2:30 on Tuesday afternoon. Hoppe, the dethroned champion, holds his place as the competitor against Edouard Horemans, the Belgian title holder, on Tuesday night.

One of those who disputed the contention that Schaefer was likely to get off to an easy start was Albert G. Cutler, who is to act as referee. In commenting upon the German, who has prepared for the tournament in Philadelphia, he said: "I think Hagenlacher, the Central Europe champion at 18.2 balkline billiards, is a great player. He may not win the international, but he will surely make a good showing. His dead draw is wonderful as well as his judgment of distance and landing on the second ball. Also his open-table play is very strong. He can masse nearly as well with his left hand as with his right."

It developed at the conference yesterday that both Schaefer and Hoppe are averse to matinee contests. The other contestants, however, are determined that they will force the issue of each of the players taking his turn for his share of the afternoon sessions at the table, or something in the nature of a protest will be forthcoming to add excitement to the tournament.

YALE SUBSTITUTES RUN OVER MARYLAND, 45-3; FORWARD PASSES USED

By the Associated Press.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 11.—With every regular at Cambridge, the Yale second and third string men swamped Maryland, 45 to 3, by use of forward passes, in the Yale Bowl today.

Maryland started with a dash and had scored a drop kick within four minutes. Pollock had recovered Bexley's punt, which had hit a Yale player. Maryland made two first downs and, after being stopped on the 10-yard line, Pollock went back 10 yards and booted the ball over the bar. Yale braced and Acting Captain Becket made a 20-yard drop kick, tieing the score.

Kelley, who replaced Becket at quarterback, received a pass from Neale, which gave the Yale the ball on Maryland's 18-yard line. Kelley passed to Neale, who was tackled on the eight-yard line. Two plunges by Cochrane gave Yale her first touchdown. Maryland's defense cracked and Yale tallied almost at will for the rest of the game. All six Yale touchdowns came as a direct result of sensational passing. Mac Aldrich, last year's All-American halfback, was in charge of the Yale team.

Nebraska Displays Power In Humbling Kansas, 28 to 0; 17,000 Persons See Contest

Jayhawkers Put Up Stiff Battle in Three Quarters, but Weaken in Fourth When Cornhuskers Score 19 of Their Points —Weller Plays Fine Game for Victors.

LAWRENCE, Kan., Nov. 11.—Nebraska University still "Owns the Valley." Her football team demonstrated itself to be in a class alone in the conference by adminstering a defeat to the Kansas Jayhawkers here this afternoon, 28 to 0.

To Kansas, who fought a game fight, goes the solace of holding a superior team to a smaller score than has any team in the Missouri Valley to date this season.

A homecoming crowd estimated at 17,000 saw the battling Jayhawkers go down before the Cornhuskers and Kansas fans for the first time saw a Jayhawk football team meet defeat on its new stadium field. Intermittent hard showers fell through three quarters of the battle, but luckily the heavy turf of the new field did away with mud, although the field and ball became slippery.

Kansas Weakens in Fourth.

For three quarters the Kansans held the Cornhuskers in check, but the last period saw the Jayhawkers, worn out and with not sufficient good substitute material to strengthen up the weakening spots, fail completely to check the onrushing foe, who put over three touchdowns and one extra point for a total of 19 points in that period.

Kansas battled Nebraska on fairly even terms the first two periods, although the Huskers gathered in nine points in the first half. The first Nebraska score came when Weller broke through and blocked McAdams behind the Kansas goal line. The ball rolled back behind the Kansas goal and hit the wire fence. Weller recovered the ball, but a prearranged ground rule provided that the ball going into the fence or stands should become a safety and allowed the Cornhuskers two points only.

Weller, the giant tackle, again figured in the next Nebraska score when he charged through and batted a forward pass that Wilson, Kansas quarterback, was making. The ball bounded into the arms of Scherer, Husker right end, and he ran unmolested 40 yards to a touchdown. H. Dewitz kicked goal and that ended the scoring for the half.

That Kansas played well in this half is shown by the fact that both teams made only four first downs in that time, each completed one forward pass for almost equal yardage, and Kansas made 39 yards from scrimmage to 62 for Nebraska. Each team made two fumbles also in the first half.

Weller was perhaps the outstanding man of the Nebraska team. And Wenke was not far behind. It was the holes opened by the veteran tackles that gave the Nebraska backs their chance to gain ground.

Lonberg at center played a whale of a game for Kansas, as did Capt. Higgins at guard.

McAdams, star half, was obviously covered with extra care and failed to get much yardage, although his punting was good. Spurgeon proved the best Kansas ball lugger and most of the Jakhawker yardage came through him.

Kansas Aggies Pass Way to Victory Over Ames.

MANHATTAN, Kan., Nov. 11.—More than 2000 persons hovered under umbrellas and in the grand stand at Ahearn Field this afternoon while the Kansas Aggies administered a 12-to-2 defeat to Ames. A drizzling rain was falling when the two teams took the field and the gridiron resembled a swimming pool.

The Kansans scored in the first quarter when Clements went over for a touchdown. A pass, Stark to Munn, over the heads of the two teams, gave the Wildcats their second touchdown. Neither goal was kicked.

Swarts, general of Coach Bachman's organization, started the game with a series of line bucks, but when he found forward passes successful, even with a wet ball, he changed his style of play. The Aggies completed nine passes for a total of 120 yards. Four passes were incomplete and four Ames passes were intercepted.

The Ames eleven completed four passes for 45 yards, 15 of their passes were incomplete and they intercepted two Aggie passes. The second and third periods were for the most part punting duels between Capt. Wolters of Ames and Bradley and Stark of the Aggies. Only once did the Cyclones get close enough to the Kansas Aggie line to threaten a touchdown. The visitors completed two long passes for nearly 35 yards, but Bachman's cohorts held them for four downs on the Kansas five-yard line.

Just before the game ended Webber, Kansas Aggie left end, intercepted an Ames pass and ran to the one-yard line. The game ended before the purple warriors had a chance to get into position for another play.

The line-up:

Kansas Aggies (12).	Position.	Iowa State Col. (2).
Munn	Right end	Riggs
Hall	Right tackle	Eakins
Loewell	Right guard	Berger
Marter	Center	Longstreet
Hahn (c.)	Left guard	Anderson
Stark	Left half	Quinn
Bradley	Right half	Roberts
Clements	Fullback	Young

Summary: Touchdowns—Munn, Clements. First downs—Aggies, 8; Ames, 5. Forward passes (attempted)—Aggies, 13; Ames, 9. Passes completed—Aggies, 9 for 120 yards; Ames, 4 for 45 yards.

Boelter Stars as Drake Beats Colorado Aggies.

DES MOINES, Ia., Nov. 11.—In a game featured by offensive play, Drake University defeated the Colorado Aggies, 19 to 6, here this afternoon.

Drake took the ball on the kick-off and scored without losing it, early in the first period. Colorado scored its touchdown a few minutes later on straight football, with Anderson and Hauser carrying the ball. Drake scored again in the second period on forward passes and brilliant runs by Boelter.

In the second half, Colorado was on the defensive most of the time and was able to gain on forward passes only. Drake held them for downs on the 10-yard line in the fourth period.

Drake scored its final touchdown on a brilliant end run of 20 yards by Boelter.

The game was played in a drizzling rain.

SYRACUSE ELEVEN IS WINNER IN CONTEST WITH CANADIANS, 32-0

By the Associated Press.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Nov. 11.—American football proved its superiority over Canadian rugby here this afternoon, Syracuse University winning its second annual international gridiron contest against McGill, 32 to 0. Although it was understood that American rules would govern the game, the officials were very lenient and allowed the Montreal players great freedom in their use of the lateral forward pass.

Passes of that nature, sometimes progressing through the hands of seven different McGill players on a wide flank dash, added a spectacular element to the international struggle, and although most of them were technically illegal, all were allowed.

Syracuse, mixing all of the offensive threats known to American football, overwhelmed the Canadian team, scoring in the first four minutes of play. Keen tackling by the McGill players kept their defeat from becoming a rout.

Pittsburg made its score in the first period, whereas the Red and Blue was unable to get through until the fourth period. Hammer fell down on the placement kick and the game went to Pittsburg by that one point.

Ames Harriers Easy Winners

Capture Valley Cross-Country Title for Third Straight Time.

For the third time in three successive years, the Iowa State College (Ames) cross-country team yesterday won the Missouri Valley meet at Washington University. Capt. Henre of the Kansas Aggies team finished first, but Ames runners came in second, third, sixth, seventh and eleventh. Their score was 29, as compared with 75 for their closest competitor, Kansas. The points are awarded in such manner that the winning team has the lowest score.

Although Ames easily won the team trophy, there was a spirited finish in which six runners were grouped within one hundred yards. The course was five miles long, beginning at Francis Field, winding through Forest Park and finishing at Francis Field.

Neither Drake, Grinnel nor Oklahoma, all members of the conference, were represented. Capt. Paul Rathburn, the star runner for Ames, did not compete. He is recovering from recent injury.

The first Washington University runner to finish was Capps. He gained eighth place, and Tremlett, Washington, was ninth.

The point score was as follows: Ames 29, Kansas 75, Missouri 92, Kansas Aggies 93, Washington 96, Nebraska 102.

RICE OWLS WIN FIRST CONFERENCE VICTORY

By the Associated Press.

HOUSTON, Tex., Nov. 11.—The Rice Owls won their first Conference victory Saturday, running rings around the Arkansas Razorbacks on a rain-drenched field and piling up a 31-to-7 score. Broken field running by Swartz and Wilford accounted for most of Rice's gains.

Arkansas held the fast Owls to a single touchdown in the first half and early in the third period forged ahead when Rogers plunged over for a touchdown. Fulbright's kick for goal was blocked, but Rice was declared offside and the point was given to Arkansas. Immediately afterward, Wilford returned the Arkansas kickoff 35 yards. Pitzer and other Rice backs advanced the ball to the 22-yard line and Wilford sidestepped through right end for another Owl score.

In the last quarter the Owls ran wild, Simpson scoring one touchdown and McGee chalking up two more. McGee pulled off sensational runs for his 12 points, circling left end for 25 yards on one play and receiving a 15-yard pass from Swartz for the final tally of the game.

CONNIE LOST TEMPER OVER HURLER'S DUMBNESS

Connie Mack seldom loses his temper. But he did once last spring to the great amusement of his players A pitcher named Sullivan was on the mound. A runner was on third when the batter hit to short. The ball was snapped to Cy Perkins who ran the runner back toward the bag. In the jumble the runner slipped past Perkins and scored, for the pitcher had not gone to cover the plate.

"Come in here," cried Connie. "Come in here and turn in your uniform. For 30 years I have been looking for a pitcher as dumb as you are. Come in here and get ready to take a train ride."

In extent of playing field, when the improvements are completed, th Cubs Park will be exceeded only by Braves Field in Boston and Forbes Field in Pittsburg. The new Yankee stadium in New York will be smaller as far as the outfield is concerned.

DALLAS SHOWS STRONG DEFENSE, HOLDS ST. L. U. TO TWO TOUCHDOWNS

midfield, they could not again approach the Texas posts until late in this third period. Then, fourth down and the goal-line to go, they fell short by less than a foot and Schneider who, in the first half, had punted 60 yards on the carry, kicked out of danger for the moment.

Billiken Offense Improves.

With an attack which now was hitting on all cylinders, the Billikens started again. Eggler took the punt and ran to the 18-yard line, straight-arming several would-be tacklers on his merry way. McConachie added four more and McKenzie got three, Hannegan, head down, plowing to the four-yard mark before being stopped. O'Leary replaced McKenzie and carried the ball on the first play but failed to gain. Thereupon, Eggler shot a forward pass to McConachie who ran over the line for the second touchdown. Eggler was called upon to make the extra point which he did with a drop-kick.

Father Time interfered greatly with the use of numbers by the St. Louis players. In the first half all was well, but in the fourth quarter the shades of night had fallen fast and no one without a powerful telescope could have pierced the low visibility to tell which team had the ball.

For St. Louis Schaeffering, Eggler and McConachie starred on the offense. On the defense the whole team was good as it has been all season. Such gains as the Texans made were few and far between and they kicked on every opportunity. Now and then a visitor would actually make five or six yards on a play, but his teammates, properly shocked at such temerity, would not follow up the advantage thus gained.

A splendid attraction is booked for next week, when St. Louis will engage the husky South Dakota University team.

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, Nov. 11.—Baylor University proved unequal to the task of stopping Boston College in today's football game, and was defeated by a score of 33 to 0. BUCKNELL VICTORIOUS OVER LEHIGH, 14 TO 0

By the Associated Press.

BETHLEHEM, Pa., Nov. 11.—Two touchdowns, one due indirectly to repeated offside penalties in the early part of the game, gave Bucknell a 14-to-0 victory over Lehigh University today. Throughout the first half Lehigh was on the defensive with the ball hovering near its goal post. Exchange of punts lost ground repeatedly, calling for all the strength of the Lehigh team to halt the aggressiveness of Bucknell.

At the start of the third quarter, however, Lehigh launched a determined offensive, but it was stopped by Bucknell, when the goal posts of the latter were in striking distance. In the last period, Julian picked up a fumbled forward pass and raced 85 yards for the second touchdown.

WHY PITCHERS LIKE TO SEE EVANS BEHIND BAT

Hesitency on the part of umpires to call a third strike caused many of the wrangles the past season. An umpire hates to call the third one, and unless a pitcher cuts the plate he is likely to find the umpire calling it a ball.

Pitchers rarely cut the plate. They work for the corners. The umpire gives them the corner until the batsman has two strikes, and then the umpire calls the same "corner" ball bad.

Bill Evans "gives" the pitcher the corner after he has two strikes on a batter, and for this reason pitchers would sooner see Evans behind the plate than any man in the league.

America Easily Leads World at Developing Young Champions

Extreme Youth of Some of Our Titleholders Is Strongest Indication That U. S. Will Be Supreme in Sport in Future, Robert Edgren Writes.

By Robert Edgren.

(Copyright, 1922.)

The strongest indication that America will be supreme in sport in the future is the extreme youth of some of our greatest champions. This is especially true of the girls who have been astonishing the world of amateur sport in the past year or two. Some of the performances of young ladies of 14, 15 and 16 have outclassed any feats of older and more experienced competitors.

For instance, there is Miss Helen Wills, the 16-year-old California girl, who has been upsetting the women's tennis firmament by suddenly popping out as the brightest star in all its galaxy.

Miss Wills is picked by all the experts in tennis as a coming champion of champions. Without doubt in another year she will eclipse the great French champion, Mlle. Lenglen, as she will surely eclipse Mrs. Mallory and other American racquet experts.

Last year, when Miss Wills was 15 and was playing at home as a member of the Girls' Tennis Club of Berkeley, Cal., she won the Girls' National Tennis Championship. She beat Miss Virginia Carpenter of Philadelphia in straight sets, 6—3, 6—3.

Miss Wills Masters Every Stroke.

This year, on her second trip East, she was runner up to Mrs. Mallory in the national championships. When she travels she is always chaperoned by her mother.

Helen is a big girl for her age, big limbed and powerful. She has a wrist that a man could be proud of. Yet she is only 16 and looks and dresses the part of a 16-year-old school girl. She wears a middy blouse, short skirt, white stockings, white shoes and a large white eyeshade that she designed and made herself, and which she looks upon with the pride of an inventor.

Miss Wills' technique is superior to that of any other girl or woman player. She is mastering every stroke. Her work is nearly faultless in her baseline game, net and overhead as well as in ground strokes. Her technique is superior to that of Mrs. Mallory, who has mastered only a strong baseline game. She should win from Mrs. Mallory when they meet again, as she has all the shots.

There is only one other player like her, and that is Miss Mary K. Browne of California, who taught her the game.

Miss Collett a Long Driver.

Another remarkable girl athlete is Miss Glenna Collett, the national woman golf champion. Miss Collett was born at Providence, R. I. She is now 19. Her parents were both athletic, and they encouraged Glenna's first interest in sport. When she was a small girl she played a great deal of tennis, but as she grew taller she turned to golf.

Her first tournament was at Apawamis in 1919. A curious thing about this is that two other famous new champions also played their first tournament in that well known New York State course, Jess Sweetser, the national amateur champion, and Gene Sarazen, the national open champion.

Miss Collett is five feet eight inches tall, well built and powerful. She is the longest woman driver in the United States, and for that matter in the world. She drives a longer ball than Miss Cecil Leitch of England, who has achieved much fame with her golf wallop.

Last year Miss Leitch was at Hollywood, N. J., and Miss Collett outdrove her all through the Women's National Championship Tournament. That she plays a corking game can be seen from the fact that she won the medal score again this year, when she also won the championship by beating Mrs. Cavin in the final match.

Shooting from the men's tees her scores average from 78 to 82 on hard courses. Her rise to fame within 12 months has been so sensational that it seems likely she will establish a lot of new course records for women to shoot at.

Swimming the Girls' Star Sport.

In some of the other sports our new girl champions are even younger. Especially in swimming. Perhaps this is because swimming is a natural sport, requiring little training or coaching, and depending very much upon the youthful swimmer's inclination to play in the water instead of on dry land.

The youngest member of the American Olympic games team at Amsterdam a couple of years ago was Miss Aileen Riggin of New York. Aileen was only 14.

But she started her career in the water at the age of 6, in Manila Bay, where she learned to swim like a duck. Her father was a paymaster in the U. S. navy. She swam in several salt seas of the Orient up to the time she was 10, and picked up a few tricks of fancy diving.

Returning to this country after going around the world with her family, Aileen joined the Women's Swimming Association of New York and was coached by L. de B. Handley, himself a famous swimmer. Miss Riggin had been through a year's training as a ballet dancer, but swimming interested her more than twirling, as soon all her spare time was spent in the water.

Miss Bauer Beats Men's Records.

Aileen won the trick diving contests at the Olympics with Miss Wainwright, and her performances were up to the standards established by the men in similar competitions. At home she won the Middle Atlantic and Metropolitan championships in diving, and many championships in swimming. Her swimming records at the age of 13 were astonishing, and she is one of the best girl swimmers in the country today.

Another great swimmer is Miss Sybil Bauer of the Illinois A. C., who has made scores of records, and lately has been busy beating the world's best made by men swimmers. She is the only woman athlete who has succeeded in doing this.

On a recent trip to Bermuda Miss Bauer performed one of the greatest feats ever recorded in amateur sports. She broke her own world's record for women in the 440-yard backstroke race by the great margin of 13 4-5s., covering the distance in the remarkable time of 6m. 24 4-5s. This also broke the world's record held by Harold Kruger of Honolulu, long a famous swimmer and breaker of world's records, by a margin of 3 1-5s.

The extraordinary speed made by Miss Bauer swimming on her back, and without the advantage of a plunging start, can be seen from the fact that the fastest quarter ever covered by Miss Ethelda Bliebtrey, Olympic champion, free style, was only four seconds faster.

Last July Miss Bauer won several national championships at Manhattan Beach and broke seven world's records at different distances, swimming in her favorite style.

Puppy Inspired Miss Wainwright.

Helen Wainwright, 15-year-old swimming marvel and winner in the Olympic games, comes from Corona, New York. She has won 15 championships.

She says she learned to swim when she was almost a baby. She saw a puppy dog thrown into the water. It swam out.

Miss Helen thought she ought to be able to do as well, and began experimenting. Result, in a few years she began breaking world's records.

When she was only 13 she swam a hundred yards in 1m. 14s. But that was nothing. One day when Helen was 16 she broke the women's records for one mile, the half mile, 1000 yards, 1320 yards, and 1500 yards, incidentally defeating Miss Hilda James of England, another young girl of only 17.

One of the greatest girl swimmers in the world is Gertrude Ederle, now 17 years old, who started paddling around when she was only nine.

Miss Ederle never trains. She just swims when she feels like going swimming. She eats whatever she wants. But she holds a lot of corking records. Her mark for 200 yards, 3:58 2-5 cut 10 and a fifth seconds off the old mark. She swam 400 yards in 5m. 22 2-5s., where the old record was 6m. 02 2-5s. Her 400 meter record was 22 1-5s. below the old mark, her quarter mile in 5.54 3-5s cut 21s off of the best previous performance for her sex and at 500 yards Miss Ederle smashed the former record, finishing in 6m. 45 1-5s.

There are girl athletes in many other branches of sport, playing basketball, skating, running, jumping and throwing weights in field days, racing boats, track and field sports are cutting into dancing, and the ice cream and chocolate drop business seems to be in for an awful drop.

W. & J. Eleven Downs Wabash in Sectional Battle

Aul's 55-Yard Run Gives Little Giants Score — Final Count 32 to 6.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Pa., Nov. 11.—The little Giants from Wabash College, tackling savagely and fighting every minute, made a game attempt today to stop the victorious rush of the Washington and Jefferson eleven—and failed. Coach Neale's powerful and undefeated machine battered its way to a 32-to-6 victory.

The Wabash touchdown, made in the final period when Aul recovered a fumble and sprinted 55 yards, won the fighting visitors an ovation from the W. and J. stands. It was the spectacular play of the game.

The Presidents were faster, more powerful and had a more diversified attack. A delayed drive through the line was the only play that gained ground for Wabash.

In the first period, a forward pass put the ball on the Wabash one-yard line and Futhey went over. In the second quarter, Spillers scored on a 35-yard run and Erickson made one, after a Wabash fumble had been recovered by Neale's men. In the third period two severe penalties stopped W. and J. when it threatened to score.

Aiken dove over the line for a touchdown in the fourth period. When W. and J. started to march toward another score, a fumble gave Aul his chance.

In the closing minutes, Futhey returned the compliment by grabbing a Wabash pass and touching the ball after a 45 hard sprint. Three of five attempts to score points after touchdowns for W. and J. were blocked, and Wabash also failed on its attempt.

GALLAGHER AND GRAESSLE WILL BOWL IN FINAL

Fred Graessle and J. M. Gallagher bowled into the final of the open individual elimination tournament on the Washington alleys last night. Gallagher defeated Howard Smith in the semifinals, while Graessle trimmed Henry Rose. Gallagher shot in great form, bowling four games above the double century mark to total 831 for an average of 207 3-4. Smith averaged 199 2-4. Gallagher had only one open frame, a miss of the 10 pin in the seventh frame of the third game. Smith also had only one error. Gallagher drew only one split, while Smith drew three in the first game and three in the fourth. Gallagher had games of 202, 205, 222 and 202, and Smith registered 181, 215, 213 and 189.

Graessle won his match from Rose in four games. He totaled 757, for an average of 189 1-4, while Rose rolled 730 for an average of 182 2-4. Graessle bowled games of 179, 169, 205 and 204, while Rose shoot games of 166, 194, 182 and 188.

Gallagher and Graessle will bowl for the championship tonight. The match will be the best four out of seven games.

Triple A Courts Ready.

Despite the late season the tennis courts at the Triple A courts are available for use today. During recent years the mild weather has enabled players to continue playing as late as December.

The new surface courts at Triple A are proving very popular and may be used very soon after a rain and during most of the year. The surface is of roofing material painted green, with white lines to mark the outline of the playing court.

Chaminade Defeats Ranken.

Exterminator Is Beaten by Stupid Ride of Marinelli

America's Cup Horse Finished Third in Running of Pimlico Cup Race.

CAPT. ALCOCK WINNER

Event Is Worth $7100 to Winner — Paul Jones Captures Second Place.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PIMLICO, Md., Nov. 11.—Exterminator, through the consummately stupid handling of one Bennie Marinelli, today lost the chance to win the Pimlico cup for the fourth time and with it the chance to lead the winning horses on the American turf.

Raced to pieces with Exodus in the first mile and a quarter, the great American cup horse finished actually down at the sixteenth pole, while Capt. Alcock, winner of the Bowie handicap on Tuesday, and Paul Jones, which won a Kentucky Derby and a Suburban handicap, fought it out at the finish. Capt. Alcock won by two legnths.

It is hard, without any desire to detract from good horses or a stirring race, to see as good a horse beaten through no fault of his own. Exterminator gave of his best as far as he could go—no horse could do more.

The Pimlico cup was a race well up to the traditions of a fixture that has become the real distance classic of the East, run in a setting and to enthusiasm that matched even the Kentucky Derby.

Five Horses Start in Race.

Five horses—Capt. Alcock, Exodus, Lady Emmeline, Paul Jones and Exterminator—paraded to the post and as they passed down the track to the quarter pole cheers and applause came from the stands for only one horse—Exterminator. Because of the illness of Albert Johnson, Gene Wayland was forced to engage a new rider—and he chose Marinelli.

After a delay of less than a minute at the post they were away to a good start. Exodus went right to the front and, to the surprise of all, Exterminator with him. Head and head they stepped, with Exodus on the rail and Exterminator on the outside, 10, 15, 20 lengths ahead of the field. They ran the first mile in better than 1:40, while McAtee on Capt. Alcock and Lang on Paul Jones took off the pace.

Even at the end of a mile and a quarter, passing the stands for the second time, Exterminator seemed running well within himself. Then, suddenly, as they went to the mile and a half mark, Lang shot Paul Jones up on the rail and McAtee began his run with Capt. Alcock. In 20 strides they had passed Exodus and Exterminator and were in front. Paul Jones was the fresher, and in the next quarter of a mile opened up a gap of three lengths.

Exterminator Drops Back.

McAtee sat down to ride on the Captain and at the stretch turn ranged alongside Paul Jones. Then it was hammer and tongs on two game, but tired horses to the wire.

All this time Exterminator kept dropping back so that cries came from the crowd: "He's broken down." But he was just beaten from the killing pace.

The fractional time of the race tells the story of Exterminator's defeat. They were :25 4-5, :50, 1:14, 1:39 4-5, 2:07, 2:34, 3:25, 3:53 2-5.

The race was worth $7100 to the winner. Paul Jones' second money was $2000, while Exterminator's share was $1000 and Exodus received $500 for being fourth. There were real prizes for the trainers, too. James Fitzsimmons, who saddled the winner, received $1500, and the trainers of the other placed horses received $500, $300 and $200, respectively.

Willis Sharpe Kilmer, who was confident of victory before the race, rushed out on the track as soon as the horses pulled up to see if there was anything the matter with Exterminator.

There wasn't. It was just the same sort of a ride that beat Oceanic in the Bowie Handicap on Tuesday. By a singular coincidence, the same horse, Capt. Alcock, profited by this, too.

VANDERBILT OUTPLAYS KENTUCKY AND WINS, 9-0

By the Associated Press.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Nov. 11.—Vanderbilt University outplayed the University of Kentucky this afternoon and won, in a hard-fought battle, by a score of 9 to 0. A drop kick by Wakefield in the first period and a touchdown by Meiers, Vanderbilt halfback, in the second period, from which the try for goal was missed, accounted for the scoring. Vanderbilt's touchdown followed a 70-yard march down the field. In the third period Halfback Reece skirted Kentucky ends for 35 and 40 yards on two occasions. Forward passes when the goal was near, however, failed Vanderbilt.

Kentucky threatened in the first period by rushing the ball to Vanderbilt's 3-yard line, but Gregg missed a drop kick.

Haugdahl Stars At Maxwelton

Smashes Auto Records for One, Five, Ten and Fifteen Miles.

Sig Haugdahl, driving his famous "Wonder Car," monopolized the limelight in the first day's racing of the two-day benefit program at Maxwelton Track yesterday afternoon. Haugdahl broke the record for one mile on the circular dirt track and set up new world's records for five, 10 and 15 miles.

Haugdahl drove the mile in 40.9 seconds, smashing Barney Oldfield's mark of 45 seconds, which was estbalished in 1917 on the same track. A broken radiator prevented Haugdahl from going after the two-mile record.

Driving a Frontenac car, Haugdahl went after all records from five to 20 miles. His time follows:

Five miles, 3m. 36 6-10s.
Ten miles, 7m. 22s.
Fifteen miles, 10m. 44 2-5s.

TWO REFEREES ON FIELD IN PROFESIONAL LEAGUE DOUBLE-HEADER TODAY

A system, the installation of which already has caused the resignations of Referees Kavanaugh and McSweeney, will be inaugurated today in the double-header of the St. Louis Soccer League at High School Field. Recently, the league executives decided on the two-referee system for their contests and adopted it for immediate trial. This decision did not meet with the approval of Kavanaugh and McSweeney and the two veteran officials withdrew much to the regret of the league oficials who, however, stood firm in their desire to try out the innovation.

Despite the two resignations, today's games will be competently handled by experienced officials and it is expected the fans will take to the new method because of its efficiency and tendency to speed up the game. The two battles booked for today ought to bring forth real action. Ranking as the feature of the two is the second contest—that between the Scullins, national title holders, and the Vesper-Buicks, present leaders of the league.

Facing the Millers, in the opening game, the Barrett-Hoovers will once again try to start their belated rush to the front. Foley's flock has scored only twice in four contests and have allowed twice as many tallies to the foe. The first game today will start promptly at 2 p. m.

Mount Vernon Slugger Had Average of .403 for 20 Games in Trolley League.

Warner, shortstop for the Mount Vernon club of the Missouri-Illinois Trolley League, was the leading batter in the organization the past season with a mark of .403 for 20 games, according to official figures released today by Secretary Charles Bartley.

Five players in the circuit will advance next year. Hudgins will receive a tryout with the Cardinals; Roy Fisher and O'Hearn go to Detroit and Hoffman and W. Rose to Little Rock.

Secretary Ross of Triple A Resigns For New Position

Will Visit Scotland and Later Becomes Manager of Midland Valley Club.

Robert Ross, assistant [illegible] and manager of the Triple A Club in Forest Park, has resigned from the organization, to take effect at the end of this month. During the past few years Ross has been identified with the various golf and tennis tournaments held at Triple A. He is also secretary of the St. Louis District Tennis Association.

Ross came to the club in 1905 and has served for 17 years, during which time there has been a decided growth in membership. Mrs. Ross has assisted him in managing the affairs at the clubhouse. David, age 16, and Gertrude, age 14, their two children, have grown up with the club.

Next month Mr. and Mrs. Ross will journey to Scotland to visit Mr. Ross' family. They will be gone for over two months.

Upon their return to St. Louis Mr. and Mrs. Ross will reside at the Midland Valley Country Club. Mr. Ross will assume the duties as manager of the club. In addition to the golf course, Midland Valley has four tennis courts, which will no doubt come in for greater use under the new management.

Last week the two golf professionals at Triple A, Donald and Ernest Harrison, announced that they would sever their connection after Jan. 1. Thus, the club faces a very critical situation.

During Ross' regime at Triple A the tennis courts there have come to be regarded as the very finest clay courts in this part of the country and possibly the best in the United States.

MUNICIPAL BOXING TOURNEY BRINGS OUT PROMISING AMATEURS

A number of high-class bouts are already assured for the amateur boxing tournament to be staged under the auspices of the Municipal Athletic Association at the Armory next Saturday night and Wednesday night, Nov. 22. Over a dozen of St. Louis' best boxers have entered and the local committee has made preliminary arrangements for several promising contests. As the entry list does not close until noon Friday, it is probable that virtually all of the best amateur fistic experts in the city will perform.

One of the good bouts now arranged will bring together Charles Wurtz of the St. Louis Athletic Club, Western Division Amateur Athletic Union lightweight champion, and [illegible] Moose of the Business Men's Gymnasium, former title holder for 135 pounds.

Another bout will bring together Eddie Kaiser, South Broadway A. C. star, and either Gus Pirrone, Business Men's Gym flyweight champion, or Frank Urshell, a good 112-pound boxer from the Botanical Athletic Club. Kaiser is a brother of the famed Johnny "Peewee" Kaiser. Pirrone won two bouts last Thursday night by knockouts at the South Broadway Athletic Club.

ARMISTICE DAY OBSERVED IN LEADING CITIES OF AMERICA AND EUROPE

PRECAUTION FOR FUTURE URGED BY GEN. PERSHING

Recent Turk Victory Over Greeks Cited as Example of Danger America Runs of Becoming Involved Again.

FOR PREPAREDNESS IN REASON, HE SAYS

Can't Return to Pre-War Condition of Meager Expenditures for Military Purposes, He Declares.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—Developments since the recent Turkish victory over the Greeks have indicated the danger which America runs of becoming involved in the "tangled meshes of the racial, religious and political situation" in the Near East, Gen. John J. Pershing said today in an Armistice day address before the National Civic Federation. "The World War," he added, "taught us that we cannot regard with indifference the gathering of war clouds in those regions of the world in which we do not appear to be directly interested. For, even with the utmost desire to remain aloof from the contest which had been waged during the period extending from 1914 to 1917, we were drawn into it in defense of a great principle.

"So we cannot regard as irrelevant to our interests and as matters of no concern to our national life the crises which periodically arise over the storm centers of international strife. It is no time to abandon our purpose to take reasonable precaution for the future Since the armistice the tension of conflicting interests has often almost reached the breaking point where indeed actual armed conflict has not been in progress.

Already Strong Pressure.

"Already strong pressure has been exerted for our intervention in the Near East. Demands are made daily that an American military force be dispatched for participation in behalf of our former allies. Strangely enough those who appeal most loudly for headlong intervention are those who most vociferously condemn any and all preparations for sudden emergency."

Gen. Pershing declared that America could be assured against involvement in the strifes abroad only "through a clear consciousness on our own part of our own national aims and through strong and courageous leadership.

"Here at home we must so shape and direct our national life that we cannot become a battle ground for conflicting foreign interests nor an objective for the infiltration of propaganda that might ultimately disrupt our social fabric and destroy the hope of maintaining our national unity," he said.

Must Retain Nationalism.

"As in the World War we declined to allow our army to lose its identity or to be submerged in the commands of other nations," the General continued, "so we should now resist all efforts to have our strength and influence used for ulterior purposes foreign to our own ideals. As we then insisted upon one American army, upon an American front under the American flag, so should we now insist in world affairs that all America's strength be conserved to service under will of our own citizens and for the maintenance of our conception of American destiny.

"While eagerly wishing to associate ourselves in any clear understanding to promote peace and good relations with every other nation, it is vital that we always maintain the priceless heritage of American nationalism, guaranteed by our forefathers when they formed the Constitutions and for which so many of our countrymen have fought and died. If we are to keep the faith of our fathers, we cannot rest secure alone in the certainty that the part of the nation is sound, for security depends upon a rational policy of national defense is the only means whereby we can preserve the things for which we stand. The courage to strike for our ideals is from the heart, but it is the arm that strikes the blow.

Duty of All Citizens.

"It is the duty of every one of us to prevent our country from paying unnecessary penalties through future wars, not alone the penalty in human lives, but the penalty made by dollars and cents. We cannot return to pre-war conditions, although from the unthinking we constantly hear demands that we shall return to pre-war conditions. It can be forgotten that with these meager expenditures for military purposes we found ourselves in a world conflict utterly unprepared. Nor should we blind ourselves to the fact that the billions expended on the cost of the war would have provided adequate readiness in the time of peace for a hundred years and might leave our participation in the World War unnecessary."

SENATOR REED MAKES PATRIOTIC ADDRESS AT THE ARMORY

patrolmen who had served in the war.

Dr. R. E. Owen, grand marshal, and his staff of aids rode prancing horses, and remained in front of the stand.

A detachment of the Sixth Infantry, from Jefferson Barracks, led by the regimental band; many of these soldiers were recruits after the war; their military bearing was cheered.

Canadians in Line.

British-Canadian war veterans, some of whom wore the kilts of the "Ladies from Hell," used by Scotch regiments.

Earnest, trudging Boy Scouts, carrying many flags and penants, led by youths, by former army officers and others.

At this point, Senator Reed, who had marched from Twelfth boulevard with Acting Mayor Aloe, Col. F. G. Jonah, chairman of the City Executive Committee of the Legion, and others, and had dropped out to enter the stand, appeared.

"Atta boy!" "Here he is!" "Hats off for Reed!" various spectators cried. The Senator smiled and went to his place. Among those with him in the stand were Aloe, Col. Jonah, Circuit Judge Hartmann, Col. H. E. Yates, commander, and Capt. R. A. Byers, adjutant of the Sixth Infantry; James E. Kinkaid, State commander of the legion, and M. P. Owen, commander of Ransom Post, G. A. R.

The parade moved on. Next came white-haired veterans of the G. A. R., riding in automobiles, who returned the reverent salutes of the onlookers. Gold-star mothers came in more automobiles, followed by disabled veterans of the World War, riding. Women of the legion auxiliary, wearing the lawn caps of their war activities. Boys of the De Molay order, in blue and white zouave uniforms, and their band. A group of girls, said to represent a Sunday school. The Arab Patrol and drum and bugle corps of Moolah Temple, in its costumes of gold and red. The drill team of Alhambra Grotto, led by a drum corps of girls dressed in white. More disabled veterans, in machines.

The K. of C. Patrol.

The Salvation Army band, playing "Onward, Christian Soldiers"; women workers of this army, and a boy and girl dressed in the khaki and "tin hats" of its war days. The Knights of Columbus patrol and band. The uniformed rank of the Knights of Pythias.

The ranks of the American Legion, 800 strong, were next. American flags were grouped with banners of the posts in the lead. Captains walked with Corporals. Here and there the blue of a sailor's uniform or the brighter colors of a Marine provided contrast. Negro posts interspersed. The usual banter, "Who'll get us a bonus?" "Reed!"

Three 75-mm. cannon and three caissons rolled along. One cannon bore the placard, "Fournier's Gun." Joseph Fournier Post of the legion was named after a man who gave his life beside that weapon. The post flags recalled the names of other heroes. A white-hatted Marine rode astride an army cannon.

St. Edward's Drum and Bugle Corps, a group of boys, were followed by some negro Boy Scouts.

The 138th Infantry Post, following a truck on which was a semblance of a billet in France, a grinning, helmeted doughboy and a youth trying on a gas mask and others.

Two automobiles were given away at the Armory last night. An army ambulance, carrying disabled men, with a squeaking flat tire. The usual entourage of small boys and the struggle of the police to open up a traffic way provided sidelights.

Many of the marchers went into the Armory. Gold-star mothers and G. A. R. men were conducted to the front seats. Col. Jonah and the speakers, with other guests, sat on a platform in front of the Seal of Missouri. Flags and bunting in the legion colors were everywhere. The audience numbered about 2500. The American Legion band played "Over There," "Stars and Stripes Forever" and "The Star-Spangled Banner."

Silent for One Minute.

Father Thomas D. Kennedy, past chaplain of the legion in Missouri, offered prayer, begging eternal rest for those who died in the war, comfort for those they left behind, and world peace. Then the audience stood in silence for one minute. Then the Knights of Columbus Choral Club, in a balcony, sang "Speed Our Republic."

Acting Mayor Aloe told of the city's achievements in the war, its oversubscribing its Liberty bond and war work quotas, sending volunteers early in the struggle, and being "the most loyal, most patriotic, most 100 per cent American city in the country."

"I don't want to mention politics," he said, "but I remember how Gov. Gardner, Mayor Kiel and I stood in the reviewing stand when the troops came home. The boys would say, 'Governor, we want our beer'."

There were shouts of applause. Senator Reed smiled.

"The Eighteenth Amendment was passed when 5,000,000 of our men were out of the country and had no voice in legislation."

Whistles. Reed smiled.

"The 66,500 St. Louis boys who were in the service must have been here last Tuesday and helped elect Senator Reed," he concluded.

Reed stroked his chin. A feminine voice cried: "How about the ladies?"

State Commander Kinkaid spoke for a moment in greeting the city legionnaires.

Reed, wearing a dark suit with an American Legion poppy in his coat lapel, and appearing to be tired, was introduced. There was much applause. He poured a glass of water from a pitcher and thereafter disregarded the glass. Reed for President!" some one cried, and "Take your coat off, Senator," from another.

Senator Reed's Address.

The greatest compliment ever paid me," Reed began, "was the recognition by the veterans as they passed the reviewing stand today. I don't know how to find language to express the sentiments that surged through my mind and pulled my heart as I beheld the marching ranks and realized the fact that a little while ago these boys, with laughter on their lips, were charging into the flaming mouth of hell with jaws set and muscles tense, and with no thought but 'forward!' 'forward!' 'forward!'"

He paid a tribute to those who stayed at home and worked to win the war and to parents who gave up their sons, and to the veterans of other wars. He declared that war has its compensations, for all those who went through its agonies came forth better Americans; those who fought for flag and country were willing now to work for flag and country.

"You have been told what St. Louis did in the war," he said. "The good Lord knows I am the last man who would pluck any laurels from the wreath of St. Louis. I do not detract from St. Louis, but pay it honor, when I say this patriotism was manifested in every part of the United States. Patriotism is not confined to one locality, nor to any race, any creed nor to any religion.

"You have heard something here about the fight for democracy. I voted for this war for one reason—the flag of this country had been insulted and the honor of the United States attacked. The idea that we fought for democracy seems to have taken deep root among the people. I have no quarrel with that, but while we are talking democracy let us be sure we don't create an autocracy in America.

"Let us return to the spirit of America. What is America? It's not land; it's people. Who are these Americans? They came from every country on earth, bearing on their backs the weight of centuries of oppression. In many instances they came fleeing from religious persecution or to escape intolerable economic conditions. When they came they had just one thing in common; that is the soul of America—love of freedom.

Discusses Proscription.

"These people of many bloods and religious beliefs set up a government, in a land where there would be no proscription of anyone on account of race or religion, where men were equal and entitled to the same treatment before the law.

"Any man who will proscribe another man on account of his race or religion is not acquainted with the principles of the American republic. Boys of every creed and every blood walked up to serve the country in the late war with equal alacrity. And now they return and scarcely have they wiped the mud from their shoes till you find men in this America that made and saved all races, this America we believed to be a place where no man would be proscribed—we find this America infested with an organization that proposes to condemn a man because of blood or religion.

"That sort of an organization no more belongs in America than a rattlesnake in an infant's cradle. It is the very antithesis of Americanism. This serpent of proscription crawled here from the dark ages and seeks to wind its scaly form around the pillars of the temple of human liberty and thrust its forked tongue in the face of the Goddess of Liberty. No wonder it goes about with a pillow slip over its cowardly head."

This denunciation was received with applause. Reed went on to advocate an end of legislative interference with the people's rights. He urged a return to the old Anglo-Saxon principle that a man's house is his castle. The meeting ended after three loud cheers had been given for Reed.

Second Parade Indicates Birth of Friction in the Legion.

The second parade of the day was held under the auspices of the Veterans' Council, leaders of which declared during a program that followed at Forest Park, near the tennis courts, that the American Legion had failed to abide by a decision about arrangements for a parade of all veterans' organizations, reached months ago. One speaker referred to the observance of Armistice day in St. Louis as a "divided celebration."

This parade went out Lindell boulevard from Taylor avenue, to the park. The Veterans of Foreign Wars, United Spanish-American War Veterans and the auxiliary, Disabled Veterans of the World War and mounted policemen took part. Some members of the American Legion, who were in this parade, talked of withdrawing from the legion. Officers of two of these veterans' organizations declared that the split caused the National Guard to decline to appear in the legion parade.

Flags were placed at the foot of trees in Memorial Court, the parkway in King's highway, north of Easton avenue, by Boy Scouts yesterday morning. About 600 trees have been planted there, each representing a St. Louisan who made the supreme sacrifice, and more will be planted, until every St. Louisan who died in the war is represented.

There was an inter-denominational community service at Christ Church Cathedral at noon, following a half-hour organ recital. Prayers for the abolition of war were offered and the choir of men and boys sang. Bishop Tuttle of the Episcopal Church, the Rev. Henry Watson Mizner of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, the Rev. Dr. Ivan Lee Holt of St. John's Methodist Church, the Rev. Dr. John MacIvor of Second Presbyterian Church and the Rev. Dr. W. C. Bitting of Second Baptist Church took part.

Armistice day was a legal holiday, but many business houses remained open.

SEVERAL THOUSAND ATTEND NIGHT EVENT HELD AT ARMORY

Several thousand persons—members of the American Legion, their wives, mothers, sweethearts and friends—througed into and around the Armory, at Grand boulevard and Market street, in the legion's closing celebration of Armistice day last night, to attend the ball in honor of the recently chosen legion queen.

The queen is Miss Daisy Stewart, 5001 Waterman avenue. Beginning shortly after 9 o'clock, her pageant of matrons and maids of honor, with their escorts, marched through the applauding crowd up to the throne platform opposite the west entrance to the building. The queen came last, immediately preceded by her four special maids of honor, daintily dressed pages strewing flowers in her path.

Capt. James Kincaid, State commander of the American Legion, crowned the queen, and in a short address, gave her jurisdiction over all members of the legion in St. Louis, until next Armistice day, when her successor will be chosen.

The program opened with a pantomime depicting Armistice day in the trenches four years ago. A unit of soldiers, in complete uniform, including "tin" hats and rifles, was shown in a trench, behind barbed wire entanglements. As they were preparing to go "over the top," a messenger brought the news of the signing of the armistice.

The crowning of the queen followed, and afterward the crowd danced to music by the legion band.

All Creeds Join in New York Armistice Day Observance.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—With parades, public gatherings and services in churches of every creed in memory of the soldier-dead, the fourth anniversary of the signing of the armistice was observed in this city today.

Memorial services were held throughout the city by Gold Star mother organizations, posts of the American Legion and other patriotic bodies. One of the most impressive testimonials to the soldier-dead took place at the Grand Central terminal, where all activity was stopped for two minutes of silent prayer just before 11 a. m. The Women's Peace Society held a "no more war" meeting later in the day.

The observance in the evening included a dinner of the naval consulting board, an interallied dinner and a ball under the auspices of the United French Societies. The New York command of the British Great War Veterans of America also gave a ball for representatives of the American Legion and the French War Veterans' Association.

Acting Mayor Aloe Overstated Number of U. S. Soldiers "Out of the Country."

Acting Mayor Aloe's statement that the Eighteenth Amendment was adopted when 5,000,000 Americans were "out of the country," appears to have been an unintentional overstatement. The American Expeditionary Forces, on Nov. 1, 1918, 10 days before the Armistice, numbered 1,993,000, and the number at no time went much over 2,000,000. The soldiers who were in cantonments and training camps in this country had the vote. These, together with those abroad on military duty, numbered nearly 5,000,000, which probabyl caused Acting Mayor Aloe's confusion of figures.

dead from France sleeping among the quiet hills of Arlington. Their gleaming headstones flank the great amphitheater on one side as those other dead of older wars flank it with the time-grayed monuments and markers on the other. And while the nation paid its simple tribute to all those who sleep beneath the newer stones today in the honors accorded at the tomb of the unknown, sorrowing relatives did not forget that Armistice day is, above all, the day of the men of the American army in France and their brothers in arms at home who stood ready to join the ranks overseas. As the day passed, there blossomed among the newer gravestones flowers of every hue, rivaling the splendor of autumnal coloring in the woods that frame the field of the dead.

Senator Reed, who returned to Kansas City last night after delivering the Armistice day address at the Armory yesterday, announced he would drive in his automobile from Kansas City to Washington this week to attend the special session of Congress, starting Nov. 20.

BELGIUM'S UNKNOWN SOLDIER IS BURIED

U. S. Rhineland Commander Puts Medal on Coffin at Funeral Services in Brussels.

By the Associated Press.

BRUSSELS, Nov. 11.—Belgium's unknown soldier was entombed with impressive ceremony today. The body was selected by a blind veteran from five unidentified war dead. King Albert and Crown Prince Leopold were at the station when the funeral train arrived from Bruges and stood at rigid salute as the flag-covered coffin was brought out. Ten disabled soldiers, five of whom had lost their right arms and the other their left, placed the casket upon a gun carriage and the procession started for Parliament square in impressive silence.

John W. Weeks, the American Secretary of War, and M. Deveze, Belgian Minister of National Defense, exchanged telegrams in connection with the burial of Belgium's unknown soldier.

The five unidentified Belgians fell on the Yser battlefield. The train bearing the body of the unknown dead was escorted by airplanes from Bruges to the capital.

Arriving here, the casket was met by a guard of honor, composed of detachments from all the allied and associated armies, including a contingent from the American Rhineland forces headed by Major-General Allen, the commander in chief.

Prior to the entombment Major-General Allen conferred upon the unknown soldier the United States Congressional Medal of Honor, and a representative of the French army decorated the casket with the Legion of Honor.

Weeks and Pershing Send Messages to Belgian War Minister.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—On the occasion of the burial of Belgium's unknown soldier today, for the American army, regular, reservist or national guardsman, Secretary Weeks sent this message to the Belgian Minister of War:

"The occasion of the ceremonies in honor of the unknown Belgian soldier freshens the memories of the heroic deeds of the Belgian army and of the sacrifices of the Belgian people and strengthens the pride of association shared alike by the army and the people of the United States. On behalf of the members of the army of the United States, I offer homage to their former comrade, the unknown Belgian soldier."

Gen. Pershing sent this personal message to the Belgian Chief of Staff:

"I desire to offer personal homage to my former comrade, the Belgian soldier, unknown in name, but a sharer in heroic deeds with which his country's name will ever be associated."

As formally expressing the comradeship of the American Government in tribute to the Belgian unknown, President Harding has approved the following citation, which will be bestowed with the Congressional Medal of Honor, the highest American recognition of valor, by Major-General Henry T. Allen, commanding American forces in Germany and specially ordered to Brussels for the purpose:

"By virtue of authority vested by law in the President of the United States, the Congressional Medal of Honor, emblem of the highest military ideals and virtues, is bestowed in the name of the Congress of the United States upon the unknown, unidentified Belgian soldier, in a desire to add all that is possible to the imperishable glory won by the soldiers of Belgium who fought as comrades of the American soldiers during the World War and to commemorate with them the deeds of the nation's association with the United States of America by paying this tribute to their unknown dead."

SPOT WHERE GERMANY QUIT WAR IS MARKED

Monument Unveiled in Little Clearing in Forest of Compigue.

By the Associated Press.

RETHONDES, France, Nov. 11.—The spot where Germany gave up the struggle in the great World War was marked for posterity today. In the little clearing in the forest of Compiegne near the village of Rethondes, beside the River Aisne, where the armistice was signed in 1918, a commemorative monument was unveiled.

President Millerand, assisted by Marshal Foch and Premier Poincare, sealed the last stone in the great composite slab placed by the League of Combatants midway between the two temporary war railroad lines on which stood, on the one side, the car of Marshal Foch, and on the other that of the German armistice emissaries, from Nov. 8 until Nov. 11, four years ago.

The slab was inscribed as follows.

Here on the 11th of November, 1918, succumbed the criminal pride of the German empire, vanquished by the free peoples it sought to enslave.

Depressing Weather.

The cold, depressing weather emphasized the grimness of Poincare's graphic description of the two meetings of Marshal Foch with the Germans and the latter's acceptance of the allies terms. The Premier spoke of the claim of Germany that she had not been conquered militarily.

"The Germans came to us in the Rethondes clearing so as not to have to surrender in the Rhineland," he declared.

Germany, said Poincare, boasted that she had held the world at bay but, he continued, "should she not rather have realized that the very formation of this international league against her was a tremendous condemnation of her imperial policy?"

France today celebrated Armistice day as a real holiday.

At 11 o'clock, President Millerand, accompanied by his ministers and the Marshals of France and officers of the French and allied armies, stood beside the tomb of the unknown soldier beneath the Arc de Triumphe in Paris and paid homage.

3 WOMEN KILLED BY TRAIN; PEACE DAY AFFAIR ENDS

Young Woman and Man Driver of Auto Severely Hurt in Tragedy Near Eureka, Mo.

INJURED GIRL SISTER OF POST'S ADJUTANT

Party Was Within 300 Yards of Destination When Frisco Local No. 14 Struck Motor Car.

Two women and a girl were killed outright and two other persons injured seriously while on their way to attend an Armistice day celebration in an automobile that was struck by a train near Eureka, St. Louis County, at 9:35 a. m. yesterday.

The Dead:

Mrs. R. L. Kuhns, 63 years old, wife of a merchant at Crescent.

Mrs. Clara Rogue, 38, of Eureka.

Mildred Peppers, 17, of Eureka.

The two persons injured are Miss Margie Boland, 18, of Eureka, whose right leg was so crushed that amputation may be necessary, and Mike Hance, 32, of Eureka, driver of the automobile, who was cut and bruised severely.

Celebration Called Off.

The accident put an end to preparations for the celebration, and those who had gone to Eureka to participate in the entertainment returned to their homes.

The body of Mrs. Kuhns was taken by a Kirkwood undertaker to be prepared for burial, and those of Mrs. Rogue and Miss Peppers were taken to Pacific. Miss Boland and Hance were brought to the Frisco Hospital in this city.

The accident occurred at a grade crossing a half mile west of Eureka and 300 yards from American Legion Hall, on Magazine Farm, where the party was going to arrange for a luncheon.

Hit by Other Train.

Hance had stopped the automobile and waited for a westbound freight train to pass, and when he started across the tracks after the freight train had passed he apparently did not see a passenger train, Frisco local No. 14, approaching from the west. It was slowing down for Eureka at the time and going about 25 miles an hour when it struck the automobile and hurled the occupants onto the railroad right-of-way. It is said that a flagman on the freight train attempted to warn Hance, but did not attract his attention.

Miss Boland is a sister of Zona Boland, adjutant of O'Brien Post of the American Legion at Eureka.

BROCKMAN URGES PROMOTED OFFICERS TO BE KIND TO BOYS

Police Board Head Talks to Newly Appointed Police Lieutenants and Sergeants.

In a heart-to-heart talk yesterday with the three newly appointed Lieutenants and 17 Sergeants, President Brockman of the Police Board admonished them concerning their duties and advised them to be kind to and considerate of the boys of the streets.

"When a policeman handles these youngsters without consideration," he said, "it is only natural that they grow to manhood hating a policeman, often with dire consequences to both and contempt for the law."

He reminded the officers that they had been promoted for efficiency and that their superiors had great expectations of continued good service by them.

To three Lieutenants and 14 Sergeants, recently demoted because each was more than 61 years of age, he spoke a word of encouragement, assuring them that their retirement was for the greatest good for the greatest number of citizens, and should not be considered as demotion.

"We live in an age when criminals are quicker on the gun," he told them, "and it requires the alert mind and agility of youth to cope successfully with the modern desperado."

LOSES WATCH OF SOLDIER SON

Mother Appeals for Return of Memento of Aviator Killed in France.

Loss of a small wrist watch, memento of a soldier son killed in an airplane crash in France, when she dropped a handbag in a theater Friday night, darkened observance of Armistice day for Mrs. Annie O'Neil of 5855 Enright avenue. She made an appeal yesterday for return of the watch, stating she did not care about the bag nor six or seven dollars it contained.

The watch was sent to her among the effects of her son, Charles O'Neil, killed when his plane fell at Chatillon Sur Seine, on Jan. 23, 1919, after the armistice that ended the world war. She has worn the watch almost continuously, but had placed it in her handbag Friday night, after having some repairs made by a jeweler, and lost the bag in the Pageant Theater, 5849 Delmar boulevard.

$35,000,000 Heiress Who Will Wed Childhood Sweetheart "Just Wants to Keep House and Live in Home Town"

Miss Dellora Angell, Who Will Marry Lester Norris, Cartoonist, Says They Never Talk About Money, and Expect to Stay Right in St. Charles, Where They Were Playmates.

DELLORA ANGELL.

LESTER NORRIS.

Underwood & Underwood Photographs.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

ST. CHARLES, Ill., Nov. 11.—Thirty-five million dollars, a 19-year-old girl, who possesses it all and a young man of 22 who owns nothing but skill with a cartoonist's pen are not considered especially compatible elements for a modest home in a Chicago suburb. Yet Dellora Angell, heiress to a part of the John W. Gates fortune, told a correspondent here today that she saw nothing out of the ordinary about it.

The truth of the matter is that Dellora Angell has seen nothing out of the ordinary about $35,000,000, and apparently never will. Dellora and her fiance, Lester Norris, of St. Charles, when met with in the material substance somehow dim the monstrous glitter of so much gold. Dellora is not the fabulously wealthy princess dwelling in feudal grandeur, who in a moment of American democracy answers the call of her heart and flies to the hovel of her plebein worshiper. Dellora never has flown anywhere; not had much desire for altitudes higher than St. Charles.

Aunt Died in 1918.

When Mrs. John W. Gates died in 1918, $70,000,000 was divided between her niece and her brother, E. J. Baker, of St. Charles. Under the accustomed process of life a number of things might have happened after that. Dellora might have been an imprisoned butterfly to whom this golden sum would be the fascination in a life of fretful luxury. She might have worked out dreams of good deeds. Or she might have had the climbing spirit and become a member of the noveau riche; a leader of Chicago's socials.

But Dellora possessed no skyrocket tendencies. She was in dispased to leave the accustomed strata of life in St. Charles. True, her father has spent $179,892 in two years on his daughter's preparations for better things. Yet Dellora's $35,000,000 remain intangible to her tastes, ambitions and desires.

Lester figures in this amazing conclusion as does the hero in the never named play, "The Fellow Who Waited Around." After Dellora had vainly tried to like the life of an heiress she returned to St. Charles to find Lester waiting. She is to marry him in the spring.

Dellora spent last night with one of her school day friends, Miss Beulah Lillibridge. The engagement to Norris was announced Wednesday at the home of her uncle, E. J. Baker in St. Charles. Thursday and the town was overrun with newspaper men and photographers. The Angells were in seclusion Friday but Dellora returned during the evening.

A Cold Reception.

The Lillibridge home is one of the best in St. Charles. It is built of stone and has a porte cochere, but the yard and street are not pretentious. People seldom bother to rake leaves in St. Charles and the correspondent scuffled along a partly hidden walk to the porch. Miss Lillibridge opened the door.

No, she said, no more correspondents would be granted interviews. Miss Angell was still in bed. A giggle sounded from "back stage," but the guardian of the portal remained unshaken, as any friend who guards the privacy of an heiress to $35,000,000 should. When pressed for reasons a number of reasons were given why Miss Angell would not see another reporter. She had only talked to one reporter since her engagement was announced, yet, five Chicago papers carried interviews the next day. "A lot of bunk" had been written, it was alleged.

The visitor was insistent. Finally someone burst out with "Oh, well, I suppose I'll have to. It's all right, Beulah." The door opened and the caller stepped into a hallway.

He was confronted by the Gates heiress. This girl came not with swishing train or uplifted eyebrows. Dellora Angell meets people in the St. Charles way, with an extended hand and a smile.

"An Ordinary Girl."

"There isn't anything more to tell," she said. "I'm just an ordinary girl, really, I am."

There was a murmur about great wealth.

"There you go. I don't want to be known as an heiress. Since this thing has come up they're making me notorious. I just know that when I'm introduced to people the first thing they think about is the heiress part of it."

Her eyes lost the smile entirely.

"I can't realize that I'm the girl the papers print those stories about. Here in St. Charles, I'm able to forget about the money. I never think of it at all. It doesn't bother me. I have my friends here who don't think about me as an heiress and I don't want people to regard me that way.

"Just think how hard this has been on Lester. Writing about him as a poor, starving artist. Just think how he must feel."

The interviewer then cited for her the stock situation which the announcement of her engagement had created.

"How can you, with so much money, and Lester, with comparatively so little, hope to be happy?" was the form the question took.

Dellora studied for a moment, looked at her friend, and then replied seriously:

"It might not work if Lester and I had been reared differently, but we grew up in this town together and we like the same things, know the same friends, and, well—we're just the same sort."

Talk went back to the $35,000,000, influenced by a survey of the Lillibridge home and the apparent unconsciousness on Miss Angell's part that any more than its comfortable furnishings could be desired. The questioner inquired how it felt to know that almost any material thing is yours if you desire it.

Dellora seemed at loss.

"I have everything I want," she explained. "I don't get much pleasure in spending money. I'm not extravagant, am I Beulah?" Beulah didn't think that the 35 times millionairess was extravagant.

"You're talking about the money again," Miss Angell objected. "I tell you I never think about it. It's just as though I didn't know it. I can't feel that I have that much money."

"Do you and Lester ever talk of money?"

"Never," was the prompt reply.

The interrogator sought to discover if Dellora ever thought of palaces and steam yachts and beautiful clothes and expensive motor cars.

"I don't like large houses," she replied in part. "I don't intend to live in a bungalow, either. Just a medium-sized house."

Yes, she had been in fine homes. She owned one on Sheridan drive in Lake Forest.

"I didn't get along very well with the Lake Forest people," said Miss Angell. "I went with a girl over there who didn't have much money. One of the men in that set told me that I'd have to cut her if I wanted to be invited to the best homes. So, while I know the Lake Forest life, give me St. Charles."

Miss Angell slipped into a window seat.

Will Live in St. Charles.

While she talked of Lester and his work she seemed only vaguely informed as to its quality and as to his future. That Lester would draw and that she would keep house and that they would live in St. Charles about completed her plans.

Dellora was questioned concerning the two rumors which received wide circulation to the effect that she was at different times engaged to Randolph Owsley of the Lake Forest social set and Wilson Campbell, a Californian.

Her reply was "If I went with a man twice I was engaged to him, so the papers said."

She denied there has been any attempt on the part of her father or anyone else to block the marriage with Lester.

"I was not hustled off to Europe, nor was I sent to California to forget him," said Dellora.

If the Gates heiress has any idea of using her wealth in the public weal she did not betray it.

"If I say that I'm going to help anybody, everyone writes letters so as not to be forgotten. The other day I received a letter from a man who said, 'Please send me $100,000.' Just like that. Imagine. I'd never even seen him. I get all sorts of letters and Lester is beginning to receive some, too."

It was suggested that Miss Dellora might find some outside interest in life; that she would devote her time to travel and study, while Lester drew cartoons. Such was not her idea of it.

"We'll live in St. Charles," she said.

Lester himself appeared at the Lillibridge home after breakfast in response to a call from his fiancee.

There isn't anything very impressive about Lester. He came in, his black hair lying close to his head, his black eyes a trifle out of the "straight line"—well dressed, soft voiced and indolent of smile. He took a chair in the library and replied courteously to questions. It was noticeable that he consulted Dellora wordlessly before replying to any important query.

What Norris Does.

Norris was a cartoonist? Yes. Where was he now employed? He was a free lance. What work had he been doing? He had been illustrating for the Hamiltonian, a magazine published by the Hamilton Club of Chicago. From her seat Dellora offered amendments to Lester's careful and modest statements. Encouraged, Lester mentioned that he had drawn first page cartoons for a paper in La Porte, Ind.

After a consultation about pictures in which Beaulah Lillibridge as the impartial friend assisted, the party of four went out for a drive out to Alta Vista, the estate recently purchased by Dellora's father for his country seat.

At Alta Vista Dellora's father was waiting.

Vision no palatial country estate. Alta Vista is a piece of farm land sloping down to the Fox River, on which a man named Atkinson built a white clapboarded house with a green roof. The house stands out. Behind the house is a garage.

R. F. Angell, a tall man with iron-gray hair and a cold voice, greeted his daughter with: "We thought you weren't coming."

He asked her how she liked the house. Displaying no curiosity about the inside of the place, she looked it over and found fault with some chicken houses down the hill. Her father informed her that he would have the chicken houses moved still farther down the hill.

The correspondent learned from questioning neighbors that Angell bought Alta Vista because he and his second wife rebelled at the thought of maintaining a retinue of servants in the house on Sheridan road, Lake Forest.

Going back to St. Charles, which is about a mile from Alta Vista, Dellora told Lester that she'd rather live in town.

"The folks will be in California," she explained, "and Lester and I will want to stay where it isn't no lonesome. We can go to dances in St. Charles. There is more dancing in the summer time, but St. Charles is pretty lively any old time, isn't it, Lester?"

"St. Charles is homelike," was Lester's prompt response.

Dellora's uncle, who got the other $35,000,000 was farming on a place given him by the Gateses when Mrs. Gates died. He lives on Main street in St. Charles now, in a yellow frame house with white pillars on the porch.

The correspondent left Lester and his bride-to-be before the house of Louise McCarnack, her closest friend. Lester put out his hand first, then withdrew it as he saw that Dellora wished to shake hands, too. His words last audible to the departing guest were:

"Shall I cover the engine, dear?"

"Yes, Lester," was the reply.

And the heiress to $35,000,000 got out of her medium-priced car, walked up to the brick home of her friend and banged on the door instead of waiting for a footman to ring for her.

"Plain, Ordinary People."

The woman editor of the St. Charles Chronicle, who knew Dellora's mother and Mrs. Gates very well, gave her opinion of the $70,000,000 St. Charles families as follows:

"They were plain, ordinary people; good people, likable people. Then this money came. But they never changed. They are just the same."

Certainly E. J. Baker in his frame residence on Main street has not changed. Certainly R. F. Angell, uncomfortable in the mansion on Sheridan road, is not very much different now. The big way of John W. Gates has not descended to his brothers-in-law.

Dellora Angel was given these millions when but a girl of 15. For four years she has had the opportunity of expanding to the full limit of her imagination. The men she has met, the homes she has visited, the countries through which she has traveled have all offered her the choicest. She has chosen to stay in St. Charles, Ill., with Lester. When her uncle dies she will have $70,000,000.

ELECTION OF LEE AS STATE SCHOOL HEAD INDICATED

Unofficial Returns From All but 37 Precincts Give Democrat Lead of More Than 3000.

SEE-SAW RACE FOR LAST FEW DAYS

All Democratic Candidates for Supreme Bench Appear Winners — Daues for St. Louis Appeals Court.

The election of Charles A. Lee of Butler, Democratic nominee for the office of State Superintendent of Schools, by a plurality of more than 3000 over Same A. Baker, Republican incumbent, is indicated by a tabulation made last night by the Associated Press, in which unofficial returns from all but 37 of the precincts in the State were at hand.

The vote of 3839 precincts out of 3876 in the State was: Baker, 469,481; Lee, 472,738.

Returns of the last few days had appeared to favor Baker, but Callaway County, which was late in reporting, gave Lee a lead of 3100, and Linn County added 600. With these and other late returns, it appeared certain that the see-saw race had ended in favor of the Democratic candidate.

Result on Supreme Judges.

The election of the three Democratic candidates for the State Supreme Court appears to be beyond question. With only 73 precincts out, Ragland (D.) had 447,409, against 412,103 for Elder (R.), and Walker (D.) and White (D.) had respectively 452,598 and 445,361, against Higbee (R.), 422,198, and Hayward (R.), 396,896.

Judge Charles H. Daues of the St. Louis Court of Appeals, Republican candidate for election to that court, appears to have defeated Davis Biggs, his Democratic opponent. The vote of 1194 of the 1275 precincts in the court district shows Daues as having 145,979 to Biggs' 141,299, a lead of 4680 for Daues.

Senator Reed's plurality over R. R. Brewster, his Republican opponent, was increased by yesterday's unofficial returns, and last night appeared likely to be 35,000. With 93 precincts to hear from, Reed had 483,435 gaainst 448,078 for Brewster.

Congress and State Senate.

The late returns made no change in the congressional and State Senate results, the Democrats carrying 11 of the 16 congressional districts and 12 of the 17 even-numbered senatorial districts.

It is not certain that the Democrats will have a working majority, 76 members, in the lower House of the Legislature. Returns from 70 of the 114 counties of the State show 48 Democrats and 34 Republicans elected. St. Louis elected 13 Republicans and six Democrats. If Kansas City and Jackson County elected 10 Democrats, as is now believed, the Democrats would have a considerable lead, which might be maintained when all the counties have reported.

DEFEAT INDICATED FOR 17 OF 19 SPECIAL PROPOSALS

All the Hyde Administration Consolidation Measures Are Believed to Have Been Voted Down.

A compilation, by the Associated Press, of the vote on the 19 constitutional, referendum and initiative proposals on the ballot in Tuesday's election, appears to indicate the defeat of all except two. These are No. 2, to strike the word "male" from the constitutional qualifications of voters; and No. 3, to make the motor vehicle license fees available for maintenance of roads.

The compilation of the unofficial vote on these proposals is not complete, and cannot be made more nearly complete than it is, as correspondents report that little interest is shown, in many counties, in the counting of votes on the proposals. The result in some cases will not be certain until the official count is made by the Secretary of State. The unofficial returns available for the Associated Press estimate cover about one-third the State.

In the counties heard from, the second and third proposals received substantial majorities. The vote in the rural sections appears to have been generally unfavorable to the other proposals. In Shelby County No. 4, for creating a state departmnet of labor, received a majority. In Osage and St. Clair counties, all the proposals were defeated.

The City of St. Louis and Jackson County, embracing Kansas City, gave majorities for the proposals, except the first, which proposed to increase the pay of members of the Assembly from $5 a day for 70 days to $10 a day for 100 days. The vote on proposal 18, a so-called workmen's compensation measure, also was unfavorable in the cities.

The result now indicated is the defeat of all the consolidation measures of the Hyde administration, the congressional and senatorial redistrictings, the county unit school measure, the workmen's compensation law and the substitute proposal put forward by certain lawyers, and several measures of local import, particularly in Kansas City.

CALIFORNIA VOTES TO TIGHTEN PROHIBITION

Rigid Enforcement Measure Giving Greater Power to the State Courts Adopted.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 11.—The eighteenth amendment has been tightened in California by the adoption of a State prohibition measure, known as the Wright act, according to returns today so nearly complete that it is believed the scattered precincts unreported cannot change the result. The latest figures gave a majority of 29,621 in favor of a "bone dry" State. The vote was: For, 407,952; against, 378,331.

The Wright act not only upholds the prohibition amendment to the Constitution and the provisions of the Volstead act, but vests the State courts with jurisdiction and imposes upon prosecuting officers, grand juries and peace officers the duty to enforce the Federal law, and permits local enforcement of ordinances based on that law. The effect of this amendment will be to bring about direct and active co-operation between State, county and city officials and Federal officers in enforcing the prohibition laws.

Light Wine and Beer Measure in Ohio Defeated by 187,854.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CLEVELAND, O., Nov. 11.—Wet leaders are endeavoring to ascertain just where all the votes came from, after final figures tabulated yesterday showed the proposed beer and light wine amendment had been snowed under.

Cleveland, Columbus, Cincinnati, Toledo, Dayton and other large cities in the State all voted two and three to one for the amendment, and in the foreign settlements the vote was ten to one.

Always voting dry, the country towns and villages throughout the State were unanimously against the amendment. Never in the history of the State has the dry vote even approached the plurality of 187,854 reached in the election of last Tuesday. The vote was 710,364 for and 898,218 against the amendment.

Women voted on an average of ten to one against the amendment and are blamed by the wet leaders for the defeat of the amendment.

Amendment Favoring Volstead Act Modification in Illinois Wins.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Nov. 11.—Latest figures on the proposed amendment modifying the Volstead law to permit the manufacture and sale of wine and beer show that Illinois voted in favor of the amendment in the ratio of two to one. The drys, to a large extent, declined to vote on the issue, under instructions from their headquarters.

The vote probably represents the extreme "wet" sentiment in the State. The liquor forces assert that all Congressmen and Senators from the State are under a mandate, as the result of Tuesday's vote to work for the amendment. The dry forces, however, maintain that the vote means nothing but the expression of the saloon forces.

Massachusetts Against Conformity of State and National Laws.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BOSTON, Nov. 11.—The voters of Massachusetts at the State eletcion last Tuesday refused to approve an act to make the laws of Massachusetts concerning liquor conform with the Federal statute. The vote was: Yes, 319,965; no, 423,633. Acceptance of the act would have given local police the same powers as are now possessed by the Federal prohibition agents.

MISSOURI U. PROFESSOR TAKES BACK BOOTLEGGING CHARGES

He Had Declared Columbia Police Were Aiding in Sale of Liquor to Students.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Nov. 11.—Dr. Charles T. Ellwood, professor of sociology in the University of Missouri, who Monday afternoon, before the Columbia Public Welfare Society, charged that the police of Columbia were "in league with bootleggers and were aiding them to sell liquor to university students," yesterday issued a signed and sworn statement retracting all he said and apologizing to the Columbia police force.

In his retraction Dr. Ellwood declares that he has done the police a great injustice and says he hopes no one will believe what he said about the force at the meeting of the Public Welfare Society. He also says that he visits the university campus daily and that he has never seen an intoxicated student there.

Following the speech, Mayor Gordon called a meeting of the City Council to investigate the charges. Chief of Police Rowland asked that Dr. Ellwood be placed under oath, which was done. Dr. Ellwood then admitted he knew of no students who had been drinking, that he had seen none intoxicated, that he knew of no one who sold them liquor and that he did not mean to charge that the police actually sold the liquor, but only that they winked at infractions.

President J. C. Jones of the university took a hand in the matter, and after his investigation the sworn statement of Dr. Ellwood was forthcoming.

ASSOCIATION TO PLAN MOVE FOR MODIFICATION OF DRY LAW

Antiprohibition Body to Convene on Nov. 20 and 21 to Outline Activity.

A convention of the various branches of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment will be held at Hotel Jefferson on Nov. 20 and 21. The secretaries and general officials of the various State organizations will attend. Efforts will be planned for a modification of the Volstead act relative to light wines and beer.

William H. Stayton, general manager of the parent association, announces that unless the various states in the 1924 campaign come out in their platforms, approved by their nominees for Congress, for a modification of the Volstead act relative to beer and light wines, the national association will place independent candidates in the field.

OFFICIAL COUNT SHOWS 168,848 VOTES HERE

62 Per Cent of Registration—3 Men Who Led in Unofficial Figures Lose.

The official count of the vote in Tuesday's election in St. Louis, now being made by the Election Board, showed yesterday that the total vote cast in the city was 168,848, or 62 per cent of the registration, which was 272,298. In the presidential election of 1920, the vote was 281,249, or 89 per cent of the registration of that year, which was 315,018.

Senator Reed's St. Louis plurality over R. R. Brewster was shown as 43,741. The Socialist vote for William M. Brandt for the Senate was 2803, or 1.6 per cent of the total. In the 1920 election, Debs, Socialist candidate for the presidency, polled 10,107 votes, or 3.5 per cent.

The count was completed yesterday on the offices of Senator, Representatives in the lower house from the Fourth Legislative District, and Justices of the peace and Constables.

The count as to the senatorship was: Brewster, 60,884; Reed, 104,625; Brandt, 2803; Cox, Socialist Labor 279; Breckinridge Long (name written on ballot), 36; scattering, 10.

As to the Fourth Legislative District, the official count showed the election of all four Democratic candidates. The unofficial count appeared to show the election of R. G. Davidson, Republican, over William McGee, Democrat, but the official count shows McGee's election. This increases the St. Louis Democratic representation in the lower house from five to six, as two Democrats appear, by the unofficial figures, to have been elected in the Third District.

The four Democrats elected in the Fourth District were William C. Cordry, Con J. O'Brien, James L. Wren Jr. and McGee.

As to Justices of the Peace and Constables, the official returns show two changes from the result indicated by the unofficial count. In the fifth Justice district, both Republican candidates for Justices and Constables were elected. The Justices elected are Clark W. Martin and Ben Murmann, and the Constables are Gabriel Roth and Ira A. Dorsey. The unofficial count appeared to show the election of E. J. O'Hare and W. F. Canty, Democrats, to one of the two places as Justice and Constable, respectively. With the exception of those the results in the Justice districts are as shown in the Post-Dispatch story Wednesday of the unofficial count.

MONUMENT TO VETERANS TO BE DEDICATED ON NOV. 19

40-Foot Shaft, Which Cost $25,000, Stands at Entrance to Oak Grove Cemetery.

Dedicatory ceremonies of the Soldiers, Sailors and Marines Memorial Monument will be held Sunday, Nov. 19, at 3 p. m., at Oak Grove Cemetery at Carson and St. Charles Rock roads.

The ceremonies, which will be open to the public, will be preceded by a parade of organizations of veterans. The ceremonies will be both civic and military. Mayor Kiel or his representative will speak. Col. John H. Parker will accept the monument on behalf of the army; Commander H. T. Kays, on behalf of the sailors, and Capt. Gilder D. Jackson for the marines. Charles M. Hay will speak and there will be a program of music. Invitations have been extended to Gold Star mothers, the Children of the American Loyalty League, the World War Registrars and the Boy Scouts to occupy places on the platform.

The monument, which stands at the entrance to Oak Grove Cemetery, has been erected at the cost of $25,000. It is a 40-foot shaft of Bedford stone, and its base is a fountain. It is the first memorial of proportions in or around St. Louis to be completed and ready for dedication.

'The Tiger' Tells Why He Is Coming to America for the Last Fight of His Career

"I am Going to Talk for No Country, but for the Solidarity of Those Who Fought for Freedom and Won," Declares Clemenceau.

By FERDINAND TUOHY,
Of the Post-Dispatch Paris Bureau.

PARIS, Nov. 2.

"NOTHING in life so became him as his manner of leaving it." This thought occurred to me as I jogged and creaked in a 40-year-old diligence to St. Vincent-sur Jard, Vendee, a desolate spot on the Atlantic seaboard. That is where the country home of Georges Clemenceau is situated.

A mark of greatness is assuredly to know when to retire, and then, having done so, to keep retired in silence and composure—yet how many of our leaders have shown themselves capable of either? Many have been retired—the Kaiser, Ludendorff, the Crown Prince—but few have chosen to do so, and even those pushed off the stage have been unable to resist chanting memoirs from the wings. Wilson and Venizelos appear the only two comparable in gesture to Clemenceau, though the former may have been kept from talking only by infirmity, and the latter by the desire to reassume control in Greece. Georges Clemenceau's withdrawal, on the other hand, was definitely self-selected.

When beaten for the presidency in the fall of 1919 by the hopeless Deschanel, "Father Victory" of the year before, the idol of two continents, grasped two essentials: First, the ingratitude of his own countrymen, and, second, that age prohibited his ever again standing for the one post he had still to occupy under the republic. Physically, he was still a wonder; mentally, no less. A smaller man, still thus endowed, might have chosen to make himself a thorn in the side of those who had rejected him, to have pussy-footed around the corridors of Parliament, intriguing and spitting venom and publishing revelations in self-justification. That is what Lloyd George one day will do (he seems to have undertaken the part already), and it is what nine out of 10 of the great do. Their heads packed with secrets, vanity wins in this age of first-person publicity, and they talk—sometimes with an eye to persons and nations, sometimes regardless of consequences.

Built Cabin on Clifftop.

Clemenceau quit. Just that. The fighter of 50 years—last survivor of the Bordeaux Parliament of 1870—one winter's day three years ago went down to his native Vendee, roamed about the coast for a day or two, then selected a wild, wind-swept and uninhabited clifftop and there built a Vendee cabin. I believe I am right in saying that the only words he has uttered in public since then were spoken at the unveiling of a memorial to him in the neighboring village of Jard (words of encouragement of youth), and the only lines he has written were those to the New York World, signifying his intention of visiting the United States. Like Romain Bolland, he has placed himself above the tumult, and I am convinced that what he told me is true, namely, that he never again, under any circumstances, intends re-entering it. Now ponder this gesture of retirement when Clemenceau crosses the Atlantic. Picture again the "Grand Old Man of France," the "Pere la Victoire," the "Tiger," the Georges Clemenceau of that stunning interlude in human events, 1917-1919; the avalanche of facts, national, military, political, personal—above all personal—that must have been docketed away in that keen, penetrating brain. Then ponder the temptation to talk that he has had to withstand.

For bear in mind, he is a fallen man in this land of France, a fashioner of pro-English treaties, a failure with a few years more, at most, to run. Half from disgust, half from a determination not to make things any worse by revelation, Georges Clemenceau prefers to concentrate on a mysterious book "having nothing to do with the war or the peace."

Early Visit Recalled.

One more than suspects that he keeps in daily liaison with his henchman and hope, Andre Tardieu, and that the daily articles the latter contributes to Clemencist organ, the Echo Nationale, are highly colored by communications from the village of St. Vincent, yet they lack punch for lacking the name of Clemenceau. To all intents and purposes Clemenceau has kept to his retirement. Now, for a brief while, the World has got him out of it. He crosses the Atlantic to tell plain tales from the cliffs; how and why is now common knowledge. Yet at the risk of slight reiteration I shall write again of my meeting with him, for it will remain indelible for vividness. The old crusader was seated in front of his shanty looking out across the ocean. About 60 years before he had looked out otherwise, and from the same coast, but planning what a different journey! A brilliant young journalist of the boulevards, but desirous of learning English, he had set sail—literally—for America, there to take a job as schoolmaster pro tem while equipping himself.

What a different mission lay ahead now, and what a different America he would find! Having last seen it aslumber in its age of innocence!

It takes the best part of 24 hours to reach Clemenceau from Paris, though the distance is scarcely more than from New York to Washington. First, you jolt in an ancient train for 12 hours to the coast of Lower Brittany, then you take a still more ancient trolley car and continue jolting into the wilds to a terminus called Talmont. Then you ask for Monsieur Clemenceau, and are informed in almost incomprehensible dialect that he is 10 kilometers away, "over there" (pointing in the direction of the sea), and that there are two ways of reaching him, either you walk or hire a conveyance at the White Horse. I choose the latter and presently am seated on the box beside the driver of a diligence such as has been made familiar through the pages of De Maupassant and Flaubert, and my jolt begins again, only now 10 times worse.

Drives About in Auto.

In an hour and a half of Victorian discomfort I manage to extract in half a dozen sentences from the coachman: "Le Vieux"—that is how they refer to Clemenceau in these parts—"is often about the countryside, usually in a small automobile which he drives so fast that we all pull up when we see him coming. He talks to everyone, even the priest—and he an unbeliever! We hear he is going on a journey. He is younger than any of us and always joking. This is his country and he is right in coming back to it. Paris (infinite scorn), what is Paris?"

At last we spy, silhouetted against the sky line, a long, white cabin perched on a hill and overlooking the ocean. Pines are all about it.

"That's where Le Vieux lives (pointing with a whip). You must walk the rest of the way. We can go no farther."

So I do the last few hundred yards on foot and present myself, jaded, dirty, unshaved, stiff and sore in every limb to Monsieur Georges Clemenceau, for on seeing a stranger within the gates "Le Vieux" had slumped challengingly forward.

"What can I do for you, a journalist? I'll wager you are a journalist. Isn't it so? Well, I'm going to America, and I've got nothing more to say."

"But, Monsieur le President (the rest in English), I—that is to say, we—feel rather responsible for your going"——

"Eh? What's that? Ah, the New York World! Yes. 'Tis as you say. I go because of what poor Kipling says. But I had long been planning to go. But come in! You Parisians do not like rain!"

Clothes Hang in Folds.

As I followed the "Tiger" into his lair I studied his extraordinary "get-up." He seemed to have things hanging about him in folds, but what and where and how they began or ended was beyond me. Knee breeches and gaiters I detected, also the famous gray cotton gloves which he was never without all through the treaty making (in fact, without which he is never seen, as they conceal a skin malady) and crushed and shapeless soft hat perched on his head. The general effect, due to the loosely hanging clothes on an already massive, square frame, was one of great strength, the only touches of senescence being stooping shoulders and a quick stumping along instead of walking. The Clemenceau cabin is a four-room affair, all side by side. At one extremity is the kitchen and bedroom of a faithful old Breton cook. Next comes the room of the valet, a young man who saved Clemenceau's life on one of the latter's many excursions to the trenches. Then comes the dining room. Then the Tiger's lair, in which I now found myself. I noticed forthwith a complete absence of any momentoes or photographs appertaining to the war. In their stead were big-game trophies from the Indian jungle and the Nile—lion's skulls and the like—and Clemenceau could not have been prouder of them had they been the skulls of Ludendorff, Lloyd George and a few others. A book shelf, a bed, a table and two chairs composed the fittings of the rooms.

As I glanced around, Clemenceau, like the good journalist that he is, voluntarily constructed his day for me: "I sleep seven hours, always soundly, from 8 in the evening till 3. At 3 I get up and sit down at this table and write. Yet, it is pitch dark, but that is when I work best—and never better than when the wind is howling outside and the rain beating against the window pane in front of me. It is beautiful then to look out over the ocean. What am I writing? May you have the rights? Why, it has nothing whatever to do with war or peace and no American paper would give a cent for it. (Clemenceau talks fluent English, or, rather, American.) I make my own coffee at 3 in the morning in order not to disturb the household. At 9 I stop work for the day and either do some gardening or go for a tramp or go motoring. Then, too, there is a constant stream of visitors from Paris and it is hard for me to hide myself round this shanty."

I learned that the "Tiger" has two meals of

MICHIGAN'S NEW DEMOCRATIC SENATOR

Why Woodbridge Ferris Won in Birthplace and Stronghold of Republicanism

NEWBERRY MUST GET OUT, HE DECLARES

Schoolmaster Who Ran 100,000 Ahead of His Ticket, Is Extraordinary Man With an Extraordinary Issue—That of Vindicating Michigan's Honor by Forcing Out the Senator Who Brought State Ill Fame.

Founder of Ferris Institute Had an Efficient Organization for Campaign in 20,000 of His Former Students—For League of Nations and Soldier Bonus, Against Repeal of Excess Profits Tax and Is "Dry as a Chip."

By PAUL Y. ANDERSON,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

BIG RAPIDS, Mich., Nov. 10.

IN the middle of a spacious, old-fashioned library, bright with green ferns, green plush furniture and a green Brussels carpet, stood a tall man whose serious, spectacled face was given a singularly benign expression by a crown of silvery hair. He was saying "The result of the Michigan election was a victory for common honesty and decency in elections. There were other elements, but all were overshadowed by that one. Michigan has repudiated Newberryism. Newberry must get out of the Senate to complete the vindication of Michigan's honor. If he does not get out voluntarily he will be ejected. Nothing short of that will be acceptable." The speaker was Woodbridge N. Ferris, Michigan's new Democratic Senator-elect. He is 69 years old. Prior to Tuesday, the last Democrat to be elected United States Senator from Michigan was Charles E. Stuart, and he was elected in the year that Woodbridge N. Ferris was born. Democratic Senators in Michigan are scarce.

The election of a Democrat to the United States Senate from Michigan last Tuesday was a startling event. Two things made it possible, namely, an extraordinary issue and an extraordinary candidate. The issue was Newberryism, meaning, explicitly, the business of acquiring office through the unlimited expenditure of money, particularly as it was expended in 1918 to acquire the office of United States Senator for Truman H. Newberry. The candidate was Ferris. Newberryism, it will be granted, was an extraordinary issue. And Ferris undoubtedly is an extraordinary man. It was the combination of these two elements that culminated in the event.

Ran 100,000 Ahead of Ticket

The unprecedented amount of "scratching" which re-elected Senator James A. Reed in Missouri was almost trifling compared with that which elected Ferris in Michigan. The Republican Governor, Alex J. Groesbeck, was re-elected over his Democratic opponent by a majority of approximately 130,000. Ferris defeated the Republican Senator, Townsend, by about 15,000. He did, in fact, run nearly 100,000 votes ahead of his ticket.

What manner of man is he that could do this thing? He is a schoolmaster. He is head of the Ferris Institute at Big Rapids, one of the most unusual institutions of education in the country—a school where the average age of the students is 21 years, where grandmother, father and son study side by side—a school whose members include lumberjacks, copper miners, roustabouts, stenographers, bank clerks and boys and girls of high school age. The story of the school is inseparable from Ferris' own story. Coming 38 years ago from Pittsfield, Ill., where he had been City Superintendent of Schools, Ferris founded the Ferris Institute for the avowed purpose of affording education to men and women who had missed the opportunity to get it early in life. He set up in a rough country of rough men.

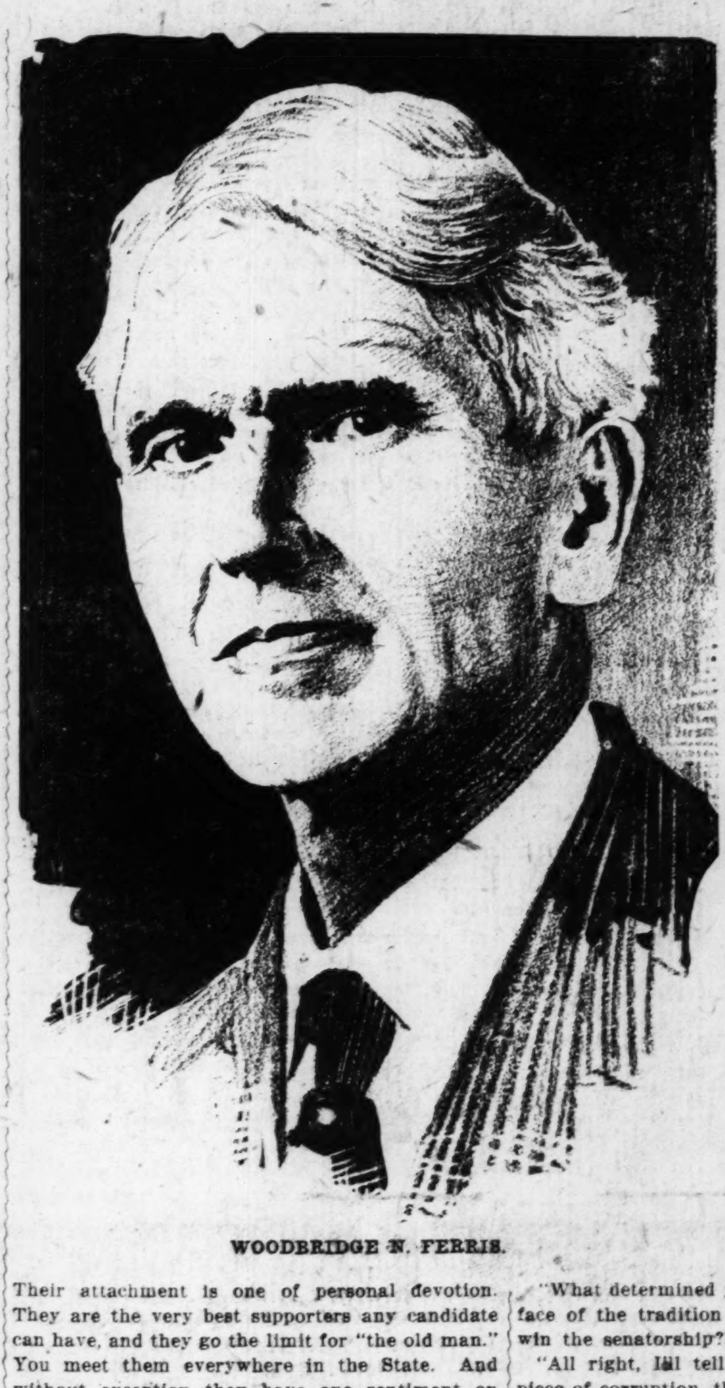
"I had two ideas in mind," he said. "First, I had sympathy for the people who had missed their chance and wouldn't get another. Second, I believed that such a school would make money."

Both those ideas have been justified. More than 40,000 men, women, boys and girls have passed through the Ferris Institute, 20,000 of whom are now scattered throughout Michigan in every conceivable walk of life, from Congressman to lumberjack, and the founder has amassed a comfortable fortune, building up his school to the proportions, in enrollment and equipment, of a small university. It has never received a cent of endowment or contribution and would accept none. It pays 6 per cent dividends and reserves 4 per cent for sinking fund, and the surplus is divided every year among the instructors.

Ferris a Practical Altruist

And there you have the key to Ferris' character and philosophy of life. He is a practical altruist. His motto might well be, "Help your fellow man and get 6 per cent." He is a philanthropist, at a fair rate. He believes in assisting the under dog to his feet, and making him pay for the assistance. He is an idealist, and a banker.

The Democratic organization in Michigan isn't much. It suffers from undernourishment and from a lack of votes. But Ferris has an organization which, for feverish loyalty, probably has no equal. It is composed of those 20,000 former students, living in the State. They receive no pay, either in money or office. They want none.



WOODBRIDGE N. FERRIS.

Their attachment is one of personal devotion. They are the very best supporters any candidate can have, and they go the limit for "the old man." You meet them everywhere in the State. And without exception they have one sentiment on that subject. They elected him Governor in 1912 and again in 1914, and theirs was the influence that unquestionably made possible his majority in the recent election.

Whenever you ask a citizen of Michigan about Ferris, he smiles and says: "The old man certainly has a mind of his own." If they are Ferris men, the smile is admiring; if not, it is rueful. The new Senator-elect certainly has a mind of his own. His record abounds with illustrations of the fact.

Stopped Strike With Guards

Shortly after his election as Governor in 1912—a result of the Bull Moose defection, which was repeated in 1914, a strike occurred in the copper-mine region of Upper Michigan. The miners assumed a militant attitude, and the operators imported an army of armed guards, supplied by a none-too-savory agency. A call for troops was sent to the Statehouse. The miners protested against such a move, and the operators were divided over whether they wanted militia or would prefer to let their own guards handle the situation. The stage was set for a grim drama. Gov. Ferris mobilized every national guard unit in the State, and dispatched a formidable expedition to the strike area. He personally directed their conduct day by day over the telephone.

The result was a surprise to both sides of the controversy. The miners were not molested. They were permitted to march and hold meetings every day. They did not inflict one cent of damage. The Waddell men, a tough outfit by all accounts, proved less amenable, and the Governor finally directed the guardsmen to expel them from the State, which was done summarily.

Then he did a more astounding thing. He summoned the head of the copper interests to Lansing and raked him over the coals ferociously for his employment policy. In effect he said: "You have been making money hand over fist—rolling it in. Then a depression came along and you cut wages. Why, when you were prosperous, didn't you share your prosperity with your men? You are perfectly willing, even insistent, that they share adversity with you, but when dividends were coming in big, you had nothing to say to them. If you had shared the fat years with them, they would have been willing to share the lean ones with you. Your troubles are the result of your own rotten selfishness."

The strike was settled, and the copper interests later cut up a melon of half a million dollars among their employes.

Again, following Ferris' nomination for the senatorship last April, the Democratic State convention met to formulate a platform. A resolution was introduced, indorsing Henry Ford for President. Now, Ferris likes Ford. He admires Ford's business ability and he sympathizes with his labor policy. The leaders of the convention were favorable to the resolution. But Ferris put his foot on it.

"I am going to make the race in this campaign, and I want to make my own issues," he told the leaders. "I have no objection to Ford, but I seriously object to having the issues in this campaign confused by the injection of the Ford element, which is quite irrelevant. The issue is going to be Newberryism, first; Newberryism, second, and Newberryism, third.

"After that I propose to say something about tariff, the excess profits tax, ship subsidy, the Esch-Cummins law and other Republican administration measures. If that leaves any time it will be devoted to a discussion of Newberryism. There is no place for Ford.

The resolution perished in committee.

There has been some speculation over the effects of this. Ford never openly indorsed Ferris' candidacy. Privately he spoke of it with favor, and repeatedly promised to make a public announcement of that attitude. But he never did. Maybe it was pique, but more likely it was the conviction that he could best aid Ferris quietly. Certainly he was not hostile.

"What determined you to make this race, in the face of the tradition that a Democrat could not win the senatorship?" the writer asked Ferris.

"All right, I'll tell you. Here was a colossal piece of corruption, the most daring and awful in the history of Michigan and probably in the history of the United States. I wanted to see if they could get away with it. I felt that if they could the perpetuity of free government in this country was in danger. I knew that if that sort of thing could be repeated here and elsewhere, representative government in the United States was lost. I wanted to make a test of it. As a matter of fact, I wasn't any too sanguine about the outcome.

"The opportunity invited. Senator Townsend was a candidate for re-election. Twelve years ago he went to the Senate by defeating Julius Caesar Burrows, who had played a part in the Lorimer case similar to that which your Senator Spencer played in the Newberry case. Townsend was a reformer then. He voted to unseat Lorimer and to unseat Stephenson. But he got in with the old gang. He became influential and powerful in the Senate, through that association. Then the Newberry case came along, the gang had determined to seat Newberry, and Townsend had to stick with them. He defended Newberry in the Senate, and voted to seat him. So for the purposes of our campaign, he was the symbol of Newberryism. That made the issue plain. To beat Townsend in Michigan was to beat Newberryism. That is why I entered the fight."

In his post-election statement Senator Townsend attributed his defeat to the women of the State. "They became convinced during the campaign," he said, "that a great moral wrong had been committed, and that I had been party to it."

Appealed Especially to Women

"I appealed especially to the women voters," Ferris admitted. "I felt that they had a keener moral sense than men, because of their rearing and atmosphere, and, further, because they have not been in politics long enough to lose that fine edge. I think I was justified."

The Republicans tried desperately to divert the issue, by substituting the League of Nations for Newberryism. In the face of Ferris' relentless and unremitting attack they were unsuccessful. As an illustration of how their effort was treated, the Detroit News, Ferris' chief and almost only newspaper supporter, satirically remarked on the evening of the election: "Chairman Cady of the Townsend Campaign Commmittee said late today that he was still confident the voters of Michigan would reject the League of Nations. There seems to have been some misunderstanding on his part, as it is well known that the chief issue in the late campaign was the free and unlimited coinage of silver at the ratio of 16 to 1."

An effort to align labor against Ferris was also made, upon the basis of his action in sending troops to the copper strike zone in 1913. Posters headed with the legend: "Remember Bloody Calumet," were circulated in all industrial centers—and 60 per cent of Michigan's population is industrial. But labor remembered "Bloody Calumet" perfectly, especially the fact that it was not bloody at all. And the very suggestion of Newberry's friend Townsend as the champion of labor provoked uncontrollable laughter. Ferris carried Republican Detroit handsomely, and virtually all the other large cities.

Kept League in Background

The fact is, that Ferris is for the League of Nations, and said so, but he kept it in the background. He explained his attitude to the writer as follows: "The League, I think, will come eventually, but only as a result of a growth of popular sentiment for it. In my judgment, this is not the time to crowd it, and I do not expect to push it in the Senate, unless there is a marked change in public sentiment."

Soon after the campaign began, a reporter for Hearst's paper, the Detroit Times, interviewed Ferris. The paper was distinctly inclined to support his candidacy, and newspaper support for Ferris was the scarcest thing in Michigan. The reporter asked Ferris point-blank for his attitude on the League. Ferris replied just as bluntly that he was for it. The reporter, disappointed (because the Hearst press is violently opposed to the League), attempted to take the candidate to task.

"Now, see here, young man," said Ferris, "you must understand plainly now that I am not a Hearst Democrat."

The "Old Man," as they say here, has a mind of his own. And the Times supported him anyhow, if not with customary conviction.

About one-third of Ferris' speeches were devoted to the legislative program of the Harding administration, and he summarized his position there for the writer briefly:

"The repeal of the excess profits tax law was a damnable and cowardly act. We could sympathize with our poor millionaires—20,000 of them—who couldn't bear to pay this tax. We took it off of them, but we didn't have anything for the soldiers. It should never have been repealed. Taxes should be paid by the people who can best afford to pay them. Yes, I'm in favor of paying the soldier a bonus and said so.

Proposal to Give Away Ships

"The ship subsidy bill is a proposal to give away our ships for a song, and then guarantee the profits of the corporations to which we give them. It is incomprehensible to me how any honest man can support such a bill.

"The worst thing about the tariff to my mind is not so much its effect of protecting Big Business—although that is bad enough—as the fact that it is such an absolutely damn-fool theory. Here we have all the money. Europe owes us and can only get money to pay us by selling us goods—and then we erect a tariff wall to keep out the goods. Imbecile.

"The Esch-Cummins law should be modified or repealed. I can't see this business of guaranteeing the returns of private investments out of the public treasury. If the railroads, why not all other business? Where will it stop? And more especially do I object to a guarantee based on their own appraisal of the value of their property, which is several billions too high. Then I want high inheritance taxes. Make them stiff. Let the young fellows get out and work for a living. I don't object to a man having a million dollars if he has performed a million dollars' worth of services. But I strenuously object to a fellow having a million because his father performed a service."

"Are you wet or dry," he was asked. "Dry as a sycamore chip," he rejoined. "I regard a mild form of booze as I would a mild form of Newberryism, or a mild form of the drug habit."

From these, and other opinions elucidated by the speaker, it was quite apparent that he was far from being simply a partisan Democrat. It was suggested that his convictions might frequently align him in the Senate with such progressive Republicans as Borah, Brookhart and La Follette.

A Single Taxer at Heart

"I don't doubt it," he replied. "I belong with the liberals. I particularly admire Senator Borah. The fact is," he added, as one communicates a scandalous secret, "I am a single-taxer at

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

A "He-Man" Points With Alarm.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

ONE of the rapidly growing evils that American manhood has got to take cognizance of and put down, if we are to return to sound principles, is "modern woman," with all her so-called "rights." To accomplish this at this late day will require no little straight thinking and courageous acting on the part of all "he-men." As a son, husband and father, the writer honors noble womanhood as much as any man, but he insists that the modern woman movement is unnatural and wrong from every standpoint; that many of our present woes can be directly traced to it, and that we are inviting disaster in the future to permit it to carry on its ambitious program of conquest.

It is becoming more and more manifest every day that this new force is insiduously eating at the vitals of our civilization. It creates an inverse order of things. "Modern woman," flushed by a series of uninterrupted victories, is today very ambitious to dominate all the so-called intellectual pursuits, i. e., those pursuits where the "gift of gab" is the prime requisite, and the wielding of arbitrary power the great reward. Politics is their great field. A Governor recently appointed a woman to fill an unexpired term in the United States Senate. With all due respect to the dear old lady, this was a serious mistake. It is an opening wedge. Unless this question is met fairly and squarely by "he-men" this generation may witness Congress 50 per cent "she-men" and 50 per cent "he women," with a lady President in the White House. All things are measured by their results. The results of "he-women" in politics is bad, and therefore they should be outlawed by "he-men."

Twenty years ago, when satires were written depicting woman in her "sphere of activity" in the year 2000, when man was pictured in the kitchen with the children, while mother was down at the office, the picture seemed overdrawn. Not so today. Who can say what 20 years more will bring forth?

"Modern woman" was started on her way by the same quacks who grafted on us the initiative and referendum, the Eighteenth Amendment and all the other nostrums, and a nice mess it is today. But there has got to be a starting point to put the house in order, so why not begin now? Thomas Marshall said, facetiously: "What this country needs is a good 5-cent cigar," but I say unto you, "What this country needs are some red-blooded 'he-men.'"

A "HE-MAN."

Stay Out of Turkey.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

ENGLAND is in trouble again with the Turks. She would drag us into her filthy mire in the name of Christianity. Of course, our pro-English churches are screeching at the top of their lungs, with the same idea in view. This must not happen. Let's mind our own business.

In Defense of Truck Drivers.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I WOULD like to say that if the police would enforce the law on boulevard stops there would be more passenger-car drivers in jail. They would not have a place in St. Louis big enough to hold court the next day. I am a truck driver and drive a five-ton, heavy-duty coal truck, and I never fail to stop unless the officer gives me the right of way.

The trouble with the passenger-car driver is that when a truck comes to a stop and he is behind the truck, he cannot get started fast enough; he toots his horn and wants to go right now. The way some fellows drive touring cars, they should have them taken away from them. I know. I see them every day.

FRANK FAULSTICK.

If Another War Came.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I HAVE just finished reading one of the letters in the Post-Dispatch of Oct. 12, signed W. F. L., and I agree with him on everything except the straw vote he speaks about being taken from the war veterans of the country on their stand and course of action in the event of another war, in which this country was involved. He says: "I doubt if 1 per cent would raise a finger toward defending the country." And he answers because it is no honor to defend a country where profiteers are allowed to live on ill-gotten fortunes while the country's defenders are ignored and cast off as has-beens of no account.

I think he is radically wrong in this statement. If the United States was engaged in another war and should pass another draft bill, they will all come back like good little boys to get their slum, soup, lice and lead.

Why envy the industrious, the successful, and the brainy profiteers? I went to France with the Sixteenth Infantry, First Division. I saw the bloody battlefields also, and had I been left back, and had brains enough, I would have tried to make all the money I could. I knew long before the war that the rich and well-to-do had no use or respect for a soldier, only when their hides are in danger of being punctured by the enemies' bullets. But I care nothing for their opinions. I pay no attention to their high-powered, patriotic speeches. But when Uncle Sammy wants us to fight in another war we will all go like nice little boys and fight like hell.

RUFUS B. FREEMAN.

A SUPERMAN'S JOB.

The election, apparently, has aroused Mr. Harding from his elegant, amiable, but fatal, lethargy. He knows now that a President cannot successfully let the Government run itself. He has resolved, therefore, to assume active leadership. He intends, further, according to the news from Washington, to liberalize the Republican party. His associates will be two of his Cabinet officers, Mr. Hughes and Mr. Hoover.

Whether Mr. Harding will be equal to the task remains to be seen, but it is fair to say that the public will be pleasantly surprised should he succeed. To liberalize the Republican party is a Herculean enterprise—a cleaning out, indeed, of the Augean stables. It calls for qualities which Mr. Harding has never displayed and which his most laudatory friends have never attributed to him. Moreover, the choice of Mr. Hughes as an assistant is not only unfortunate, but it evidences Mr. Harding's inability to comprehend public sentiment or to vision the character of the task he has essayed.

The Republican party needs moral regeneration. It must attain honesty and sincerity. Can Mr. Hughes be expected to contribute to that reformation? As a defender of Newberry, as the author of the odious letter exonerating the Michigan corruptionist of blame or reproach, Mr. Hughes has identified himself forever with the most shocking event in the administration's discredited record. The public has rendered its judgment and Newberry and the Newberryites have been pronounced guilty.

Has it not yet been driven in on Mr. Harding that his administration was foredoomed to failure by the evasive platform and campaign of deception on which he was elected? In the 1920 contest it devolved on the candidate to be all things to all men on the paramount issue of the hour. The pilgrims to the Marion porch were of many minds. Pro-leaguers, ready to accept the covenant as written—drastic reservationists and mild reservationists—irreconcilables to whom any word or work of Wilson was anathema—the Tafts, the Wickershams, the Hugheses, the vindictive Lodges, the vitriolic Harveys—they all came and conferred and all went away rejoicing that what they wanted would be done. Such conflicting commitments were impossible, of course, of execution. But the deadly effect was that the administration's character was undermined from the beginning. The result has been spread before the nation. It is a bitter record of negation, of surrender to special interests, of an abject absence of moral responsibility to the people.

Mr. Harding has frequently disavowed any extraordinary qualities or attainments. He has seemingly enjoyed describing himself as an ordinary chap. Such modesty may have been becoming, but the attitude must now be discarded and the role of superman essayed. For it is a superman's job that confronts Mr. Harding, both as President of the United States and titular head of the Republican party.

A COURAGEOUS REFUSAL.

Through a technicality the Executive Committee in charge of the campaign to raise a Boy Scout fund of $150,000 have found a means of gracefully refusing a $15,000 gift offered in the name of the "Knights of the Ku Klux Klan of the City of St. Louis."

Such a gift does not grow on every bush. The Boy Scout executives, then, are to be commended for the courage of their action, which, we hope, was prompted by considerations of principle as well as of policy.

Undoubtedly there is a consideration of policy. The mortgage which would be imposed upon the Boy Scout movement by the acceptance of such a gift would repel other supporters of the movement, which is nonsectarian and includes in its members Protestants, Catholics and Jews.

Acceptance of Ku Klux favors, however, would involve principles close to the heart of the Boy Scout movement. It would be tantamount to an indorsement of a movement known to be addicted to the private administration of "justice" which is not justice at all and, in any case, is a defiance of the constituted authority of the land and a violation of law.

The Boy Scouts stand for exemplary citizenship and obedience of law. To admit of any teaching to the contrary, whether open or disguised, would be to corrupt the character of the organization and pronounce its death sentence.

Acceptance of cash gifts for good purposes is not ordinarily subject to question. But it cannot be gainsaid that gifts from organizations representing a cause do, to a certain extent at least, commit the recipient to that cause.

The purpose of the klan, moreover, in making dramatic presentation of considerable sums to causes of indubitable welfare is subject to question. If philanthropy were the only purpose the same gifts could be made individually rather than through the organization. There should be no "granting of indulgences" to anonymous organizations whose very anonymity affords them the opportunity of tampering with the public administration of justice and otherwise evading responsibility for action.

THUNDERING ACROSS THE CONTINENT.

Over blistering desert and snow-capped peaks, 11 hours in a very Jupiter's bag of thunderstorms, once missing a precipice by three feet at a height of 6800 feet and at a speed of more than a mile a minute, seeing nightfall in New Mexico and sunrise in St. Louis—where in all human experience or poet's fancy was ever a more enthralling, stupendous ride than that of Lieuts. MacReady and Kelly through clouds and sky from San Diego to Indianapolis?

The flight was disappointing only in that it fell short of its objective. Starting at the Pacific, it was to have ended at New York, on the Atlantic, without a stop. A leak in the engine radiater, which developed almost at the start, frustrated that purpose. A few hours more would have seen its realization. The marvel is that the machine with a defective engine could have been piloted as far as it was.

Endurance and resistance to adverse conditions make this flight a triumph for aviation. It is these attributes, not speed or trick flying, which will make aircraft a real servant of man. The MacReady-Kelly flight was a superdistance-endurance feat. For practical purposes it is not necessary that the transcontinental trip be made in one flight. Lieut. James H. Doolittle traversed the continent in September, this year, from Jacksonville to San Diego, with one stop, in 22 hours and 31 minutes; net flying time, 21 hours and 18 minutes. It is such flights as the one just attempted, and almost achieved, however, which bring out the mechanical defects that will result in types of machines which will conquer all conditions.

How marvelous are the conquests of science over superstition since Columbus steered his grotesque prow gropingly westward, or even since a speed of eight miles an hour, achieved by the first locomotive engine, was condemned as a blasphemy!

SENATOR REED'S RIVER PROJECT.

It is gratifying to note that the first purpose expressed by Senator Reed, in his renewed official term in the Senate, concerns the improvement of the waterways of the Mississippi Valley. He proposes an appropriation of $1,000,000,000 for a systematic project to improve the Mississippi and its tributaries.

An appropriation of $1,000,000,000 for a governmental scheme looks big, particularly just now when economy and less taxation are watchwords, but the proposal does not mean an expenditure of a billion next year or the year after. The expenditure would be spread over many years and as the project includes hydro-electric plants which would ultimately pay all the cost, the expenditure would be a paying investment. It would bring direct instead of indirect returns of the haphazard methods of river improvement. It would eliminate the waste of money and labor involved in the half-way, uncertain system now followed.

Doubtless Senator Reed mentioned the sum of $1,000,000,000 to express a round total sufficient to do the work, rather than a specific estimate of cost. That much may not be needed. The necessary amount would be estimated after a thorough investigation by competent engineers.

There is no doubt that the plan of formulating a complete system of river improvement and utilization, estimating its cost and appropriating a sum equal to the total estimated cost for expenditure as required, is the wisest and most efficient method of getting adequate results.

The late L. E. Cooley, chief engineer of the Chicago drainage canal, who planned and recommended the improvement of the Illinois River undertaken by the State of Illinois, devised a project to make a 14-foot channel from the lakes to the gulf, with several hydro-electric plants. He estimated the returns of the plants would pay for the work. That Henry Ford, whose practical judgment is recognized, believes that the utilization of waterpower on the rivers will bring returns on the investment, and is thinking of building a vast system of electricity-producing plants, is convincing evidence of the practicability and value of the scheme. It includes in addition to electrical plants a system of water traffic which would be worth to the country many billions.

Senator Reed is thinking in the right direction. There is invaluable service in the accomplishment of the project.

CLAIMS AGAINST GERMANY.

The American-German Mixed Claims Commission has opened its season in Washington under the presidency of former Justice William R. Day for the adjudication of claims of American citizens against Germany growing out of the great war. There are thus far about twelve hundred claimants with claims aggregating more than $300,000,000.

The proceeding now under way is unique in the history of the settlement of international claims in that one of the parties, Germany, is under express obligation to admit liability as to almost every conceivable character of claim and is at the same time precluded from proposing any counter-claims or set-offs. In the separate peace concluded with Germany by the United States we reserved all benefits accruing to the Allies under the Treaty of Versailles. Among these benefits is that of Article 63, in which Germany accepts responsibility for all loss and damage suffered by the Allied and associated Governments and their nationals as a consequence of the war, and that in Article 439, in which Germany agrees to waive all claims on her own part.

By Part VIII of the treaty compensation may be claimed from Germany for all injuries to civilians and their property, however inflicted, and to their surviving dependents, as well as for pensions and compensation in the nature of pensions to naval and military victims and to their dependents. The unqualified extent of liability thus imposed upon Germany might not unreasonably be construed to cover payments from the War Risk Bureau, the cost of hospitalization and even the proposed soldiers' bonus, if Germany were solvent.

The presumption of unlimited responsibility rests on the premise that Germany let loose the war and must pay, ignoring the fact that while there may be moral guilt in beginning an unjust war, there is no principle of public international law that enlarges the legal responsibility of a belligerent because it was the aggressor. War is the supreme and final appeal of all states in the protection of their well-being, and it brings into operation a great variety of laws defining the rights and duties of belligerents, regardless of their moral guilt or innocence. Among the rights is that to inflict any damage upon the enemy which has a military object. There are certain specific limitations upon a belligerent's means of injuring his enemy, designed to prevent needless and wanton injury and damage, yet it is settled as a principle of the laws of war that damage and injury inflicted in pursuit of a military object involves no liability. Nor can civilians complain if they suffer incidentally.

Noncombatants, that is, civilians, taking no part in hostilities, may not be made the object of direct attack. They are under the protection of the laws of war.

The usual rules of liability applied to claims for war damage are thus swept aside as to Germany by the terms of the treaty, though it does not appear from the three categories of claims formulated by the United States that it intends to present those having a questionable basis in previously established law. This is gratifying, since to embrace those and insist upon treaty rights to the full would constitute a distinct disservice to the law, with no possible compensating benefit.

It is to be hoped that none of the allied and associated Governments will seek to avail themselves of the full privileges of victorious power granted by the treaty as extra-legal concessions.

LAZARUS AT THE RICH MAN'S GATE.

JUST A MINUTE

Written for the POST-DISPATCH
By Clark McAdams

THE OLD GREEN TRAIL.

Eureka! I have found it.

Like Archimedes, after many years of patient search, I have made a discovery.

Homer and the ancient bards were on the wrong trail when they sought the Elysian Fields at the extremities of the earth.

So also was Ponce de Leon, and so still are those countless thousands of their restless disciples of today, who travel the world from Florida to California, from the Pyrenees to the Alps, from Babylon to Tokio, from Cape Horn to Panama, from Good Hope to the Pyramids, in quest of the fabled Kingdom of Rhadamanthus.

It was Homer, however, who gave me the clew about Eureka—Homer and my old friend Chief Unktahee, who first guided me to the old Green Trail.

For the road to the real Elysium leads out of the peaceful little village of Eureka, through the browsy pastures and fertile fields of the Meramec Valley to the foot of the hill known as "Old Baldy."

Here, bridging the Meramec, it winds through the river bottoms, turning to the left at Barque Creek junction, until it brings you to the bank of Big River. At this point it makes a sharp curve around a rock bluff and swerves again to the left across an ancient wooden bridge over Big River, cuts through a cornfield and brings up abruptly at the base of a steep, densely wooded hill.

Here, if you are lucky in having Chief Unktahee or one of his tribe to guide you, you will leave the beaten path, forcing your way through a tangled growth of brush and scrub oak, until you come upon the hidden entrance to the old Green Trail.

Up the steep, rocky hill, it leads, through a forest of evergreen cedars, a rough natural path, with stepping stones, washed to a clean marble whiteness by the rushing rain waters.

Hedging its sides, black and red hawthorne, poke, wild raspberry and dueberry bushes mingle with young cedars, sumach and scrub oak to form a colorful balustrade. Here and there a clearing in the forest gives a glimpse across the valley of the hills beyond.

Through one of these clearings the Chief will point out a spot known to him as "Arrowhead Field." Here, he will inform you, came many of the great Indian warriors and hunters for their ammunition, and, to substantiate his assertion, he will most likely invite you to search among the abundant deposits of flint rock until you pick up a few arrowheads.

A little farther up the trail you will pass a couple of ancient and deserted little log cabins. Here, if the Chief be in a talkative mood, you may hear a thrilling tale of guerilla days.

Up, up, up over the ridge, twists the trail until at last you reach the summit, where what little breath of air remains in your lungs is spent in one quick gasp of delighted astonishment, over the magnificent panoramic view which greets you.

To the north and west, the winding Meramec and the picturesque farms of the valley, with the little village of Eureka looking like a tiny group of toy houses against the background of the far distant ridges of Allenton.

To the south, a vast outlook of rolling hill country, with a glimpse of Big River and the rising smoke of the furnaces at Herculaneum, some 30 miles distant, near the banks of the mighty Mississippi.

To the east, the hills of Glencoe, the white limestone crags at Stonehenge and the outstanding buildings of the old Milliken farm, on the hill back of Crescent.

Were you the monarch of all you survey, from this point, you would rule over a beautiful circular kingdom, some 60 miles in diameter, for in all directions you have an unobstructed view of a most alluring section of the Ozark foothills.

Leaving the summit the trail now winds to the right, descending gradually for about half a mile, when it again takes an upward grade around a horseshoe bend to the top of a patriarchal old hill with a very bald pate.

Here you have another wonderful outlook over hill, stream and valley. From this point the trail swerves to the left in a steep descent into Tyson Valley, eventually linking up with the old Weber farm road and leading out to the Antire road, near Bennets Spring.

Truly, here is Elysium, in all its celestial glory and fabled perfection. Here, only a scant 30 miles from the mighty city of Laclede, in the silent serenity and rejuvenating atmosphere of the Ozarks, you may wander like Orpheus, through groves of cedar, pine, oak, maple and sycamore, singing in enchanted tones, exercising your lungs and limbs and live happily and healthily like the heroes of Homer, but—you must do your wandering afoot. No snorty, smelly, tin-panny, oil-canny, Fordmobile can carry you on high, via the Old Green Trail.

The road to Elysium is open "to hikers only."

A PIPE MOUTH.

I never knew
Until a man told me
That there is such a thing
As a pipe mouth.
Dear me, what next?
I suppose all men
Can tell from looking
At a man if he has
A pipe mouth.
And now I know
What a pipe mouth is:
It is a mouth that smiles,
It is a mouth that curves
Upward in congeniality.
It harbors no grudge.
It bears malice toward none.
It is a mouth that belongs
To a real man.

The MIRROR of PUBLIC OPINION

This column is designed to reproduce without bias the latest comment by the leading publicists, newspapers and periodicals on the questions of the day.

RENAISSANCE OF THE CHURCH.

GLENN FRANK in November Century.

THERE is no earthly reason why a man should use an essentially different vocabulary in the pulpit than he would use elsewhere. There is nothing sacred about the phrases of the fathers. Every word and every phrase that does not relate itself to the experience of the man in the pew is a handicap to the man in the pulpit. Again, the church must, if it is to give leadership to the forces making for a renaissance of our civilization, accept responsibility for the regeneration of institutions as well as for the regeneration of individuals. It must broaden its "scheme of redemption" to take in the social as well as the personal life. This does not mean that the church must work out a social and industrial program and tack it on to Christianity as a sort of postscript or afterthought. It must rest upon a real conviction that Christianity was in the beginning a social revolution as well as a personal message. And by "revolution" I do not mean a mere revolt in the interest of material rights alone, but a deep-reaching passion and program that was religious because it was social, not despite the fact that it was social. * * * I am convinced that the religious leader who does not boldly interpret the moral significance of social, political and industrial policies becomes in time only a "seller of rhetoric." If we will stop trying to reconstruct theology and undertake to rediscover Christianity, we shall find that far from asking the minister to preach a "new gospel," this is really an appeal to preach the "old gospel" which was for several centuries lost in the hands of men who were content to preach only half of the message of the Carpenter—the personal half. I do not suggest that the pulpit be transformed into a lecture desk. There are men aplenty to lecture on this or that platform. The world is awaiting, as someone puts it, for the religious leader who can talk economics so that men will feel in the presence of God.

CALIFORNIA AND THE BIBLE.

From the New York World.

THERE is fresh material for religious controversy of the sort the fundamentalists ought to enjoy in the decision of a California Court of Appeals that the King James version of the Bible is the gospel of a sect and therefore cannot be used in the public schools of that State. Mr. Bryan and his associates in the war on evolution base all their arguments on the infallibility of the King James translation. Yet it is now judicially ruled that there are other translations; that, in fact, not all Christians base their faith on the rendering which Mr. Bryan trusts; that the King James version is not a final authority among true believers. This, of course, has always been obvious, but the courts have never before given to the Bible the same legal status as the Book of Mormon, Science and Health, the Talmud, the Koran and other sacred books, as the decision of the California court undoubtedly does. In so doing it prohibits from the schools of the State not alone the King James version but both other versions, the Douay and the Revised. It bars public instruction in Christianity altogether. This will shock many people, but the decision seems to be wholly in accord with the Constitution. On the other hand, the King James Bible is a literary heritage from the days when Englishmen wrote great poetic prose. It has survived in spite of inaccuracies of translation because it is the greatest single piece of literature in the language. Aside from Shakspeare, there is nothing in any way comparable with it. It is a pity if it may not be studied for doctrine in California that it cannot be introduced merely as a classic. To miss it is to miss the best instruction in the use of the mother tongue.

Events in the Social World

Splendor of Russia's Pre-War Days, With Many Colored Tapestries and Fantastic Bakst Paintings, Forms Picturesque Setting for Debut Ball for Miss Helen Gratz at Home of Mr. and Mrs. Neill A. McMillan.

RARELY has a debutante been given a more lavish, picturesque, colorful and fantastic background for her bow to society than was Miss Helen Gratz at the Russian ball and banquet provided for her by her father, Mr. Benjamin Gratz, and her other fond sponsors, Mr. and Mrs. Neill A. McMillan, at the home of the latter, 23 Portland place, Friday night.

The pervading motif was derived from the Russian ideas introduced by a company of players headed by the actor, Balieff, in a burlesque of the art of Leon Bakst, called the "Chauve Souris." Having been driven from its native Moscow by the war this comedy was taken to Paris, where it took that jaded capital by storm and the past season came to New York, where it has become the rage among questers after novel and daring forms of entertainment.

So much elaborated was the scheme at this ball that its originators, who used to hold forth in a cellar—earning the name which, translated, means "the gray bat"—would have been dazzled.

The entire house, the entertainment, the viands, the costumes of the servitors, the music, were surcharged with the Russian idea. Every wall on the three spacious floors was hidden behind draperies, broad strips of color, green, orange, blue, cerise, lemon, magenta, juxtaposed in the manner of bold artist Bakst, who is to be remembered especially for his settings of the Imperial Russian Ballet which used to visit us in the more splendid days of Russia before the war. Overhanging these draperies were banners, icons, painted in fantastic patterns after the barbaric Tartar conception of beauty; broad ribbons woven of multicolored glass beads, and fantastic posters of dancing figures adorned with much metallic paint and jewel incrustations. The ceilings, as well, were hidden by canopies of brilliant draperies, from which hung huge lanterns in shapes and patterns suggestive of the turrets and minarets of Greek churches. The light shed by these was subdued, but permeated with colors making the palest gowns of the women guests take on rainbow hues. Multi-colored and orange-patterned cushions were piled about the walls in lieu of chairs.

The receiving party stood in an alcove which was a replica of a setting from "Katinka." Mrs. McMillan and Miss Gratz wearing Russian head-dresses of silver lace with their evening gowns, the one of jade velvet embroidered with silver and diamants, the other of primrose chiffon over green, trimmed with much narrow Val. lace, in which the wearer looked like a veritable rosebud.

Immediately the guests repaired to the dining room, done in the manner of a Russian cafe, where hors d' oevres were served from long counters and presenting in themselves a colorful picture; caviarre, radishes, olives, fruits arranged in designs, and suckling pigs, huge fish, hams, all ornately decorated with colored gelatines in designs in character with the whole Russian scheme. The waiters and musicians all rigged out in Russian blouses, baggy trousers, shiny boots, looked rather uncomfortable at first, but they soon got into the spirit of the scene. The dinner proper, a Russian menu, was served for 460 guests in the ball room on the third floor.

As soon as the ballroom was reached the character of the decorations and entertainment took on more of the burlesque and caricature of Leon Bakst, and the fun began. Bakst always was intemperate enough, but here was Bakst intoxicated, gone mad. Attempting to describe the wall posters, lanterns, decorations were as futile as attempting to interpret a cubist painting.

Guests sat upon long gaily-painted benches at tables covered with red and white checkered cloths, lighted by colored candles. Some of the foods were served from highly-colored wooden dishes. There were grotesque wooden soldiers and lounge lizard dolls for favors. The menu cards were original Chauve-Souris program covers.

On a stage dancers and singers in Russian costume entertained the diners. One troup was of native Russians who sang in their own language, danced and played the balalaika. The native performers interpreted further the Chauve-Souris idea in which the dialogue is improvised upon the inspiration of the moment. In the Russian language the audience did not always get their cues but were prompt enough at improvising turns of their own, and confusion added to the merriment. At a long table down the center of the room, presided over by Miss Gratz, sat the debutantes of the season and their escorts. At other tables placed at right angles were grouped the young married and belles and beaux of other seasons. The dinner lasted from 9 to 12, when a jazz band arrived and the room was cleared for dancing.

Mr. Gratz had at his table Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Simmons, Mr. and Mrs. Jackson Johnson, Mrs. Ralph McKittrick, Mrs. John P. Boogher, Mr. and Mrs. John T. Davis Jr., Miss Mary Lionberger, Mr. and Mrs. James Drummond. At Mr. McMillan's table were Mr. and Mrs. Frank O. Watts, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh McKittrick Jones, Mr. and Mrs. George Simmons, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel K. Catlin Jr., Mr. and Mrs. John Fowler, Mrs. Harry Langenberg, Mrs. Scott Porter, Claud Kennerly, Oliver Richards and John Johnston. At Mrs. McMillan's table were Mr. and Mrs. Louis La-Baume, Mr. and Mrs. J. Lawrence Mauran, Mr. and Mrs. John H. Holliday, Mrs. Henry Clarkson Scott, Mr. and Mrs. Edward A. Faust, Mrs. Oliver Richards and Scott Porter.

CAPTAIN AND MRS. The affair precedes a costume ball to be given by the officers of the Barracks and their wives.

Mrs. John Ockerson of 5305 Delmar boulevard will entertain all of the debutantes at a tea dance which she will give at the St. Louis Woman's Club Dec. 9.

MISS CELESTE VON PHUL of Seattle, Wash., who is making her debut in St. Louis this winter. She is a niece of Mrs. Charles E. Michel.

Mrs. W. A. Baker of Paris, France, arrived in St. Louis Thursday to visit her mother, Mrs. Sam Lazarus, 4481 West Pine boulevard. The visitor will remain only a week in the United States, leaving for New York the latter part of the week and sailing Saturday for her home.

Dr. and Mrs. J. Leland Boogher of 5431 Bartmer avenue departed last evening for Chattanooga, Tenn., where they will attend the Southern Medical Convention. They will remain away about a week.

Mrs. Edgar Rozier of 4937 Laclede avenue will entertain about 40 of the buds and their escorts at a buffet supper Nov. 26 complimentary to Miss Celeste Von Phul of Seattle, Wash., who is her guest for the winter. Miss Von Phul is a debutante.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Harold Baer were hosts at a bridge party Friday evening at their home, 31 Dartford avenue, University City. There were 40 guests.

Mrs. Francis J. Russell of Berkeley, Cal., the wife of the Rev. Dr. Russell, former pastor of the West Presbyterian Church, is a much entertained visitor in St. Louis. She has visited at the homes of several friends, and is at present the guest of Mrs. Charles Free. She will visit Mrs. John Garrett of Washington boulevard before her departure on Nov. 21 for her home. Dr. Russell will meet her in Denver and they will make the trip West together.

Mrs. J. Lawrence Hawk of 5843 Plymouth avenue gave a luncheon Friday afternoon for Mrs. Russell. Pink roses were used as the central decoration for the table, and individual corsages of the same flowers were tied to shepherd crooks to which the place cards had been fastened. The guests were Mmes. A. V. L. Brokaw, John S. Payne, F. H. Littlefield, Stephen H. Boyles, Charles Shewell, Verner White, Charles Free, Mary B. Thompson, H. J. Nicks and Mrs. Diel of Granite City.

ONE of the first of the fashionable winter weddings of interest both here and through the East is that of Miss Ada Rand Johnson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jackson Johnson of 25 Portland place, and James Russell Forgan of Chicago. The ceremony will be performed at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Johnson, at 4:30 o'clock Dec. 2 by the Rev. Dr. John W. MacIver of the Second Presbyterian Church. A reception, to which additional guests will be invited, will follow.

Mrs. Bradford Shinkle will be her sister's matron of honor, and Miss Marjorie Niedringhaus, her niece, will be maid of honor. Miss Niedringhaus will come to St. Louis from Miss Porter's school in Farmington, Conn., where she is a student, for the event.

The bridesmaids are to be Misses Elise Garneau, Erwin Hayward, Grace Taylor, Audrey Faust., Mrs. David Forgan Jr. of Chicago and Mrs. Halstead Freeman of New York. David Forgan Jr. will be his brother's best man. The list of groomsmen is not complete.

Miss Dorothy Palms of Detroit, granddaughter of Julius S. Walsh, and Miss Eleanor Jewett, also of Detroit, shared honors at a dance given for them last night at the St. Louis Club by their hostess, Miss Dorothy Simmons, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. Simmons. At Miss Palms' debut ball in Detroit, about a month ago, Miss Simmons was in the receiving party.

Miss Charlott Skinner of Lewiston, Pa., who is the guest of Mrs. W. T. Ravenscroft of the St. Regis apartments, will leave St. Louis this week to attend the Yale-Princeton and the Yale-Harvard football games. Mrs. Ravenscroft will accompany her East and will be gone two weeks.

Mrs. George L. Allen of 26 Westmoreland place will have a table of debutantes and their escorts at the Country Club Dec. 2 in honor of Miss Christine Vieths, a debutante.

Unique parties, one or two of which are given every winter, are becoming numerous this year, and among the most interesting was the luncheon given Friday at the St. Louis Country Club by Mrs. Harry Block of the Chase Hotel in honor of Miss Alice Scott, debutante daughter of Mrs. Henry Clarkson Scott. Thirty-three of this year's and last year's buds and a few of the younger married women were guests. Five of Mrs. Block's friends were seated at a small table. The decorations were typical of the atmosphere to be found in the South Seas. A thatched cottage 10 feet high, with growing ferns and palms about it, formed a center for the hollow center of the square-cut table. Surrounding the hut was a picket fence supported by twelve-fence posts holding peculiarly-shaped lighted lanterns. The effect was further enhanced by smilax and ferns which covered the walls. Miss Scott will make her formal debut Thursday at a reception to be given by her mother.

Added to the list of holiday parties is the tea to be given by Mrs. Henry Whiteside, 5137 Washington boulevard, New Year's day at the St. Louis Woman's Club in honor of her daughter, Miss Jane Whiteside, a senior at Mary Institute. The hours will be from 4 to 6 o'clock.

Miss Dorothy Pillot, granddaughter of Mrs. Theodore Prewitt of the Oxford apartments, has departed for New York, where she will be a bridesmaid at the wedding of Miss Peggy Pierce, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clay Arthur Pierce, and Norvin Hewitt Green. The wedding will take place in the Pierce home Nov. 20.

Miss Pillot's father and sister, Miss Rosalie Pillot, have returned from Europe, and Miss Pillot will make her debut in New York this winter.

Of particular interest in St. Louis is the news of the engagement of Miss Wesley Knapp, daughter of Mrs. Thomas Knapp of New York, formerly of St. Louis, and Claude Francis Garesche, son of Mrs. Edmond A. G. Garesche and the late Mr. Garesche, which reached St. Louis last week. Miss Knapp is a granddaughter of the late Griff Prather, and George Knapp, and a brother of G. Prather Knapp, who recently married Miss Lucy Norvell. She is a graduate of the Sacred Heart Convent at Maryville, and made her debut in St. Louis. During the war she was engaged in settlement work in Newark, N. J., and later went to France in the interest of reconstruction. Mrs. E. A. B. Garesche makes her home with her daughter, Mrs. Douglas B. Houser of Ellenwood avenue. The wedding will take place in New York in January in New York, where the prospective bridegroom has business interests.

Mr. and Mrs. Wallace D. Simmons of 46 Westmoreland place, and their daughter, Miss Eleanor Simmons, and Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. Simmons of the Clayton road, with their daughter, Miss Dorothy Simmons, will depart about Nov. 19 to attend the Yale-Harvard football game. Mr.

MISSOURIANS' PART IN SOCIAL AFFAIRS AT WASHINGTON

Capital to Say Farewell to Several Families as a Result of the Election.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
20 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—Keen interest is taken by the Missouri colony in the fact that Illinois is sending a woman Congressman in Mrs. Winifred Mason Huck of Chicago, daughter of the late Representative William Mason, who will serve out the unexpired term of her father as Congressman-at-large. Mrs. Huck is no stranger in the halls of Congress, for she came here with her father when a mere child and married a Washingtonian, Wardlow Huck. Mrs. Huck has four children and many friends here. Her home is certain to be the center of congressional gayety.

Mr. and Mrs. Breckinridge Long arrived in Washington last week and opened their house on Sixteenth street extended. Mrs. Long has announced a series of afternoon teas beginning on the first Tuesday in December.

Mrs. Robert E. Coontz, wife of Admiral Coontz, who is a Missourian, entertained guests at a bridge followed by tea on Thursday in honor of Mrs. George Canfield, who is visiting her nephew and niece, the Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Denby. There were four tables for bridge and a few additional guests joined the company later for tea. Mrs. Arthur Stott, wife of Commander Stott, presided at the tea table.

Washington will say farewell to a number of Missourians next March as a result of the elections. Among those who will depart then will be Representative and Mrs. Frank C. Millspaugh and their daughter, Miss Nelle Millspaugh, a leader of the younger congressional set; Representative and Mrs. Edgar C. Ellis, popular among their colleagues, Mrs. Ellis being a singer and a frequent hostess, and Representative and Mrs. T. W. Hukriede.

Clarence A. Cannon, who will succeed Hukriede as Representative from Champ Clark's old district, was for many years one of Clark's secretaries during his term in Congress. Cannon was a protege of the late Speaker and his wife knows many Washington social lights already.

Mrs. John B. Henderson, widow of the former Senator from Missouri, is not in good health and will not be able to carry out her social plans this winter. Mrs. Henderson spends much time at the Takoma Park sanitarium, and she has placed her granddaughter, Miss Beatrice Henderson, in the fashionable country school at Warrenton, Va., which is attended by many of the sub-debs of the Capitol.

and Mrs. Wallace Simmons and their daughter will go to New York and will remain away about two weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Foster Bixby, the latter of whom was Miss Lucy Butler, are expected home this week from England, where they spent their honeymoon, and will be the guests for a short time of Mrs. Bixby's mother, Mrs. Henry Stuart Butler of Bartmer avenue. Mr. and Mrs. Bixby are building a home in St. Louis County.

An event of fashionable as well as philanthropic interests will be the annual bazar of the Episcopal Churchwoman's Club on Tuesday, Nov. 28, in the ballroom of the Hotel Chase, with a number of the debutantes of the season assisting in the plans. The proceeds will go to help support the Episcopal missions institutions and charities of the city. Among those who will have tables at the bazar are: Mrs. William Bagnell, Mrs. Otto Mersman and Mrs. W. A. Shoemaker, fancy articles; Mrs. Tom Maffitt and Mrs. Grace Wilson Clark, aprons; Mrs. Vincent Price, candy; Mrs. Matt Reynolds, cakes; Mrs. Horace W. Soper, preserves; Mrs. John Betts, Mrs. Alden

42nd Birthday Sale

Last year we resolved to make our 42d Birthday Sale an occasion long to be remembered. As far back as 12 weeks ago our buyers began their preparations, impressing upon manufacturers the importance of this event and placing advanced orders for princely quantities of merchandise upon which we received price allowances that even astonished us. It can truthfully be said that in value-giving we have reached the millenium.

Never in our 42 years of retailing experience have we presented the equal of the values we have prepared for Monday—and every day this week. Each event will be the expression of a sincere effort to demonstrate this firm's gratitude to its thousands of patrons—many of whom have been customers for years past. Only goods of the best quality will be offered, and at savings that will set a new standard of value-giving.

A HOME-MADE GRAY HAIR REMEDY

You Can Make a Better Gray Hair Remedy Than You Can Buy.

Gray, streaked or faded hair is not only unbecoming, but unnecessary.

Anyone can prepare a simple mixture at home that will darken gray hair, and make it soft and glossy. To a half-pint of water add 1 ounce of bay rum, to small box of Barbo Compound and ¼ ounce of glycerine.

These ingredients can be bought at any drug store at very little cost, or the druggist will put it up for you. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. This will make a gray-haired person look twenty years younger. It is easy to use, does not color the scalp, is not sticky and greasy and does not rub off.

Lace Combinations

Never have values played such an important role. Almost 200 Dresses worth from $39.75 to $65—a hundred from $30 to $39.75, and a surprising few at $25.

We cannot recall a sale in the past to eclipse this one. Dress after Dress a tribute to the highest art in workmanship. Certainly a once-in-a-long-while savings opportunity, as well as an important style occasion for both misses and women.

Stylish-Stout Wraps

Stylish-Stout Winter Wraps

Whether you choose cape back or bloused back—fur trimmed or not, you'll like these.

Notice how much cooler the nights are getting? It is now time for a distinctive Wrap. Indeed we are having many evenings already when a Wrap's warmth would have been most welcome.

Particularly inviting are this season's stylish-stout models, dressy in appearance because of their snappy fabrics, fur trimmings and long lines, yet serviceable because of their comfortably set-in and trouser sleeves.

The time is at hand, for club and bridge dances—as they are already upon us, and you will want a Wrap to wear immediately that is suitably dressy for such occasions.

Peach Crop Pays City's Taxes.

By the Associated Press.

RIVERSIDE, Cal., Nov. 11.—Citizens of Hemet, a small city of Riverside County, are letting peaches pay their taxes. The city owns a 40-acre peach orchard. Profits from it were $5000 this year, which was not a particularly good one for a peach grower. A normal year is expected to net the city $15,000, it is said.

ENGLAND TO FURNISH SHIPS FOR CALIFORNIA GRAPE CROP

£40,000,000 Sterling Pledged to Aid Growers in Marketing Product.

By the Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 11.—The British Government stands ready to move California's grape crop in the latest type of ventilated refrigerator ships which shall be built especially for the grape trade, E. M. Sheehan, president of the California Grape Growers' Exchange, announced today. A preliminary investment of £40,000,000 sterling has been pledged by the British Government for the construction of the ships, which through a series of payments, will become the property of the growers in 10 years, Sheehan said.

It is planned through the placing of some of the vessels under American registry to have the ships engage in the intercoastal as well as the export trade, Sheehan said.

The exchange also has under consideration the building of $6,000,000 worth of refrigerator ships through subscription of the growers, Sheehan said.

THREE UNSOLVED MURDERS HERE IN MONTH OF OCTOBER

Of Killings in Which Identity of Slayers Has Not Been Disclosed One Occurred in St. Louis County.

Six murders were committed in St. Louis and St. Louis County last month. Three required no solution, the slayers having been apprehended in two of them. Motive was not determined in the three other cases, and, althouh the police homicide squad, with all of its resources, has followed clews and questioned many suspects, the identity of the murderers has not been disclosed.

The number of unsolved homicides in October is regarded by the police as a fair average, based on the number of unexplained killings in a year. In the period between Dec. 18, 1920, and May 2, last—16 months—41 murders were committed in St. Louis and the county, in which the element of uncertainty regarding the identity of the slayers never has been cleared by the police or any other agency.

However, the police of this city do not, perhaps, suffer by comparison with those of other cities in the detection of such criminals. The records tend to emphasize the efficiency of the St. Louis force. In New York city 25 persons met homicidal death in October.

Coco Slayers Not Known.

The Coroner's verdict of "homicide by parties unknown," in the case of John Coco, who was shot to death in an automobile at Daggett and Boardman avenues early in the morning of Oct. 5, still stands, and except for the police theory that he was murdered in a "bootlegging" deal the crime is unsolved. The closest the police came to ferreting out the case was to obtain a meager description of a man who a few minutes before the murder was seated in the automobile with Coco.

Members of the homicide squad did ascertain in interviews with some of Coco's friends that Coco might have been involved in "moonshining" and that, perhaps, he might have been killed by someone with whom he might have fallen out over a possible "bootlegging" enterprise, and, so the detectives reported that Coco had enemies whom he had "double-crossed" in a "bootlegging" venture, and let it go at that.

Then there was the case of John Frai, saloonkeeper and professional bondsman, who was shot to death in his saloon, 2250 Washington avenue, between 9 p. m., Oct. 23, and 2:30 a. m. the following day.

No weapon was found except Frai's own revolver, which was fully loaded and out of his reach. There was no evidence of robbery, and, so far as Frai's relatives knew, he had no enemies.

Conclusions in Frai Case.

But Frai, being a professional bondsman and a saloonkeeper, the police "put two and two together," and concluded that he had been slain as the result of a liquor feud or of a quarrel growing out of the bonding business.

But with whom had he quarreled? His son said there had been trouble with two men over a bond fee. Inquiry disclosed that Frai had signed bonds for two men arrested for transporting sugar to be used in "moonshining." The police, following the murder, questioned the two men. One of them said Frai had charged $500 for the two bonds and that they had complained of this as an excessive fee, but paid it and considered the matter closed. The police evidently also considered the "matter closed," as the records fail to show that the investigation went any further.

The third unsolved case was that of John Regnier, who was shot to death when he drew a revolver on three marked men who attempted to hold him up as he was playing cards with Arthur Wells, in the rear of the latter's saloon, Sappington and Telegraph roads, St. Louis County, the night of Oct. 22. Regnier fired several shots at the men and one of them limped as they crowded into an automobile in which they later escaped, but the police never found any trace of the men or automobile.

Other St. Louis Murders.

Other St. Louis murders during the month were those of Chester R. Delgman, a striking railroad car repairer, fatally shot as he stood at Broadway and Adelaide avenue, Oct. 27, and Dennis Leveris, poolroom proprietor, who was shot and killed Oct. 22. The police have the name of the man who killed Delgman and are looking for him in other cities. George Octipis, a peanut vender, was indicted for the murder of Leveris.

In East St. Louis, in the course of the month, Louis Trider, wanted for the murder of Detective-Sergeant Harry Lemkemeier, former head of the St. Louis police homicide squad, was shot and killed by detectives from St. Louis and East St. Louis when he resisted arrest.

Alphonse Dehon was shot and killed by one of two negroes who waylaid him and his fiancee as they were riding in an automobile near Walnut Grove, south of East St. Louis. The negroes were arrested and have confessed.

William Walters, a negro, died Oct. 13 from bullet wounds inflicted Oct. 7 by John Boles, another negro, in an East St. Louis saloon. Boles is in jail charged with the murder.

Joseph Resnick, paroled prisoner from the State reformatory, was killed by St. Louis County officers when fleeing from a holdup at the Rose Inn, North and South road, Oct. 8.

REVIEW SOUGHT OF ORDER REDUCING INSURANCE RATES

143 Fire Indemnity Companies Give Bond for Suspension of 10 Per Cent Cut Pending Result.

TO DETERMINE POWER OF SUPERINTENDENT

Companies Say State Insurance Department Head Has No Control Over Their Expenses.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Nov. 11.—The Circuit Court of Cole County today was asked by the Aetna Fire Insurance Co., in behalf of the 143 companies writing fire and similar insurance in Missour, to review an order made Oct. 9 by Ben C. Hyde, superintendent of the State Insurance Department, requiring an average reduction in Missouri rates of 10 per cent. The companies filed a bond of $50,000, approved by Circuit Judge Slate, to guarantee refund by them to policy holders of the sums to which the latter will be entitled if Hyde's action is sustained. The lower rates, effective Nov. 15, will be suspended pending outcome of the litigation.

Hyde, in his findings, alleges the earnings of the companies in Missouri during the last five-year period were $86,287,574 and that their profits came to $8,686,833. He stated that although the books of the companies showed earnings of only 10 per cent, the reduction of 10 per cent nevertheless was justified, since an adequate return would have been earned had the companies kept their expenses to the proper figure. His order recited that their expenses during that period were excessive, in an amount of $4,000,000 or $5,000,000.

"Novel" Construction of Law.

Attorney-General Barrett commented on legal phases of the suit as follows:

"Supt. Hyde's reduction order is based upon a novel construction of the statute which will be presented to the courts for the first time.

"The statute gives him the power to regulate earnings, but says nothing about expenses. The companies maintain that he has no control over their expenses or their mode of doing business. Supt. Hyde replies that if that be true, the present statute is insufficient. The proceeding will test his powers in that regard and the question will be carried to the Supreme Court for final determination.

"We will rush the hearings so that if the court should hold the present statute is insufficient for the purpose of his order there may be opportunity for new legislation at the coming session of the Legislature.

Depends on Test of Hyde's Powers.

"The whole order hangs on the determination of this point. Supt. Hyde said in his findings that during the last five-year period the companies' books showed their earnings to be 10 per cent of their premium receipts. Ordering premiums reduced 10 per cent would, of course, wipe out earnings altogether if it were not for the additional point in regard to the expenses. As to the expenses he held that their cost of doing business was $5,000,000 greater than it should have been, which sum, if saved, would have been sufficient margin of profit.' The whole question is whether the statutory powers of regulating earnings include an implied power to regulate the manner in which the insurance companies conduct their business. My department has made no ruling on this point, but will carry Supt. Hyde's contention to the court for its ruling."

Demurrer to the petition of the companies will be filed by assistants to the Attorney-General next week and appeal to the State Supreme Court doubtless will be taken by the party against whom Judge Slate rules in passing upon the demurrer. As the issue in the case is one of Hyde's legal authority, this course will enable a ruling on the law without the expense of taking testimony.

ASKS ST. LOUISANS TO URGE PRESIDENT TO ADMIT REFUGEES

Young Women's Christian Association Seeks to Aid Immigrants From Constantinople.

St. Louisans are urged by the Young Women's Christian Association to telegraph President Harding asking that several hundred immigrants, mostly women and children, detained at Ellis Island because of quota excess, be admitted to this country. They are from Constantinople and Asia Minor, and if deported would be returned to an enemy country from which they are refugees. The information came in a telegram yesterday from Miss Edith Terry Bremer, national head of Y. W. C. A. work for foreign-born women, to Miss Laura Presby, secretary of the Y. W. C. A. International Institute of this city.

The telegram urged that President Harding be asked to admit these immigrants and save them from the "sure destruction" that awaited their return to Asia Minor, "as an act of mercy and memorial to the spirit of Armistice day."

New Heating Invention Burns 95% Air

An amazing new kind of heat has been invented by Mr. B. M. Oliver, a St. Louis man. Women are freed from this drudgery and dirt of coal and wood stoves; men are freed from the worry of high prices and coal shortages.

Mr. Oliver's invention is a simple device which fits in any heater, cook stove or furnace, without change of parts. Anyone can set it into the firebox in one minute. Then by just turning a valve—almost like magic—you get any degree of heat you want from a tiny flame to a roaring inferno. Lasts a lifetime and is absolutely safe.

100,000 ALREADY SOLD!

Mr. Oliver has called his invention the Oliver Oil-Gas Burner because it makes its own gas from 95% air and 5% coal oil (kerosene). The wonderful news has spread so rapidly that already over 100,000 Oliver Burners are being used by American housewives. Mr. Oliver wants every woman to have the use of his invention. Write to him at 2188-K Oliver Bldg., St. Louis, Mo., and receive free an attractive booklet. Mr. Oliver is now making a special low-price offer, including a thirty-day Free Trial. He is looking for good, live distributors who wish to earn $500 a month. Write to him if you are interested. Request his sales plans at once.

THE TIGER TELLS WHY HE IS COMING TO THE UNITED STATES

the simplest fare daily, one at 11 in the morning and the second at 6 in the evening, that he rarely touches meat and never wine or other liquor, though he is in no sense a prohibitionist, and that a favorite outing is to the fashionable beach at the Sable d'Olonne, where he loves to watch the mermaids. While Clemenceau, seated opposite and bent forward, his hands on his knees, thus narrated his daily life in the Vendee, I had ample occasion to study his features.

Clemenceau is a European—he is the son of a Bordeaux doctor—but he doesn't look it. He has the yellow skin, the twinkling brown eyes, slanting upward, of the Mongol or Tartar race. Put a pigtail on him, and he could tread the stage without further "make-up" as Mr. Wu. The Oriental effect is uncanny. Somehow there must be a "throw-back" accounting—who knows—for the many things, such as Clemenceau's fierce pursuit, amounting at times to cruelty, of those who happen to cross his path, for his abstemiousness and his philosophic retreat from the tumult, for the hunter of the East, for this eerie 3 a. m. appeal of the ocean and the wind, for this working at a mysterious book having nought to do with the actuality he had lent so formidable a hand in fashioning. Yet when he talked, one's vision of China failed. Here was none of the modulated obsequiousness of the East, but good, hearty, vibrant stuff from Gascony, replete with gesticulation. The whole time Clemenceau is talking to you, his eyes are atwinkle (only once did he frown—when I told him that I had recently made a business visit to his arch enemy, Joseph Caillaux).

Radiates Good Nature.

In fact, the old man radiated good nature, and when he gets warmed to a subject, he talks so much so that I doubt if he will be able to "put the brake on" in his forthcoming talks, although he repeatedly expressed his intention of saying the minimum that is compatible with the spirit of his self-set mission. Here is this mission, as he now related it to me:

"When I first got your telegram, I answered saying the hour was too grave for controversy and that I could say nothing. Then I took a turn round the lawn out there, thinking and, altering my mind, decided to go across to the United States and from there tell not only America but the world certain essential things. so I telegraphed you accordingly and ever since I have not had a moment's peace. I could easily write what I have to say, but I believe in the spoken word (leaning forward, with great emphasis). With an audience you can get things over which the most brilliant pen cannot achieve. I am going to talk for no country, but for the solidarity of those who fought for freedom and won. If they go on much longer as at present it will be chaos for all around and America will be in it, too. I am not going to lecture anybody or any people, nor am I going to refer to internal politics.

"I know exactly what I am going to say and as soon as I have said it I shall take ship again and return. I shall be friendly but frank, and I am going to leave the war entirely alone, concentrating on the peace and the future. But naturally I shall have to touch on the treaty of Versailles. The American people must be told that they are in part responsible for the appalling condition of Europe today, and precisely how and why they are responsible. I know I shall be accused of trying to drag America back into Europe. Nothing of the kind. (I am compelled for lack of notes to give the gist and not the actual phraseology of Clemenceau.) "But my appeal—for it will be an appeal and in no sense a recrimination—will, I hope, be inspired by a higher motive than shifting responsibility here and there. I shall plead for a common responsibility for peace. And I shall show that, far from France being the one stumbling block to peace in Europe today, she desires nought save security prior to disarming. Of that security promised her by the United States and by England, she has so far seen nothing. All this talk of French imperialism!" and the "Tiger" broke off with something akin to a growl.

Foresees Difficulties.

He said much more in my protracted talk with him, speaking of Wilson and Hughes and Lloyd George and other peacemakers, and giving a clear indication of the line he intended taking in his "conferences," as he called them, but he made no precise declarations for publication. Indeed, he stopped me making notes on more than one occasion. He seemed to be thoroughly conversant with the difficulties confronting him, with America's lassitude in matters European, with her rooted objection to the treaty of Versailles, and her self-absorption in the domestic situation (to say nothing of the elections.) But these and kindred handicaps Clemenceau prefers to set aside, having an abiding faith, founded on a protracted personal experience, in the American's sense of fair play. He believes he will get a square deal and that having been heard, the United States will weigh carefully what he has had to tell. He believes he can solder the erstwhile war alliance by showing that just as all are to blame for the present, so all will suffer in the future unless they mend, individually, then collectively. Clemenceau probably has as little use for the Ruhr mania of Poincare as he has for the minor Talleyranding of Lloyd George, and as likely as not he will say so.

"I'm through!" he proclaimed in an emotional outburst. "Fancy me going back into the game! Why, 'twould kill me! And besides, I'm finished with it all. Ah, no! Never again!" And later—"No, nor shall I write my memoirs—either now or ever. What I like is truth and where I can't tell all the truth I keep silence. I could not write truthful memoirs without making the position of the world worse than it is already. So I'm not going to write any memoirs at all."

So much will have been written in between the time of writing this and its publication of the likely effect of Monsieur Clemenceau's incursion into American life and of the repercussion of his trip at the Quai d'Orsay that it would be foolish for me to speculate from this wilderness, and so many weeks removed as is the "Tiger's" landing on Manhattan. He is crossing on the Paris with his doctor friend, who accompanied him to the East two years ago, his valet and a secretary; to attend no banquets (he never does) and no receptions. He is willing to travel anywhere his agent suggests, even to California, but will sail home again within four weeks of landing. He will pay his respects at the White House and pay a personal call on Mr. Wilson, though some of his "appeal" is expected to be in the nature of a pretty sharp criticism of the latter and of his Caesarian descent on the Old World.

Will Not Take a Cocktail.

He will not take a cocktail or stay up after 8 at night, except for an evening lecture and he will not pose for Neysa McMein. He will admire the American girl joyously and will wonder at the billion-dollar skyline. He will visit his old home in West Seventh street. He will talk perfect vibrant English, a tremendous advantage for the task on hand, and the willest of Gotham reporters will not get more out of this willest of Parisian journalist than the "Tiger" wishes to give. Personally, he will be voted the most cheery of characters. And a real fighter—of the 'carp' kind. Apropos, I told him to bring across his symbolic banner of the carp (genus fish) and to hoist it above his lecture desk. Its history I have already related. It is a big, red carp blown out by the wind at the masthead, and was given him by the wife of the Japanese Ambassador in Paris. In Japan the carp is a symbol of virility and is given to each proud father of a son. The Ambassadress gave Clemenceau three and the largest of them he hoisted especially for my benefit. It fluttered out over the Atlantic while Clemenceau patted himself, beaming, as if saying "Virility—C'est moi."

And so, to conclude, I don't think that M. Clemenceau has any other ax to grind, in going to America, than that which he proclaims, namely, to try and straighten things out as between France, the United States and England, and so bring back the solidarity of war that some sort of order may be evolved, and speedily, out of the present chaos, bad enough in all conscience but likely to become infinitely worse in under a year. If he succeeds in this (his swan-song) he assured me that he would wear success as a prouder feather in his cap than his magnificent personal contribution to the winning of the war, which no one denies, least of all any of the Americans in France in the concluding stages and those even remotely aware of the passing events. Just as he then breathed "War to victory!" so now he intends to breathe "Peace to victory." And it is well to remember that he pulled the first trick off in circumstances no less difficult than those surrounding him today. Yet it is pretty certain that Europe, and assuredly France, could send across the Atlantic no man of wider sympathies and knowledge of men than Georges Clemenceau.

Apart from the importance he himself attaches to his journey, there are two further reasons why "Pere la Victoire" is a real capture as a visitor. Save Lenine and Lloyd George, he is the biggest exportable character Europe possesses, and he leaves both the others far behind in actual length of service in the seats of the mighty. As I have indicated, Clemenceau was a Deputy at the time of the Franco-Prussian war and not a single incident of French history in the intervening half century (1870-1920) but saw him embroiled as journalist or politician, or both. He and Henri Rochefort vied with one another in this respect. His occupancy of every post in a dozen succeeding cabinets, including the Premiership several times over, is nothing in the balance with his Cabinet-wrecking proclivities—a pursuit which gained for him the sobriquet of the "Tiger." Every fight, over Boulanger, over Dreyfus, over De Lesseps, found Clemenceau in the front rank, its spearhead, and usually dueling. Indeed, the history of the third French Republic, whose inception he voted for, revolves around him more than about any other living man.

A great character in modern history is crossing to you. He has chosen the soil of America for his last fight. After that the Vendee.

NEWBERRY MUST GO, SAYS MICHIGAN'S NEW SENATOR

heart. It is well known, too, but, strangely enough, the Republicans have never used it against me. I guess they don't know what it means," he concluded, with zestful laughter.

It is safe to forecast that Senator Ferris will be a distinctive figure in the Senate. He is a marked man, physically, with his tall, gaunt figure, wide, serious mouth and piercing brown eyes, set under the astonishing beauty of his hair. He is fully as vigorous as most men of '50. He speaks crisply and with the utmost confidence. His candor is almost unparalleled. So frequently he has overridden the judgment of the party leaders in the State, and so frequently proved his superior foresight, that they have given over protesting with him. He is a law unto himself and vastly bigger than his party in Michigan.

Shrewdness and unbending will are his outstanding characteristics. Nevertheless he is not combative. He has authority without heat, determination without pugnacity. He has a knack of getting his way without creating enemies. Notwithstanding the fact that he had a Republican Legislature for the four years of his governorship, he had no serious clashes, and even managed to get through important legislative features that he favored. He may be expected to do just exactly as he sees fit. Among informed persons in Detroit and elsewhere in the State the opinion is almost unanimous that Senator Newberry will resign, Ferris' first announcement after his election was the statement that his first official action in the Senate would be to reopen the Newberry case. He invariably carries out his stated intentions.

Newberry is described by some who know him as a "thin-skinned aristocrat." He writhed under the scalding denunciations of Reed, La Follette, Norris and Kenyon in the Senate. Proud of his family name, which stands high socially, he has seen it become a national symbol of sordid corruption. He has been utterly miserable and thoroughly sick of the whole business, and now is declared to be in a state of downright panic. It is believed that he might have resigned long ago but for pressure, and it is a common conviction that he cannot be induced to face the ordeal again, particularly with the moral certainty that he will be expelled.

Indeed, some of his former newspaper defenders already are urging him to quit, in order that the Governor may appoint a successor who will have the seniority advantages of entering the Senate ahead of the new members who will arrive in March.

ENTRY OF 200 HORSES IN SHOW INDICATED

Stables From All Parts of Country to Be Represented by Entries at Coliseum.

Advance entries for the St. Louis Horse Show to be held in the Coliseum Nov. 29 to Dec. 2, inclusive, indicate an exhibition of more than 200 horses from stables all over the country, according to a statement by E. L. Musick, treasurer of the Horse Show Association, active in directing plans for this year's program.

A new and indulgent light has been thrown on the position of the horse in the world today by Musick, who, in stating that St. Louisans will have an opportunity to see some of the finest show horses in the world, asserted that the motor has not driven the horse out, but has merely taken the work away from the horse, and allowed him to come into his own.

"The horse is no longer a beast of utility,' said Musick, "but is owned by man because of a love for the sport of good horsemanship. The motor—gas and electric—has lifted the burden from the horse's back and he has now come into his own."

Some of the Entries.

Among the entries already made are the following:

"Easter Star," and "Elizabeth Greis," of the H. N. Greis stables, shown by D. E. Holeman. "Elizabeth Greis" won first in the five-gaited class at the Military and Civilian Horse Show at Jefferson Barracks last June.

"Leading Article," and "Fariana Regal," in the heavy harness class, and "Ebony King," a roadster, of the John R. Thompson stables, shown by Everet Everett, formerly in charge of August A. Busch's stables.

"Animation," heavy harness class, champion of Madison Square Garden; "Tiger Rose," saddle horse, and "General Foch," five-gaited stallion, of the Long View Farms stables, owned by Mrs. Loula Long Combes, and shown by her.

"St. Mesrob," a roadster and trotter to a bicycle; "Peter Handsome," and "Tommy Doyle," roadsters, of the Peak Brothers stables; "Peter Handsome" and "St. Mesrob" to be shown in the roadster pair class.

Mrs. Combes to Enter 16 Horses.

Mrs. Loula Long Combes will exhibit 16 horses in all. Mrs. Combes, who lives in Kansas City, has been an ardent horsewoman for many years and has entered her horses in the St. Louis annual show since childhood. She drove in the children's class at the old Exposition.

"The breeders are breeding only for quality," Musick added. "It does not pay to raise horses for utility purposes. The motor has supplanted the horse in nearly every field of work, even invading the farm. It has removed the horse's drudgery."

DELAYS MAY FORCE CONSTITUTION BODY TO LEAVE CAPITAL

Legislature Will Require Use of Chamber After Jan. 1 —No Other Hall in City Large Enough.

QUORUM ABSENT AS RECESS ENDS

Working Members Hold Meeting to Consider Action to Compel Attendance of Those Frequently Absent.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Nov. 11.—Working members of the Constitution Convention finally have determined to "get rough" with their colleagues whose frequent absences have retarded the convention.

The inability to keep more than a bare quorum in attendance is one of the elements held responsible for dragging out sessions of the convention over six months with the end not yet in sight. At the outset it was anticipated that the convenion would no last more than two or three months at most. Members who have abandoned their private affairs for the time being and have practically camped here from the opening of the convention have grumbled from time to time, as other delegates flocked home over week-ends and for six, eight and 10 days at a stretch to attend to private affairs, while the convention struggled along barely able to waddle through the obstructions placed in the path of its progress. Not until yesterday, however, have the smoldering coals of resentment burst into flame.

Recess Adjournment.

The convention had adjourned Friday, Nov. 3, until Thursday of this week to allow the politician members to go home to engage in the election. This was a recess with full pay for members and employes, which cost the State not less than $7000. But to top this off, only 37 members put in an appearance Thursday and Friday and this morning the list dropped to 34. No business could be transacted because 42 is a quorum.

Yesterday afternoon, however, the 38 who were here resolved themselves into a court with George H. Williams of Webster Groves as chairman, and discussed, outside the record, some of the problems of the convention.

J. W. Alexander of Gallatin, former Circuit Judge D. G. Taylor of St. Louis, and others pointed out in speeches that unless the convention buckled to its task with an energy it has not heretofore displayed, that it will be forced to move from Jefferson City Jan. 1 to other quarters to complete its task. For the convention is using quarters of the House of Representatives in the State Capitol, and as Jefferson City has no other place large enough to accommodate it, the convention will have to move when the Legislature convenes. There is doubt whether it can legally transact business away from the permanent seat of government, but the attorneys of the convention seem to feel that it can deliberate elsewhere if it returns here to take the final vote on the proposed revision. If it does become necessary to find other quarters for its sessions some of the smaller cities in the interior of the State will be asked to take the convention. The working members do not desire to go either to St. Louis or Kansas City because of the distractions there.

Consideration Advised.

Both Judge Taylor and Alexander urged their colleagues to consider seriously the fate which will befall them and their work unless the convention soon completes its task.

Taylor pointed out that the press had refrained from attacking delegates yet for their tardiness in completing the revision, because the press in the main is in sympathy with the general purpose of the body. Some have warned, however, that if the revision goes on the rocks the blame will be placed by the press "where it belongs, on your shoulders."

Taylor strongly advsed that the members take upon themselves the responsblity of forcng those careless about their attendance either to put the convention above their private affairs and attend regularly or resign and allow some one to be appointed who would do so.

The 37 who were present yesterday were: Alexander, Baker, Benton, Black, Bowles, Cahill, Carter, Clark, Conrath, Cox, Crossley, Culver, Cunningham, Dumm, Dyer, Eschmann, Ford, Gunn, Haymes, Henson, Hunter (Cape Girardeau), Hunter (Moniteau), McClure of Johnson, McKinley, Meador, Miller, (Boone), Miller (St. Clair), Morris, Munger, Shartel, Speer, Taylor, Tubbs, Wammack, Williams, Zevely, Zimmer.

The convention adjourned until Monday morning.

Officers Transferred to Hawaii.

Orders have just been received transferring Capts. David E. Barnett and John E. Brannan from the Sixth Infantry at Jefferson Barracks to foreign duty with the Twenty-seventh Infantry, in Schofield Barracks, near Honolulu, Hawaii. Both will take short leaves of absence before sailing from San Francisco for this two years' detail.

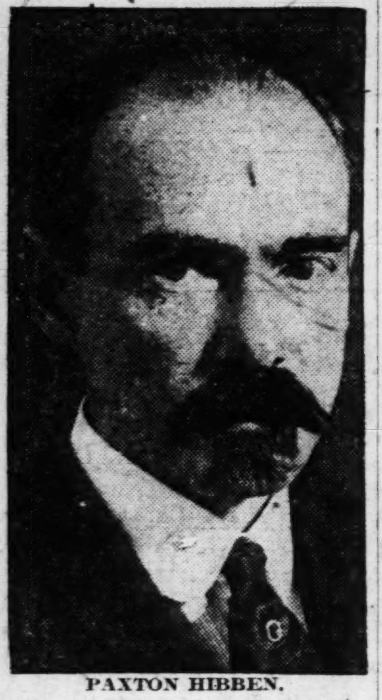
Future of Turkey and Her Neighbors Depends Upon Russia, Relief Worker Says

Paxton Hibben, Close-Range Student of Near East, Gives Views of Soviet Influence in Turkey.

CLASSES TURKS AS PARASITES, ROBBERS

Declares They Are the Most Charming People That Ever Stuck a Knife in a Man's Back.



PAXTON HIBBEN.

The future of Turkey in Europe, and of Turkey's European neighbors, depends upon Russia, in the opinion of Paxton Hibben, close-range student of the Near East, who was in St. Louis last week in connection with the American Committee for the Relief of Russian Children, of which he is secretary.

"The new Turkish Government is framed on the Russian model," Capt. Hibben said in a talk with a Post-Dispatch reporter. "There is little warrant for speaking of it as a republic or a Government along American or Western European lines.

"Russia has been carrying on propaganda in Turkey for three years, not so much communistic propaganda as that favorable to the soviet form of government. Legran, the representative of Moscow at Angora, has been working with the Turks, to get them to ditch the Sultan and form a soviet government.

"The Grand National Assembly at Angora corresponds virtually to the Executive Committee of the All-Russian Congress of Soviets, at Moscow. Its composition is similar, and the manner of its election is similar.

Individual Not Considered.

"There is no consideration of the individual voter. A democracy like ours, where every citizen is a voter, depends in theory, and quite largely in practice, upon the education and enlightenment of the individual voter. But in Russia and Turkey the masses are uneducated, and the individual citizen is not the basis of Government. Instead, large groups are the basis of representation.

"It was easy to introduce a government of this kind in Turkey, for the people are used to domination by groups of the elders, in local affairs. If Englishmen or Americans had tried to remodel Turkey on their own lines, they would have failed. The Russians succeeded in a task which other nations have been trying for 300 years, because they stuck to forms and methods with which the Turks were acquainted. In much the same way, the Russian people, themselves, were more ready to accept communism, because they had been practicing rural communism for 500 years. You can't bring a people, especially an uneducated people, to new methods in a day. There is always some explanation for changes such as have been seen in Russia and Turkey, and the explanation is that the change has not been so great in any instance as people suppose.

"Mustapha Kemal is today military dictator of Turkey, as Lenine and Trotzky were for a time military dictators of Russia. When the military phase passes, the power will pass into the hands of the central soviet, or Grand National Assembly.

Women Propaganda Lever.

"Women were the lever of the Russian propaganda in Turkey. That propaganda was aimed at the political education of Turkish women, and at getting them to throw off the old ideas. It was not a propaganda of revolt against the existing authority, for that authority was Kemal himself. Kemal posed as a rebel against the Sultan, and the Russians took this position as a basis and went to work for the modernization of Turkey. What has been done in that direction is the work of Russia. Will it stick? Personally, I haven't much faith in the idea of the Turks becoming modernized.

"It cannot be told yet how far the process has reached the people. A reaction is likely to appear when another Assembly is elected. This will be done by groups of elders, and not by individual voting or carefully balanced representation. The groups are not formed on occupational lines, and this would not work, as Turkey is not an industrial country. Its industries are in the hands of people from other countries.

"Russia's influence in Turkey's affairs is a natural one, with a historical foundation. There was a Russo-Turkish treaty long before the French treaty of Angora. The Turks know that when the French and Italians offer to help them, the French and Italians are planning to get something for themselves. But Russia's chief desire is also Turkey's desire—the freedom of the straits.

"The straits are free today—any Englishman will tell you so. So they are, but because Russia has not been recognized diplomatically, ships bound for Russian ports are subjected by the British authorities to delays at Constantinople which are sufficient to make their voyages unprofitable. One day's delay, for a ship of average tonnage, means a loss of $1500 to the ship's owner. A few days' delay amounts to a penalty on shipping. It is thus rendered impossible for Russians to do a shipping business.

"There is no possibility of any settlement of the straits question which does not give Russia practical guarantees, as well as paper guarantees, of the free use of the straits.

"The present freedom of the straits, in practice, is about like our freedom of trade with Russia. In theory, any American can engage in business with Russia. In practice, it takes weeks to get a passport, and it is frequently necessary to engage a lawyer in order to get the matter attended to. Then, when a man gets to Russia and starts to ship something to the United States, he finds that no consular invoice is to be had, because there is no consul. There is nothing to certify to the prices. The common way is to ship to Riga, and this involves paying duty to enter Latvia. There a consular invoice can be had, and then a second payment of duty must be made to get into the United States. Few business enterprises could make profit under such conditions.

"For instance, I had a plan to export a large number of the beautiful birch cigarette cases which the Russian peasants make, and to sell them in this country for the benefit of the Russian relief. The supply of the articles was easily obtained, but the difficulties of exportation were so great that I had to abandon the plan. Anyone who was trying to market a competitive product would find the practical difficulties even greater.

British Sold to Both Sides.

"In the recent war in Asia Minor, the French helped the Turks, and made no bones about it. But the British did not help the Greeks so much as has been supposed. I saw the supplies that the two armies had, and they were the same. The British were selling to both sides.

"King Constantine was not favorable to the adventure in Asio Minor, as he termed it. In December, 1920, while he was staying at Lausanne, he made a statement, printed in the Petit Parisien, to the effect that, if he returned to the Greek throne, he would not tolerate further adventuring of that sort. But when he got back, he found the pressure too strong. Lord Curzon publicly announced that Great Britain would not permit the withdrawal of Greece from Asia Minor, and that Greece must continue to enforce the treaty of Sevres, which, he might have added, nobody had ratified.

"From conversations with Constantine, and with the Crown Prince, now King George, I know that both were very dubious about this enterprise. They realized that the only chance of success was for the Greeks to destroy the Turkish army, and when the Turks got back into the hills, that chance was gone, and it was certain that the Greeks would have to get out of Asia Minor.

"After that, the Greek disaster which followed was inevitable. It is the result of the attempt started by the Venizelists, to carve out a second Byzantine Empire, regardless of the fact that Greece could by no possibility govern such an empire—in fact, Greece had quite enough to govern at home.

"As the result, Turkey comes back into Europe in the attitude of a victor, and claiming everything. This is deplorable. Eastern Thrace will not be as well governed by the Turks as it has been by the Greeks. No place is as well governed by the Turks as by any other nation. The Turks are the worst possible governors and administrators anywhere.

"The Greek administration of Eastern Thrace has been especially good. I was present, in one of the small cities of this region, when the mayor, a Turk, called upon the Greek Governor, and thanked him officially for the manner in which he had cleaned up the courtyard around the Turks' mosque. Previously it had been a filthy hole. The Greeks had put men to work and cleaned it, after ideas of sanitation which perhaps are not as thorough as ours, but which are a vast improvement on the Turkish methods.

Turks Untrustworthy.

"It is all very well for Americans to speak kindly of the Turks, to speak in a tolerant way of their religion, and to praise their personal qualities. The better-class Turks are charming people, it is quite true—but keep your face toward them. They are the pleasantest, most ingratiating people that ever stuck a knife in a man's back.

"Murder is an accepted political method in Turkey. That means that the Turks are 50 to 100 years behind other nations, which no longer regard murder as an excusable means of getting political rivals out of the way.

"The Armenians are not so charming folks as the Turks are, and some Americans conpare the two to the disadvantage of the Armenians. But the Armenians have our ideas as to the necessity for work. They are workers, and the Turks are parasites and robbers. Some Armenians are very shrewd in business, and this has made them disliked, as the Jews are disliked in some countries. But the Armenians represent civilization, and the Turks do not.

Russians Seem to Want Peace.

"Russia will now be the deciding influence. On the whole, the Russians seem to want peace. But if Russia should be disposed to attack Rumania, through a demand for the return of Bessarabia, or if Russia should attack Bulgaria for any reason, the combined pressure of Russia and Turkey upon the comparatively weak Balkan countries would be very formidable. The recovery of Bessarabia would be a very popular issue with the Russian people. They did not care so much about losing some of the territory awarded to Poland, but they consider Bessarabia as Russian soil."

In his remarks about the characteristics of the Turks, Hibben had in mind the statement of D. A. Davis, an international Y. M. C. A. worker, who said at a Chamber of Commerce luncheon Wednesday that the Turks were a "likeable" people, and that the Christianity of the Turks' subject peoples has not been of a high type.

Hibben is the author of "Constantine I and the Greek People," which was written in wartime, but which was delayed in publication until 1920. This, he says, was due to the interference of George Creel of the Committee on Public Information, who did not approve some of the statements made in the book as to the allied dealings with Greece.

In his present Russian relief work, Hibben has encountered obstacles growing out of the lack of diplomatic and consular intercourse between the United States and Russia. It was planned to bring to this country, as a speaker for the relief movement, Ekaterina Kalinin, wife of the president of the Russian soviet government. This plan failed because Mme. Kalinin was told that she would have to go to Riga, Latvia, and wait there until her application for admission to the United States could be passed upon in Washington, the application and the reply to be by mail. It was estimated that this would mean at least 10 weeks' nefroced idlenesss of Mme. Kalinin, who is busy in relief work, and she abandoned the idea of visiting the United States.

Will Address Scout Leaders.

The Scoutmasters' Association of St. Louis will hold the second meeting of its training course at Soldan High School, tomorrow at 7:45 p. m. Dr. H. M. Whelpley, archeologist, will speak on "The Aboriginal Scoutmasters of America."

CAMPAIGN TO CHECK CANCER MENACE BEGUN

Statewide Effort to Warn Public Carried On in Connection With National Cancer Week.

St. Louis and Missouri today enter upon an educational campaign to reduce the spread of cancer in the city and State, by calling attention to the necessity for taking proper precautions through which cancer may be stamped out in its early stages, in which complete cure may be effected, doctors state.

The campaign, which will continue during the present week, is being carried on in co-operation with National Cancer Week, which will be observed throughout the United States Nov. 12-18. A similar week of attention and education was conducted last year, when it was estimated that the attention of hundreds of thousands of persons was called to the necessity for halting the increase of cancer, the yearly death rate of which in the United States has increased 22 per cent during the past 20 years. According to medical authorities, cancer causes the death of one woman in every eight and one man in every 14 after 40 years of age. Dr. Fred J. Taussig is chairman of the local committee in charge of the campaign, and Miss E. Flanigan is secretary. Other members include:

Dr. Ellis Fischell, Dr. G. Gellhorn, Dr. N. T. Burrows, Dr. W. W. Graves, Dr. M. T. Engman, Dr. H. W. Loeb, Dr. W. H. Davis, Mrs. Guido Panteleoni, Miss Renard, Mrs. F. V. Hammar, Mrs. J. H. Haskell, Mrs. M. G. Seelig, Miss Charlotte Taussig, Miss Mary Stevenson, Mrs. R. Hykins, Mrs. Evarts Graham, Mrs. J. D. P. Francis, Mr. E. Mallinckrodt, Mr. Horace E. Swope, Mr. Lionberger Davis, Rev. Ivan Lee Holt, Rev. Arthur H. Armstrong, Rev. Father Tim Dempsey, Mr. H. S. Condie, Rev. Donald C. McLeod, Dr. H. M. Whelphey and Dr. Max Starkloff.

In the local campaign every possible method of publicity will be used so that the maximum number of persons may be informed of the facts concerning cancer. A speakers' bureau made up of many of the best known physicians in the city, will provide for addresses before various organizations among them the Rotary Club, the Optimists, the St. Louis College of Pharmacy, the Daughters of Israel and the St. Louis Dental Society.

Exhibits at Libraries.

One-half of the large distributing room of the Public Library will be given over to an exhibit and a smaller exhibit will be installed at each of the branch libraries. Exhibits also will be placed at the Barnes Hospital and the city hospital. At all of these points, literature will be distributed. Various health and municipal organizations are co-operating with the local committee. The Visiting Nurse Association will distribute literature. The Municipal Nurses also will install exhibits at each of the 10 health centers in the city.

The motion picture theater men have agreed to show two slides in the larger theaters throughout the campaign. The Rockefeller two-reel film entitled "The Renewal of Courage," telling in swift and unoffensive way the story of how cancer was controlled in one woman, will be run every afternoon at the Delmonte Theater.

The churches have shown a most active interest in the campaign. The movement has been indorsed by the Ministerial Alliance, by Archbishop Glennon through a personal letter, and by the Unitarian and Jewish ministers. A special letter prepared by Dr. Frank Billings, professor of medicine at the University of Chicago, will be read in all the churches today. Orders have been issued by the Grand Master of the Masonic order that this same letter be read at any meetings of the organization held during the week of the campaign.

City Sanctions Movement.

The municipal authorities have sanctioned the entire movement and have granted the local committee the privilege of placing instructive placards at the intersections of the principal streets of the city. Cartoons dealing with cancer will be placed in all drug stores.

Further co-operation has been given by the railroads. The chief surgeons of the Missouri Pacific and the Frisco have agreed to placard the stations of the entire systems with the poster entitled "Danger Signals of Cancer." Industrial plants throughout the city will place the literature in the hands of their employes.

Headquarters will be maintained at a central location in the downtown district, where a special exhibit in charge of the College Club will be displayed and where literature will be distributed. A member of the Graduate Nurses' Association will be on constant duty prepared to answer questions and give advice.

At the Second Baptist Church tonight Prof. A. S. Pohlman, of the St. Louis University School of Medicine will speak on "The Control of Cancer."

WOULD SPANK PARENTS, TOO

Judge Says They Frequently Participate in "Puppy-Love" Affairs.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Nov. 11.—Parents of young boys and girls who participate in "puppy-love" escapades should be publicly spanked, along with their erring offsprings, according to Judge Lawrence Jacobs of the Chicago boys' court.

Passing on the case of two youthful lovers, Judge Jacobs said: "What these children need is a good, old-fashioned spanking. Furthermore, in nearly every case you will find paternal indulgence. It wouldn't be a bad idea to hand out a little of the same corrective to the parents."

CANDIDATE SUED OVER FISH

The question is, when David Chartrand was fishing for votes, who ordered the fish?

Mrs. Ella Reinhardt of Fireworks Station, St. Clair County, says it was Chartrand, and she filed suit at Belleville yesterday against him for $12. Chartrand says it was his friends, who wanted him elected to the Board of Supervisors, and refuses to pay. The Court will decide tomorrow. The fish were ordered for a fry which was given in Chartrand's behalf before the election. He cannot see why he should pay for the fish with which he fished for votes which he did not get.

St. Louis Man Pockets His Pride After 40 Years and Finds Sister in Chicago

John L. Smith, Commission Merchant, Sees Her Ad in Post-Dispatch—She Wants Him to Manage Extensive Property.

For 40 years Celtic pride warred against the Celtic conviction that "blood is thicker than water," until the tide was turned by this advertisement, published in the Sunday Post-Dispatch of Oct. 29:

PERSONAL—Would like to hear from any of these persons: John L. Smith, Charley Y. Smith, Phebe Farley or any of their children. Write to Mrs. Ida Pendleton, 428 E. 46th st., Chicago, Ill.

John L. Smith, browsing through the newspaper that afternoon in his two-room house at 2113 Cherry avenue, Wellston, sprang up, pointing to the ad and shouting: "Why, John, I'll bet this is your Aunt Ida, that I haven't seen nor heard of since 40 years ago Thanksgiving!"

His son, John, was not two yards away, but Smith shouted.

Immediately the elder Smith wrote a letter, and then sent a long telegram. The telegram was answered that night. Mrs. Pendleton believed he was her brother, 10 years younger than herself, but was waiting for the letter. Tuesday Smith received this telegram from her:

"Brother, I am your sister, Ida, a widow. Get on next train and come here."

Not only his sons, but his nieces and nephews, orphans now, counseled against his going. "She didn't have anything to do with the family for all that time, and I wouldn't run after her now," they said. But Simth had set his mind on it. "I thought maybe she was in want," he told a reporter who called on him a few days ago, after the Post-Dispatch received his letter of thanks. "And blood's thicker than water," he added.

John Was Bewildered.

So he went down to his bank as soon as it opened the next morning, drew $200, and caught the next train for Chicago, carrying the $200 in a money belt under his working clothes. An usher was paging him in the station when he got off the train. He was not quite sure what that meant, and stepped up to a policeman.

"I'm the man they're paging," he said.

The policeman called the usher, who asked Smith if he could identify himself. Smith showed the telegram and was led outside, where a liveried negro waited with a big automobile.

"That's Mist'us Pendleton's brother; I know them eyes," exclaimed the negro, as Smith and the usher came up to him.

"Wait a minute. Is my sister—is she dead?" asked Smith, somewhat bewildered.

"Nossuh, she's about the livest person you ever did see, if she is 60 years old," answered the grinning negro. Smith got in and was taken to a big house, where waited a nervous woman in austere black, aging, but straight as an arrow.

"Sister Ida?" said John, not quite sure of himself.

"Oh, my brother!" she said.

Wants Him to Manage Property.

They talked until 4 a. m. Mrs. Pendleton wanted him to stay with her and manage her property—stocks in many concerns including the perfume manufacturing business that was established by her husband and real estate in Chicago and St. Louis. But John had affairs of his own to wind up before that was possible. He has an interest in a Third street commission store, some property in Wellston and Jennings—and, for that matter, more than $1000 in a bank. Finally she agreed that he should return to St. Louis on Saturday, Nov. 4, only on his promise to come eventually to stay with her. She has no children.

Smith toold the reporter that the estrangement and the conditions that led up to it, back to their earliest beginnings, arose simply from "that old Irish pride." The Smith's were Pennsylvania Scotch-Irish, and not much Scotch, he explained. The father, also John L. Smith, was the owner of a substantial commission house in Philadelphia at the outbreak of the Civil War. He believed in the South and in what the South believed in, and was too proud to foreswear his convictions among his Northern associates. Naturally those who refused to renounce this local heresy suffered in business and social standing and suffered so much that Smith and three others had to leave Philadelphia. They came to St. Louis where Smith, with his family, settled down in "Kerry Patch" and went into the commission business on a greatly reduced scale.

Went to Work at 17.

The younger daughter, born that year, Eliza Jane—"Ida"—had to seek work in Springfield, Ill., when she was 17 years old, to bolster up the family income. There she met and married a young man who held a comfortable position with a publishing firm. The elder daughter, Mary, had married a Chicago publisher when Smith still had a prosperous business in Philadelphia

Not long after Ida's marriage her father died, and she returned to help the widow. Ida's husband came with her, but didn't stay long. Mrs. Smith married a second time, and the second husband soon ran through the little that Smith had left. The home became a boarding house. John, who was not 10 years old, had to quit school so that he could help his mother.

After a year spent with her

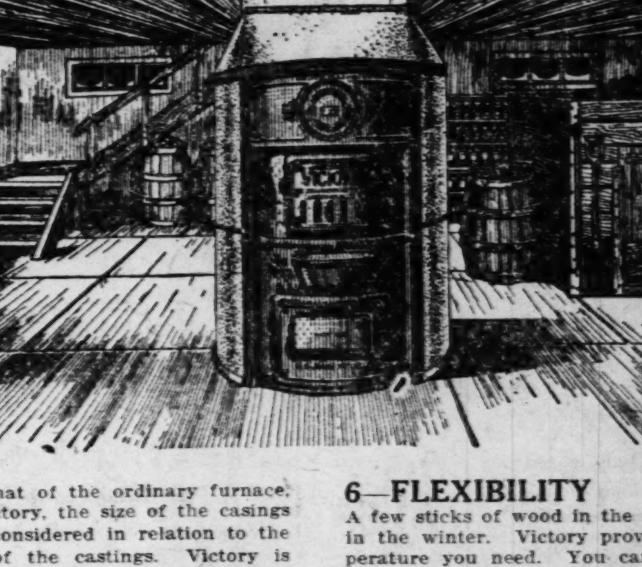
How to Select the Heater for the Home
—Here Is Victory's Answer—

1—COMFORT

Victory, while of new design and advanced construction, does not contain a feature that has not been tested in thousands of installations under every condition. As a great deal of the efficiency of a pipeless furnace depends upon its proper location and correct installation, The Williamson Heater Company maintains a large engineering department, where drawings and specifications are made for every Victory installation submitted to it. You are thus assured a heating system that is built right, installed right, and fully guaranteed to give you the full measure of comfort to which you are entitled.

2—Economy

Victory is based upon a third of a century's experience in warm air heating. The fuel economy for which the pipeless furnace is so justly famous is emphasized in Victory by many refinements in construction. The floor register has an unusually large clearance, so that it is more efficient than some registers actually larger in size; the castings are heavy and of uniform thickness; the opening between the dome section and radiator is much larger than that of the ordinary furnace, and in designing Victory, the size of the casings has been carefully considered in relation to the radiating capacity of the castings. Victory is equipped with triple galvanized casings, with inch air-space between the two inner casings.



3—EVEN HEAT

Victory will give the home in which it is installed even, easily controlled warmth. Upstairs or downstairs, the same summer-like comfort will prevail, no matter what the thermometer on the outside says. This claim is substantiated by thousands upon thousands who use pipeless furnaces made by this company. Even temperature is the sum of a good product plus correct installation plus proper location. You can't go wrong with Victory located and installed the Williamson way.

4—MOISTURE

A large water pan, placed in front where it belongs, provides the right degree of humidity for the circulating air. The presence of this moisture in the air is one cause for the feeling of well-being present in the Victory-heated home.

5—Circulation

The Victory method of home heating by circulation of air is recognized by heating engineers as the most efficient and healthful of all. Cool air descends into the furnace, where it is warmed, sterilized, purified, and returned to your rooms, fresh and wholesome. The air is always fresh in a Victory-heated home.

6—FLEXIBILITY

A few sticks of wood in the fall or spring. Coal in the winter. Victory provides the exact temperature you need. You can warm your home thoroughly from a standing start more quickly with Victory than with any other type of furnace.

All these benefits at less cost than that of any other type of heating system

NEW MOVE TO ORGANIZE HAT AND CAP WORKERS

General Organizer for National Union Begins Membership Campaign Here.

Renewed efforts to organize workers in the hat and cap making industry in St. Louis are being made by the United Cloth Hat and Cap Makers of North America. There are approximately 500 skilled workers employed in the 25 hat and cap factories here and union officials assert that about 50 per cent of the total number are trades unionists.

It will be remembered that in 1919 and 1920 an intensive campaign to unionize all of the local hat and cap shops was made. A strike was called in the factories where employes were organized and picket lines were established about the plants employing nonunion help.

Federal injunctions restraining union officers and individuals from interfering with the business of seven hat companies were issued, and later 57 persons identified with the strike were cited for contempt and sued for damages. The matter was finally settled in September, 1920, when the union officers and strikers paid to the companies $8250 in damages, the sum agreed upon by attorneys for both sides.

Activities Cease.

From that time no further steps were taken by the union to increase its membership in St. Louis until two weeks ago, when Louis Segal, general organizer for the national union, opened an office here and began a membership campaign.

As a result of his activities in behalf of the union, an employe of the Fendelman Bros. Hat and Cap Co., 704 Washington avenue, lost his job and five other employes of the company quit work as a protest against the firm's action.

Edwin Fendelman, senior member of the firm, in explaining the situation to the Post-Dispatch, said that the dismissal of the employe was an expression of opposition to the methods employed by organizers.

"Our plant is conducted on an open-shop basis," he said, "but our employes are working under conditions approved by the union. They are getting the same rate of wages and work the same hours that union workers are under. Our employes do not care to join the union. They have told us so. Union organizers have told them they will get higher pay and shorter hours if they join the union. That is not so and we resent the representation the organizers are making to our employes."

Segal said that no attempt was being made to unionize the employes of the seven companies that sued the union officials two years ago.

"More than 90 per cent of the hat and cap makers of the United States are organized," said Segal. "In New York they are 100 per cent organized. St. Louis is one of the few cities in the country where there is any opposition to the union."

POCKETS HIS PRIDE AND FINDS SISTER AFTER 40 YEARS

mother and away from her husband, Ida decided that he needed her worse than did the family. That Thanksgiving day there was a big turkey, and there were farewells and promises of early reunion that John still remembers.

But when Ida left that was the last they saw or heard of her. She did not write, and neither would they—"That old Irish pride," John repeated, shaking his head.

Got Word Only Once.

Only once in the 40 years did they hear of either of the two daughters who had "married rich." Charley, the brother mentioned in the advertisement, who is dead now, was working in Chicago, and learned Mary's address. He wrote to John that he sought out that address, gave his name to the girl who opened the door and told her he wanted to see his sister, and that after a moment the maid returned and said his sister was out and was not expected to be in for a long time.

In the four days John spent with his sister recently, John learned from her lawyers and acquaintances how she had come to advertise for the members of the family she thought still were living.

Her first husband died 25 years ago, and she married Pendleton, at that time a well-to-do salesman. They had no children. They adopted a little girl, whose mother had advertised in the newspapers that she was unable to support the child, but seven years later, when the mother was in better circumstances, let her have the child back. Pendleton died seven years ago.

Recently Mrs. Pendleton, visiting a hospital of whose charity board she is a member, was called to the bedside of a workingman who had been injured fatally in an accident. He gave her an envelope which, after his death, was found to contain the address of his sister, a wealthy woman who had lost touch with him.

Views Changed by Evangelist.

Then the evangelist of a new church stressing the "brotherhood of man" came to town, and Mrs. Pendleton became a follower of his creed. She tried in various ways through her lawyers to locate her family, and her failure to do so and her loneliness, the lawyers told Smith, was beginning to prey upon her mind to a serious extent.

She developed an aversion to the more obvious manifestations of the wealth that had kept them estranged. Her jewelry and more ostentatious clothing she locked in a bank vault. She began to sell off 130 lots she held in a suburb at ridiculous prices. Then came John's letter in response to the advertisement.

STOCK DIVIDEND PROPOSALS MADE BY NUMBER OF COMPANIES

WEEK'S ELECTION AND RESULTS ON VARIOUS MARKETS

That the Emphatic and Surprising Reversal Embodied Should Have Had Little, if Any, Effect Declared as Quite in Keeping With Economic Aspect of Matter.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted weekly financial review, says:

"That the emphatic and surprising reversal embodied in the week's elections should have had little if any effect on the various markets is quite in keeping with the economic aspects of the matter. Aside from the tariff no sharp issues affecting business were drawn between the parties. And in the case of the tariff the present schedules are fairly certain to prevail until 1924 at least while the rebuke expressed on account of their excessive character cannot be considered as bearish in its long pull implications. In addition the new Congress barring an improbable special session will not meet until the end of 1923. Finally it would appear that the markets do not subscribe to the theory that one party or the other is the sole custodian of prosperity, a conclusion which is justified by a study of the business cycle. Governments can do something in the way of keeping the track clear for business revival but the idea that they actually can create prosperity is fallacious. The motive power for business activity springs from the growth of peoples and communities and its ebb and flow are regulated chiefly by factors within business itself.

Business Trend Upward.

"Meanwhile the actual trend of business continues upward. Railway car loadings have set a new high for the year and the performance for the week ended Oct. 28, is second to that for but one other week in the country's history. Iron and steel production for October was the largest in two years. Nevertheless, the steel corporation's unfilled orders rose 211,000 tons in the month. Increasing amounts of soft coal are being mined, stocks of fuel are being reconstituted, and the movement up the Great Lakes to the Northwest has been practically completed. Grain prices are holding most of their gains and cotton has achieved new highs. Active trade is in prospect for the closing months of the year. Even in England a quickening is felt, banking statistics showing gains in loans, bill holdings and deposits growing, and commodity prices being firm.

"If, then, the security markets are hesitating, it is not because of any unfavorable developments in the business situation or in immediate business prospects. It is, rather, because of the easing off of funds by the business revival, doubts as to whether a liberal recovery is not already discounted, and apprehensions over the long pull implications of the European muddle and our own foreign policy. Most observers can see good business ahead for a number of months. They fear, however, lest continued demoralization in continental finance and the administration's unwillingness to accept any responsibilities in helping to straighten matters out may not react unfavorably on our own trade some time during the coming year.

The European Situation.

"Certainly the European situation is unpalatable enough. The German mark continues to fall to fresh depths of demonstration, while the German printing presses are driven to accomplish fresh wonders in the way of mark production. The French franc, meanwhile, sympathetically suffers something like a collapse, dropping to more than 2 cents below the price existing last June, and French bonds continue their downward course on both domestic and foreign stock exchanges. The Reparations Commission goes to Berlin and comes away without accomplishing anything substantial. Sensible men in all countries know furthermore what needs to be done; that France must take a more reasonable attitude toward reparations, that Germany must introduce internal financial reforms, and that America must be prepared to discuss the whole matter of international debts in a reasonable way. It serves little to sit by and indulge in recriminations as to French or German obstinacy. The existing condition is a menace to world business. All interested parties, including ourselves, should sit down at a conference where all aspects of the situation may be thrashed out fully and freely and where a will to agreement may produce a comprehensive and workable readjustment of what are now sadly tangled international financial relationships."

"In an unusually active market for the short session practically all groups in the stock list were sold rather heavily. The market was weak from the start and, as stop-loss orders were uncovered the downward movement was accelerated. Although there was considerable talk in some quarters of a possibility of adverse tax legislation the selling apperad to be a continuation of professional operations which made much headway in yesterday's trading. Rails and industrials alike suffered losses of from a large fraction to over a point though pressure on the latter was the most pronounced. Bear attacks on certain industrial specialties resulted in declines of as much as 6 points. Special weakness was evident in shares of many companies which have recently voted stock dividends.

Demand for Exchange.

"There was a pronounced change in the temper of the foreign exchange market. All European exchanges met with active demand and those continental currencies which have suffered of late made their recoveries. Sterling ruled ⅛ of a cent higher at $4.46⅝. French francs advanced 8 points to 6.45 cents which compares with a low early in the week of 6.17 cents. Italian lire rose 8 points to 4.49½ cents while Belgian francs made a smaller gain. German marks were also firmer at .01⅜ of a cent as compared with .01 7-16 yesterday.

"All of the commodity markets with the exception of cotton were closed today and trading in the latter was relatively quiet. Seniment of the bulk of traders remain bullish although there has been heavy liquidation. The market moved within a comparatively narrow range today. Opening 6 points lower at 26.15 cents the December future rallied to 26.28, at which point realizing sales caused a drop of nearly 40 points. A later recovery brought the price back close to the previous close.

"The weekly statement of the Clearing House shows surplus of $35,482,510 as compared with a deficit last week of $4,086,240. Loans and discounts decreased $40,010,000 to a total of $4,562,330,000, while net demand deposits exclusive of $73,196,000 in Government deposits declined $41,031,000 and now amount to $3,727,844,000. There was an increase of $34,448,000 in reserve in the Federal Reserve Bank of member banks."

STOCKS OF COMPANIES WITH LARGE SURPLUSES ARE BOUGHT

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—Rumors of possible revision of taxation methods, coupled with unfavorable cables with reference to the situation abroad were factors in heavy selling today in the closing two hours' session of the week on the Curb Exchange. Stocks of companies with large surpluses who are expected to make some kind of stock dividend distribution before the beginning of the new year, continued to be bought.

A feature was a further advance of [illegible] points in shares of Schulte Retail Stores. The corporation reported an increase in sales for the month of October of 17 per cent over the same period in 1921. [illegible] declared in 1921 first a stock dividend of [illegible] per cent on the common and later another stock dividend of 15 per cent. Another distribution is looked for in the near future, according to gossip.

Standard Oil of Kansas was another exception to the general tendency and reached higher prices in response to the recent dividend action. Magnolia Pete reached a new high, while the rest of the [illegible] were depressed. Imperial Oil of Canada broke badly, but rallied from the lows.

Aside from Schulte in the industrial section, the new stock of New Fiction Publishing Co. attracted attention when it sold at 8, a new high.

With the exception of Durant shares, which were slightly lower, the motor group was neglected.

Dry Goods Market Review.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—Many traders were absent from the Worth street cotton cloths market today and the volume of goods recorded was not extensive. Prices, however, were very firm and the upward tendency still was in evidence. Print cloths were in fair demand with mills firm in their position. Drills were higher and sheetings and sateens were extremely strong. The [illegible] were bought in fair volume.

Raw silk was quiet and no change was shown in quotations. This was due to the fact that Armistice day was observed officially in Japan as well as in this country.

Turpentine Market Closed.

SAVANNAH, Ga., Nov. 11.—No naval stores market today, holiday.

St. Louis Stocks

Recommendations by directors of two large institutions that stock dividends be distributed marked the past week. The raising of par value of Indiahoma Refining Co. from $5 to $25, reducing thereby the number of shares from 1,000,000 to 200,000, also was announced during the week.

The May Department Stores Co. stockholders on Dec. 6 will pass on the proposed stock dividend of 80 per cent and the plan to reduce par value of stock from $100 to $50 a share. Directors voted a cash dividend of 2½ per cent, payable March 1, 1923, on all common stock, including the dividend issue. Ely-Walker Dry Goods Co. directors proposed a stock dividend of 133 1-3 per cent, the plan calling for issuance of an additional $8,000,000 of common stock of which $2,000,000 would be retained in the treasury of the company. The directors declared an extra cash dividend of 2 per cent, payable to stockholders of record Nov. 18. It was also recommended that the par value be made $25. Ely-Walker common was bid $175 on the Stock Exchange Friday. Indiahoma was bid $18.50 with $19.50 asked.

Grand Trunk Ruling Explained.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—Lord Birkenhead, former Lord Chancellor, yesterday, in the Privy Council, gave the reasons for the dismissing by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in July of the appeal of the shareholders of the Grand Trunk Railway from the findings of the Board of Arbitration, which declared the common and preferred stocks of the railway valueless.

The Privy Council, Lord Birkenhead said, did not have the right to inquire into the merits of the award of the arbitrators, but only to determine whether the arbitrators had so erred in law that their award should be set aside. The Privy Council found that they did not err in the law.

FRENCH AND BELGIAN EXCHANGE SELL AT NEW LOW LEVELS FOR YEAR

FRENCH EXCHANGE OFFERINGS LARGE, WEAKENING FRANC

Belgium Exchange Also Down — Rate on Italy Rallies After Early Week Decline — Sterling Holds Near Year's High Basis.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted weekly foreign exchange review today, says: "The conflicting conditions in the foreign exchange market became more pronounced in the past week than they had been at any time since the issues were joined in regard to maintenance of payments by Germany on reparations account. French exchange was offered in all important markets in large volume, but the source of the supply remained a matter of vague conjecture except in banking sources that may have been fully informed about the selling and considered it business policy to keep their knowledge secret. Included in the market movements was the further decline in German exchange on Wednesday to the new low record of .01 1-16 for the mark. French and Belgian exchange both sold at new low levels for the year, the declines being established even while buying progressed in large volume for the purpose of covering lines of local shorts put out a short time ago. On this movement French checks sold down to 6.17 and Belgian checks dropped to 5.64, but two exchanges rallied from the low levels later in the week, with French receding again in yesterday's trading.

"Italian exchange was weak in the first few days, but the manner in which the Government changes were effected without special disturbance had a marked influence on the exchange position and lire checks, after falling to 4.18 rallied to 4.33.

"The highest importance was attached to the action of sterling, which was steadily maintained during the greater part of the week at not far from its high level of the year. Grain and cotton bills were supplied in large volume, offerings of these documents being so heavy as to cause a decline in demand sterling to $4.44⅜ on Thursday, from which it rallied to $4.46 yesterday after selling as high as $4.46¾ earlier in the week. Greek exchange made a new low record of 1.48. Canadian exchange was strong, advancing from 100.03⅛ to 100.12½."

"There was a pronounced change in the temper of the foreign exchange market. Wall Street News and Comment

—SPECIAL DAILY—

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—There was further sharp decline on the Stock Exchange today for which there was no one definite or generally accepted cause. What happened could only be understood in the light of a combination of outside factors with unfavorable conditions within the market itself. Undoubtedly fear of bad news from Turkey deterred people who otherwise would have been tempted by the heavy fall in prices, to buy. This made the market more sensitive to the short selling and forced liquidation that were going on. There was a lot of rather vague discussions over what the increase in so-called radical representations in Congress might mean. But inasmuch as the Sixty-eighth Congress will not come into being for another year unless the President does the improbable and calls a special session next spring, these conjectures are altogether premature. They counted in the market today, however, as they doubtless will on every occasion of weakness from now on, as distant possibilities contributing to the prevailing depression in speculative circles.

Of more consequence than any of these outside considerations was the fact that despite the heavy selling at the close of October, Wall Street loans were still over-extended. This meant that many houses were carrying more stocks than they cared to carry and were possibly bringing pressure to bear upon their clients to lighten up. The selling had little reference to the question of earnings or business prospects, since railway shares were as weak as anything, although they are said to be having one of the most prosperous quarters in their history.

That the state of affairs in the Near East was anything more than a negative influence in the security dealings, was hard to believe in view of the action of the foreign exchanges. Sterling held around its recent high, and the remarkable advance in Italian lire continued, while French and Belgian francs were quoted higher. Heavy selling of French and Belgian Government bonds was once more a feature.

The selling was heaviest in the last half hour of the stock market. There was very little attempt at support and even allowing for the outside uncertainties the buying power was surprisingly poor. Prices left off at the bottom with the whole list very weak.

The Bond Market.

The bond market today was without striking feature during the two hours of trading. The tendency was still toward lower prices, particularly in the foreign group and in the tractions. The declines continued in foreign bonds, particularly French and Belgian issues. The losses, however, were not large. Czecho-Slovakia 8s went below 90 and City of Greater Prague 7½c suffered correspondingly. There was no important news from abroad nor any very great shift in foreign exchange quotations. It was evident, however, that there was a very thin market for foreign bonds. Changes in the railroad list were mixed. Penna 6½ went slightly higher. Among the longer term issues Northern Pacific 3s made a slight gain, as did Canadian Pacific 4 per cent debenture stock. Great Northern 7s were also up fractionally. Erie issues held around yesterday's closing. St. Paul bonds were inclined to be heavy, notably the convertible 4½s. Missouri, Kansas & Texas adjustments, the new issue, sold off, as did St. Louis-Southwestern consolidated 4s, American Smelting & Refining 5s went below 93. Wilson & Co. convertible 7½s held around yesterday's price, but in none of these issues was there any great activity.

NOTES.

Figures published today showed the greatest car shortage in the history of the American railroads existed on Oct. 20, when demand for freight cars in excess of current supply was 179,239, an increase of 12,890 over Oct. 23.

Rand Gold production in October totaled 778,159 fine ounces, the largest output since March, 1917, it was reported.

To the 50 per cent common stock dividend declaration by E. I. Dupont de Nemours & Co. there were today added two other melon slicings. Globe and Rutgers Fire Insurance Co. directors will propose that the authorized capital stock be increased from $700,000 to $3,500,000 and a 400 per cent stock dividend be declared. Ely & Walker Dry Goods Co. directors have authorized an increase of capital and declaration of a 133 1-3 per cent stock dividend.

$70,000,000 will be paid out by the Government Nov. 15 in interest on Liberty Bonds.

Pennsylvania Refineries at Oil City, Pa., have reduced gasoline prices one-half cent a gallon.

A seat on the Chicago Board of Trade has brought $5400, unchanged over the last sale.

Car Shortage Greater.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—Car shortage of American railroads, which was estimated last week by the Railroad Age, a transportation periodical, to be the greatest in history, has increased on the basis of the latest reports made public by the American Railroad Association. On Oct. 30, 179,239 cars more than railroads could furnish were being demanded by shippers, a number greater by 12,890 than was so reported Oct. 23. There were still 3716 freight cars scattered over various lines in good repair, but not demanded by the service at the points of location.

IRREGULAR TREND TO LIVESTOCK PRICES

Receipts for Week Are Moderate—Range of Hog Values Is Rather Small.

COMPARATIVE RECEIPTS.

	Last Wk.	Prev. Wk.	Yr. Ago.
Cattle, calves	37,209	47,691	37,974
Hogs	75,111	84,135	82,126
Sheep	7,172	10,536	10,573
Horses, mules	2,129	2,553	1,697
Totals	121,621	144,915	132,370

Receipts of livestock at the St. Louis National Stockyards were moderate in volume the past week and markets showed an irregular trend. The cattle offering was plain in quality and the few strictly good fed steers and yearlings available sold steady to possibly a shade easier on the close. Medium and common native killing steers, however, declined 25c to 50c under a narrow demand. Western grass steers, the run of which fell off to about 60 cars, practically all from Oklahoma, closed steady to strong. The top price paid for the period was $11.65 per cwt., awarded for three cars of yearling steers from Fulton County, Ill. Two other cars from the same feed lots registered $11.55. They were the only good finished cattle available, although numerous lots of fair to good steers and yearlings sold in the $10 column, followed by medium to good droves in the $9 division. Grass steers from local territory sold mainly from $6 to $7.50, followed by Oklahoma grassers at $3.75 to $6.40, and stockers and feeders at $3.50 to $7. Butcher yearlings were uneven of sale and closed steady to strong. Most of the offerings consisted of common grassers, sales of which varied from $3.25 to $7 largely. A few decent droves sold around $8 and $9. Butcher cows closed steady to possibly 25c higher, the bulk clearing late from $4 to $5. Canner and cutter cows moved up 15c to 25c, cutters moving late at $2.75 to $3.25 and canners at $2.50, $2.75, in some favored cases. Beef bulls at $4.25 to $4.75 largely and bolognas at $3.50 to $4.25 were not materially changed for the week. Stocker and feeder trade fell off materially from previous week. Reduction in demand was offset somewhat by lighter receipts and trade was steady throughout the week except on the close, when a dull, weak market prevailed. Veal calves closed sharply higher, the top Friday at $10.75 comparing with a high mark of $9 at the close of the preceding week. Common calves and yearlings from native territory likewise showed slight gains.

Hog Receipts Average.

For the week just closed hog receipts were close to an average for this time of year, although the total is 5000 less than the generous run of the preceding week. Quality fairly good and, although there was a scarcity of hogs weighing above 220 lbs. and an abundance of lights (that is, 150 to 180-lb. stock), yet the supply of little, immature pigs was moderate. While the country is thus shipping lights freely there is no general tendency in this territory to liquidate pigs 100 lbs. and under. Reports from parts of Kansas indicate that such is taking place there, but in Missouri and Illinois it is said no such condition exists.

There was a remarkably even trend to values the past week. Fluctuations were within a narrow range from day to day, and a spread of 15c covered the extreme high and low tops, the week's best figure being $8.65 for mature hogs, while on the lowest days of the week the top did not drop below $8.50. Likewise the bulk of the sales from day to day showed a narrow spread, not exceeding 15c to 20c per cwt. The market closed steady to a dime higher on nearly all classes, butchers, shippers and lights, as compared with the close the preceding week, although a shade lower than at the opening of the week under review. St. Louis butchers were fairly liberal buyers all week, taking a generous proportion of the better-weight hogs. The big packers also bought with fair freedom, although they generally entered the market late each day. Order buyers representing Eastern killers took the big end of the offering of light hogs and pigs. At the close the various classes ranged as follows: Butcher hogs, 190 to 250 lbs., $8.35 to $8.50; shippers, 140 to 180 lbs., $8.35 to $8.50; light lights, 130 to 150 lbs., $8.40 to $8.50; pigs, 120 lbs. and down, $7.50 to $8.60, according to quality; medium and light packer sows, $7 to $7.25; heavy packer sows, $6.50 to $7; stags, $6 to $7; immune stock pigs, 80 to 100 lbs., $10.50.

Lambs Are Higher.

Only a fair supply of sheep was received the past week and as there was a good demand the market was active each day and prices on the advance most every day, and at the close of the week lambs were selling fully $1 higher than at the close of the previous week, and sheep showed a gain in prices of around 50c, making both on the highest basis they have been on in several months. The week opened with the best grades of lambs selling at $13.25@13.75, but later the same kinds were bringing $14.25@14.75, and this advance on the good kinds was followed with a similar gain on most all other lambs but those that were not fat moved rather slowly and at irregular prices. Thin lambs, of course, were very dull sale. Sheep were active sale, and the only trouble experienced was that the number offered for sale was but a small proportion of the number actually needed to meet the requirements to the trade. Best mutton sheep the latter part of the week sold at $7@7.25, fair grades $6.25@6.75, heavy ewes $4.50@5, stock sheep $3.50@6, choppers and bucks, $2.50@4, and canners $1@1.75.

Horses and Mules.

The horse and mule market at St. Louis showed considerably more life the past week than during preceding weeks. Reduced receipts was the foremost factor in stimulating the improved trend in selling. Demand was at all times equal to the supply and steady to strong prices prevailed in the various departments. Horses on a commission billing numbered about 400 head, the greater part of which sold at auction. Demand was for southerners as well as some good big work horses. Mules consigned to commission firms numbered about 1100 head and trade ruled reasonably active at steady to strong prices. Thick made, qualitied, well broken cotton mules were in especially good demand.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 11.—Declining receipts and improved shipping demand had a strengthening influence on the Kansas City cattle market in the week just closed, says the Weekly Review, issued here by the United States Department of Agriculture.

Cattle receipts at the local market, receipts 66,000, were the lightest since the last week of August, comparing with 80,302 the previous week and 53,834 a year ago. With exception of most steers, the killing classes of cattle were improved, although middle grades of she stock are still relatively low, according to the report. A few fed yearings made $11.60 to $12 and heavy steers reached $11.50, but strictly prime offerings are quotable about $13. Better steers went chiefly at $8 to $9.50. Early in the week many cows sold at $3.50 to $4.50, but before the close sales were numerous at $4.75 to $5. Calves of all grades sold to better advantage and numerous at $9.50. Top was $9.75.

Fluctuations in hog prices were small, the market being around steady on an average. Top was $8.25, same a week ago. Receipts were 59,000, against 58,830 a week earlier and 42,068 a year ago.

Fat sheep and lambs were higher, with lambs showing most gain. Total receipts were 26,000, against 32,649 the preceding week and 17,141 a year ago. Best western lambs scored $14.60 and no natives passed $14.25.

ARGENTINE COMPETITION IS FACTOR IN WHEAT PRICE

CHICAGO, Nov. 11.—Uneasiness at times in regard to war danger at Dardanelles tended to make wheat average somewhat higher in price this week. Compared with a week ago, net changes in the wheat market vary from ½c decline to 1c gain, with corn up ¼c to 1¼@1⅜c, oats ranging from ⅛c decline to ¼c advance and provisions showing a rise.

Increased purchasing power, which at one stage quickly developed in the wheat market, appeared to come mainly from houses with Eastern connections and was responsible for lifting the May delivery of wheat to a new high-price record for the season. Subsequent gossip, however, that grain bought for Italy and Germany had been cancelled led to something of a reaction in sentiment and in prices as well.

Prospective keener competition at hand from Canada and Argentina was deemed of considerable importance as a handicap on holders of domestic wheat, and in this connection, it was said Argentina had sold wheat to Italy at below prices quoted both in Canada and the United States. A notably bearish showing which the Government crop report made as to corn did a good deal also to check upturns in the wheat market during the last half of the week.

Government estimates of the 1922 corn crop were almost 100,000,000 bushels in excess of what had been generally looked for. No continued aggressive selling of corn, however, took place, and the market for corn and oats held relatively firm.

Packers' buying facilitated an upturn of provision values.

Boston Wool Market.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BOSTON, Nov. 11.—The wool market was quiet and dull today, although prices were as firm as ever. Texas fall clips have been bought in some cases on a basis of $1.10 a pound clean Boston. The foreign markets all were strong. Fine staple territory was quoted at $1.35 to $1.40 clean a pound, while three-eighths blood ranged from 98c to $1.03.

Weekly Butter Review.

CHICAGO, Nov. 11.—Butter markets reacted this week after a period of steady advances and for the last two days were barely steady. The movement was slow, although prices held fairly well. A scarcity of all grades helped keep markets relatively firm, regardless of lessened consumption demand. Closing prices, 92-score butter: New York, 49½c; Philadelphia, 50½c; Boston, 49c; Chicago, 48½c.

Local Banks and Many Exchanges Closed Saturday

THE Merchants' Exchange, as well as other grain exchanges of the country, the St. Louis Stock Exchange and local banking institutions were closed Saturday in observance of Armistice day. The local Produce Exchange also was closed. Some of the other exchanges in different parts of the country likewise did not hold sessions.

All will resume business as usual Monday.

LOWER COTTON RANGE AT WEEK-END SESSION

Sharp Break in Some Securities and Sales on Recent Advance Factors in Market.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—Action of the December position Friday under selling by spot interests had an unsettling effect on the cotton market for a few moments today. This was increased by a feeling of nervousness over financial developments on the continent reflected in the recent decline in francs. Cotton came out immediately following the opening, January breaking to 25.80c and December below 26 cents. This represented a decline in December of $4 a bale from high prices of the week, which attracted support. One broker bought 10,000 bales of March, starting a rally of 20 points. With New Orleans closed and the usual absence of the Liverpool market on Saturday, operations today were centered in New York. It became evident that any reaction encountered scale buying in distant positions, and while many holders of near positions seemed more disposed to secure profits, the moment May declined demand appeared. While a loosening up of the December position came unexpectedly, it was perfectly intelligible. Houses holding lines of December after a sensational advance of 6 cents in as many weeks were led to take profits on surplus contracts. Before notice day on each active month there is always more or less liquidation and preparation for this development as well as sound business judgment, led houses to place themselves in position to take advantage of any unforeseen contingency.

A sharp break in securities caused Wall street liquidation near the close, leaving the market at the low point of the day. A great deal of resistance was disclosed so that the price lost only about 10 points. December closed 26.04c to 26.10c, March closed 25.77c to 25.80c.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—Spot cotton quiet; middling 26.15.

New Orleans Cotton Exchanges Closed.

RED CROSS ROLL CALL TO BEGIN TOMORROW

American Legion to Assist Actively in Campaign for Funds This Year.

The sixth annual roll call of the Southwestern Division of the American Red Cross will begin tomorrow with the indorsement of many prominent men and an imposing record of "services rendered."

The American Legion this year is to interest itself actively in the drive. Alvin Owsley, new national commander, has sent a letter to legion authorities here commending in highest terms the work of the Red Cross and asking for support of its campaign by the legionnaires.

521 Chapters Working.

During the last year 521 chapters were working in the Southwestern Division. The Red Cross loaned $9000 to ex-service men. It has assisted in the adjustment of 47,344 compensation claims and has assisted war veterans in many other ways. Red Cross medical social service workers have been on duty in eight public health service hospitals and in 11 contract institutions.

Nurses employed by the Red Cross have made 201,927 visits to sick people in the Southwestern Division and have inspected 381,683 children. Classes in home hygiene and care of the sick have been undertaken and instruction has been given in first-aid methods.

Disaster Relief Work.

Last year the Red Cross spent $73[illegible]926.79 in disaster relief work in the Southwestern Division. The organization in this territory now has 437,576 junior members.

National Commander Owsley wrote from Indianapolis as follows:

"I am happy to heartily indorse the annual membership roll call of the American Red Cross beginning on Armistice day. Certainly loyal Americans desire to support this commendable undertaking. The American Red Cross is an American institution and has made good in every emergency. It deserves the loyal and generous support of all true citizens. The Red Cross is known the world over by its good work. I sincerely hope that every legionnaire will do his best to make successful the membership roll call this year. Best wishes for a successful roll call."

BREMEN PHYSICIANS TO CHARGE FOREIGNERS MULTIFLIED FEES

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

BREMEN, Oct. 23.—Americans requiring the services of a Bremen physician or surgeon will hereafter be charged a fee nine times larger than that ordinarily paid by the Nationals. This in accordance with a schedule adopted by the local medical association.

Visitors from other foreign countries also will have to pay higher rates, in proportion to the esteem in which their respective currencies are held by the local doctors. Although the dollar commonly commands the highest respect of foreign moneys among Germans, United States citizens suffer less than those of a number of other countries in the new tariff. Swedes will be charged 13 times the usual fee, Swiss, 10 times, English and Dutch, nine times, and French and Italians, six times.

New rates for natives have been announced by the association. Advice will be given for 120 marks during the day. Together with a consultation, this service will be rendered in the daytime for 240 marks, and at night for 360. "Liliom" and Ed Wynn in "The Perfect Fool" Arrive Here Tonight

Joseph Schildkraut and Eva Le Gallienne Star in Molnar's Masterpiece—"Lightnin'" Next Week, and Pauline Frederick in "The Guilty One."

THE greatest of the plays by Franz Molnar, Hungary's foremost dramatist—a legend entitled "Liliom," in which the hero is killed in the fifth scene, taken to Heaven in the sixth and brought back to earth in the seventh—will be presented at the Shubert-Jefferson tonight by Joseph Schildkraut, Eva Le Gallienne and part of the cast which played the fantasy at the Garrick Theater, New York, beginning April 20, 1921. This is the second of the Theater Guild's productions to reach this city, the first having been "Mr. Pim Passes By."

St. Louis is the third city to see Ed Wynn, a comedian who reduces imbecility to a fine art, in his revue, "The Perfect Fool," which ran a year in New York and three months in Chicago, and which opens a week's engagement tonight at the American. The management promises the original production and company intact.

"Liliom" is a Hungarian word meaning "Lily," and is slang for a "tough." It is the nickname of Andreas Zavocki, barker at a carousel in the outskirts of Budapest, a bully, a rogue, a beater of women—and a side-tracked artist. His story, and that of his sweetheart, Julie, is unfolded with amazing virtuosity, with imaginative daring, and an uncanny blending of realism and fantasy, humor and pathos, tenderness and tragedy.

Incidents of the Play.

IN the play are such brilliant incidents as Julie incoherently confessing to her dead lover the love she had always been ashamed to tell; Liliom crying to the distant carousel the glad news that he is to be a father; Marie, Julie's sister, and her husband, Wolf, posing for their photograph, while broken-hearted Julie stands looking after the vanishing Liliom, the thieves' song ringing in her ears; two policemen grumbling about pay and pensions while Liliom lies bleeding to death; Liliom furtively proffering his daughter a star he has stolen for her in heaven.

Schildkraut, who plays the part of Liliom, and who studied the part with Molnar himself, is a son of Rudolph Schildkraut, one of the foremost Jewish actors in the country. The son came to this country two years ago after winning stellar honors in his native Rumania. He is to leave the company about the first of the year to play the title role in the Theater Guild's forthcoming production of Ibsen's "Peer Gynt."

Miss Le Gallienne, who plays Julie, a type of adoring and spiritual love, is the daughter of the poet, Richard Le Gallienne. She was last seen here in "Not So Long Ago." In the supporting company are Elise Bartlett, Egon Brecher, Lillian Kingsbury, John Crump, Philip Wood, Maud Andrew, Brandon Peters, Rose Hobart, Carlton Rivers, Howard Claney, Marlyn Brown, M. C. Herman, William Franklin and others. Because of the length of the play, it is stated that the curtain will rise each evening at 8:10. Molnar will be remembered as the author of "The Devil," in which George Arliss played some years ago.

Ed Wynn Wrote the Book.

WYNN himself is responsible for the book of his current opus, and the music and lyrics are by Julian Mitchell. In the 19 scenes are promised many lavish stage pictures

What They Are Doing in the Movie Studios

Dan Mason, who is making a series of Plum Center Comedies, is about to celebrate his fiftieth anniversary as a comedian. Dan is modest enough to call it simply his "golden anniversary as a character man," but those who have seen Dan as "Pop Tuttle" in the Plum Center Comedies are willing to believe that he is and always was a "comedian." Just at present Dan is making a two-reeler, the fourth of his series, entitled "Pop Tuttle, Fire Chief." He is making these comedies under the direction of Robert Eddy, who directed the famous old character man in the early Toonerville comedies. Mason started his stage career in 1872. "I didn't lose a day," explains Dan. "I left the drug store where I was employed on Saturday night and I was an actor Monday night. If the man who kept the drug store had given me a dollar a week more I suppose I wouldn't have gone. But he didn't and here I am."

Evidently Johnnie Walker, featured in "My Dad," a new R-C picture soon to be released through the Film Booking Office of America, believes in reforming the Northwest. At any rate in this picture of the snow country there's not a dance hall or a saloon to be seen. But Johnnie does not pose as a propagandist. "It was just because 'My Dad' was a story that didn't need to be bolstered up by any dance hall scene. Some producers believe that all they have to do to create an interesting picture is to film 'Red Eye Rest' with its quota of dancing girls and hard drinking men. I figured that the public was tired of such stuff, and besides, it isn't true to life. Dance halls are really going out, as they say in the style catalogues."

"Colleen of the Pines" is Jane Novak's first picture of a new series now being produced by Chester Bennett. Miss Novak is famous for her delineation of outdoor roles and "Colleen of the Pines" is expected to make her more famous, for she is outdoors from reel one almost to the end, except for some scenes showing the interior of a cabin. Edward Hearn plays opposite Miss Novak, being cast as a member of the Northwest Mounted Police. "Colleen of the Pines" is released through the Film Booking Offices, formerly Robertson-Cole Distributing Corporation.

It isn't often that a motion picture director can get a metropolitan po-

John Barrymore to Play "Hamlet" This Week

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.

VENTURESOME managers continue to launch play after play upon the dramatic waters, where the season has already beheld so many wrecks. No less than seven new productions are listed for next week, the most interesting being a presentation of "Hamlet" Tuesday night at the Sam H. Harris Theater, with John Barrymore in the role of the doleful Dane. Settings have been made by Robert Edmond Jones, and in the cast will be Rosalind Fuller, Blanche Yurka, Tyrone Power and numerous others.

Three new openings are scheduled for Monday night. "Merton of the Movies," a comedy adapted by Marc Connelly and George S. Kaufman from Harry Leon Wilson's novel, will be presented at the Cort, with Glenn Hunter, Florence Nash, A. Romaine Callender and J. K. Murray in the company. The Equity Players' second production, Leon Cunningham's "Hospitality," will be given at Forty-eighth Street Theater. Louise Closser Hale and Tom Powers have the leading parts. George M. Cohan's new musical comedy, "Little Nellie Kelly," will appear at the Liberty. Elizabeth Hines, Charles King and Barrett Greenswood are among those in the cast.

On Monday night, also, Mme. Cecile Sorel of the Comedie Francaise will begin a series of plays in French, at the Thirty-ninth Street Theater. The opening work will be "The Adventuress."

A. A. Milne's comedy, "The Romantic Age," will be given Tuesday night at the Comedy Theater, with a cast including Margolo Gillmore, J. M. Kerrigan, Marsh Allen and Daisy Belmore. On the same evening, at the Cohan Theater, will be offered the late Henri Bataille's

James Kirkwood and Helene Chadwick, in "The Sin Flood"—New Grand Central.

Barrymore's "Sherlock" and "The Sin Flood" on Local Film Bills

Thomas Meighan in "Man Who Saw Tomorrow," Tom Mix in "Arabia" and "The Rosary" Also Featured.

John Barrymore, in "Sherlock Holmes," is the week's screen feature at the West End Lyric and Capitol Theaters. This is an eight-reel version of William Gillette's famous play based on the Conan Doyle detective stories. The leading feminine role is portrayed by Carol Dempster.

The play presents a duel of wits between Holmes, the detective, and Moriarity, London's arch-crook. The detective, by ceaselessly collecting evidence, drives Moriarity deeper into the underworld, but cannot get enough information to convict him. Moriarity attempts to kill the detective, but, failing in this, he lays a plan to entice him to his den. Holmes confounds the villain and gets away in a thrilling manner.

The Benson Victor Record Orchestra of Chicago heads the program at the New Grand Central this week. The orchestra is among the best known in the country and will be under the direction of Roy Bargy, a pianist of high rank.

Goldwyn's production, "The Sin Flood," is the photoplay feature. It attempts to show that all men, in the face of death, will forget the wrongs done them by their brothers, but if the probability of death is wiped away the hate will return to their hearts as before. James Kirkwood, Richard Dix, Helene Chadwick and Ralph Lewis have the principal roles. Other features on the bill will be Gene Rodemich's specially arranged Armistice day overture, featuring songs that were popular during the war; Oscar H. Jost, playing and singing Kipling's "Recessional," and a comedy, Neal Burns in "Ocean Swells."

The Missouri's leading attraction is "The Man Who Saw Tomorrow," with a cast including Thomas Meighan, Leatrice Joy, Theodore Roberts, June Elvidge and Eva Novak.

Meighan has the role of a young man who, in some magic and mys-

"DeLuxe" The Bedspring LUXURIOUS

Relieve the Nerve Pressure that Wrecks your Health

Noted physicians and all anatomical experts agree that many nervous diseases and general ill feeling is due to nerve pressure. In many instances this nerve pressure has been caused by slight dislocation of the backbone, due to a bedspring which does not properly support the body.

You can't sleep peacefully on a bedspring that twists the spine and fails to support the neck and waist. The Rome De Luxe cannot sag as it is built to support every part of the anatomy equally—insuring absolute bodily comfort and complete relaxation.

The Rome De Luxe Bedspring is interchangeable—fits either wood or metal beds. Buy one at your dealer's today to insure yourself a good sleep tonight.

TOURISTS MARRIED ON BRIDGE MADE FAMOUS BY NOVEL

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LEXINGTON, Ky. — To give a romantic turn to their marriage Miss Mabel Smith of Oklahoma and W. B. House of Orlando, Fla., who are touring Kentucky with a party of friends, went to an old covered wooden bridge, which spans Elkhorn Creek, near Stamping Ground, 10 miles northwest of this city, and were married by the Rev. George C. Waggoner.

The bridge was made famous by the novel, "Tempest and Sunshine," written many years ago by Mrs. Mary J. Holmes. The entrance to the bridge was blocked with automobiles for the ceremony, and a large number of travelers and villagers witnessed the ceremony.

and dance novelties. In the company are Janet Velie, Flo Newton, Estelle Penning, Anita Furman, Edna Hamel, True Rice, John Dale, Cass Burt, George E. Romaine, Harriette Keyes, Jeanette Fielding, Ivey Kirkwood, Loretta Ferrati, Toma, Yoichie and Kiku Meyako, and numerous others, with a big chorus and an augmented orchestra, directed by Antonio Bafunno.

The far-famed comedy, "Lightnin'", the most successful play of recent years, which has established new records for length of runs in New York and Chicago, will arrive at the American next week, but not with the original company, headed by Frank Bacon. The part of "Lightnin' Bill" will be played here by Thomas Jefferson, a son of Joseph Jefferson, and Miss Bessie Bacon daughter of the author, will play the role of the vaudeville actress in the divorce scene. It will be followed in December by "Dulcy," Doris Keane in "The Czarina," and Fred Stone in "Tip Top."

Pauline Frederick will appear at the Shubert-Jefferson next Sunday night in "The Guilty One," a new play by Michael Morton and Peter Traill, which was first produced in Chicago and has not yet tried its fortunes in New York. Following this production, the Jefferson announces the Greenwich Village Follies for the week Nov. 26, and then an Al Woods farce, "The Demi-Virgin," with Hazel Dawn.

"East Is West" at Garrick.

"EAST IS WEST," a comedy with a Chinese heroine, which was played at the Shubert-Jefferson last January, will be undertaken this week by the Woodward Players at the Garrick. Miss Hazel Whitmore will have the part of Ming Toy, which was taken by Miss Fay Bainter.

The revue section of the bill at the Empress is a condensed version of a musical comedy called "Oh, What a Girl!" There are five scenes, presented by a company of 50 people. In the revue and in the vaudeville acts preceding it will be such entertainers as the Klein brothers, Moran and Wiser, Buddy Doyle, Marie Stoddard, La Triska, the Manhattan Trio, the Wilson sisters, Hermosa Jose, Jeanne Steele, Eugene Redding, Irma Bertrand and Donald Carroll. The Empress promises appearances, in future shows, of Irene Castle, Nora Bayes, Wesley Barry and Eva Tanguay.

Gus Edwards' Revue at Orpheum.

THE fifteenth annual song revue of Gus Edwards, entitled "A Fountain of Youth," is the featured item on the Orpheum's program. In his company of juveniles are Alice Furness, a singer; Chester Fredericks, eccentric dancer; Margie Rooney, Helen Lynd, Hazel Johnson and Mary Bay. Others on the bill include Tom Smith, a comedian of the pecan brand; George Kelly, brother of the "Virginia Judge," Walter C. Kelly—in a farce, "The Show Off;" Niobe, in an acquatic act, during which she is said to sing and juggle things under water; Rubin and Hall, in "Ida Wanna;" Jones and Jones, black-face comedians, and Ruth, Albert and Jean Fifer, youthful dancers.

At the Rialto, for the first half of the week, the entertainers are Dave Ferguson and a company in a comedy skit, "The Rounder of Old Broadway;" the Brown sisters, in a song and instrumental turn; a male quartet, called "The Four of Us;" Crystal Bennett, woman boxer, with Mary Raffin, in an athletic bit; Madelon and Paula Miller, and the Willie brothers. On the bill beginning Thursday will be the Skelly-Heit Revue, Mabel and Elaine, Henry I. Marshall and Sawer and Eddy.

At Other Theaters.

AT the Columbia "The Chase," an elaborate animal act, occupies chief position during the first part of the week. There will also be presented Jessie Millar, cornetist; Cortelli and Dowd, in "A Bit of Sunny Italy;" Gypsy Meredith and a company in a comedy skit, "On the Run," and Tyler and Crolius, in "Nifty Nonsense." Beginning Thursday, the schedule will include Almond and Hazel, in "From Summer to Winter," and Charles Jones, in "Bells of San Juan."

The Grand's list comprises Harry Cornell and the Faye sisters in a song and dance revue; the Werner Amoros Trio, Earle and Edwards, the Ambler brothers, Al and Mabel Joy, Al Lester and Le Hoen and Du Preece. The Gayety's offering is "Americans Abroad," a fantastic revue in 11 scenes, with a big company headed by Eddie Shubert. The German Theater Stock Co. will present "Geier Wally," a play of Tyrolean mountain-folk, tonight at the Eagle Auditorium, Jefferson and Lafayette avenues. The principal roles will be taken by Miss Lore Duino and Otto Ludwig.

HONEGGER'S WORK ON SYMPHONIC PROGRAM

First Orchestral Piece of Swiss Composer Played in America to Be Heard Here.

Thanks to the enterprise of Director Ganz, the second regular symphony concerts, on Friday afternoon and Saturday evening of this week, will mark the orchestral debut in America of Arthur Honegger, a young composer of radical tendencies whose works have been making a remarkable stir in Europe. Some of his songs have been given in this country, but never before has a symphonic piece of Honegger's figured on a program in the United States.

The composition chosen for his introduction on this side of the Atlantic is called "Pastorale d'Ete," or "Pastoral of Summer." It is not one of his revolutionary works, though one of the most advanced ones, the mimetic symphony, "Horace Victorieux," is to be played by the St. Louis Orchestra later in the year. The "Pastorale d'Ete" is clearly and simply written, almost in classic style. According to Director Ganz, it is not as progressive as Debussy.

Mme. Marguerite Namara, soprano of the Chicago Opera Company, will be the soloist on this occasion, making her first appearance with the orchestra in its home city, although she accompanied it on last spring's tour through the South and Middle West. She has appeared here in recital. Her numbers will be the Recitative and Aria of Lia, from Debussy's cantata, "L'Enfant Prodigue," and the familiar cheval de bataille, "Ah, fors' e lui," from Verdi's "La Traviata." Mme. Namara is a pupil of Jean de Reszke, and the wife of Guy Bolton, a well-known playwright. She has recently had a season in London.

Borodine's Second Symphony.

Another "first-time" work on the program is Borodine's Second Symphony, in B Minor, which Russian nationalists consider the greatest symphonic work ever produced in their country. The program will be as follows:

Overture to Figaro..........Mozart
Recitation and Aria of Lia, from L'Enfant Prodigue ....Debussy
Symphony in B Minor, No. 2, Op. 5 —Borodine
I. Allegro moderato.
II. Scherzo: Molto vivo.
III. Andante.
IV. Finale: Allegro.
(First time.)
Pastorale d'Ete ....Honegger
(First time.)
Aria, Ah, fors' e lui, from la Traviata —Verdi
Overture to Guillaume Tell..Rossini

Mrs. Havens Today's Soloist.

Mrs. Raymond Havens, contralto, of Kansas City, will be the soloist at this afternoon's popular concert at the Odeon, and her piano accompaniments will be played by Mrs. Elva Faeth Rider, also of Kansas City, who was a pupil of Director Ganz in Berlin. The program will be as follows:

Overture to Mignon........Thomas
First Move, Allegro Moderato, from Symphony No. 8, in B Minor, Unfinished ....Schubert Songs with Orchestra.
a Aria, Che faro senza Euridice? from Orfeo ed Euridice Gluck
From the Land of the Sky-Blue Water ....Cadman
Bacchanale from Samson et Dalila —Saint-Saens
Evensong Schumann
(Orchestrated by Saint-Saens.)
Songs with Piano—
a The Sailor's Wife..H. T. Burleigh
b The Cave ......Edwin Schneider
c Dream Dawn ....Powell Weaver
Marche Slave ....Tschaikowsky

At the third regular concerts, on Nov. 17 and 18, the soloist will be Mme. Olga Samaroff, famous pianist, native St. Louisan, and wife of Leopold Stokowski, director of the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra. She will play Schumann's A-Minor Concerto, Op. 54. Among the orchestral numbers will be Haydn's symphony, "La Reine de France," and the symphonic poem, "Tod und Verklaerung," by Richard Strauss.

To Keep Hair Wavy, Lustrous, Beautiful

The use of the hot curling iron cannot be too strongly condemned. It means death to the hair eventually. Moreover, it is entirely unnecessary. Long or bobbed hair can be kept beautifully wavy and curly to any extent and in any form desired by using the simple and harmless silmerine method. Liquid silmerine should be applied to the hair before doing it up, using a clean toothbrush. In about three hours you will find that a very pretty "natural" wave and curliness has resulted, and the effect will last quite a considerable time.

Liquid silmerine is really beneficial and is not sticky nor greasy. Neither does it streak the hair nor stain the scalp. You need get only a few ounces from your druggist. The best way is to divide the front and back hair into from four to six strands and to moisten each strand separately from root to tip.

RUB RHEUMATIC, ACHING JOINTS AND STOP PAIN

St. Jacobs Oil stops any pain, and rheumatism is pain only.

Not one case in fifty requires internal treatment. Stop drugging! Rub soothing, penetrating St. Jacobs Oil right into your sore, stiff, aching joints, and relief comes instantly. St. Jacobs Oil is a harmless rheumatism liniment, which never disappoints, and cannot burn the skin.

Limber up! Quit complaining! Get a small trial bottle of old, honest St. Jacobs Oil at any drug store, and in just a moment you'll be free from rheumatism pain, soreness and stiffness. Don't suffer! Relief awaits you. St. Jacobs Oil is just as good for sciatica, neuralgia, lumbago, backache, sprains.

Famous Old Recipe for Cough Syrup

Easily and Cheaply Made at Home, But It Beats Them All for Quick Results.

Thousands of housewives have found that they can save two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough preparations, by using this well-known old recipe for making cough syrup. It is simple and cheap but it has no equal for prompt results. It takes right hold of a cough and gives immediate relief, usually stopping an ordinary cough in 24 hours or less.

Get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any druggist, pour it into a pint bottle, and add plain granulated sugar syrup to make a full pint. If you prefer, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, it tastes good, keeps perfectly, and lasts a family a long time.

It's truly astonishing how quickly it acts, penetrating through every air passage of the throat and lungs—loosens and raises the phlegm, soothes and heals the membranes, and gradually but surely the annoying throat tickle and dreaded cough disappear entirely. Nothing better for bronchitis, spasmodic croup, hoarseness or bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract known the world over for its healing effect on membranes.

Avoid disappointment by asking your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

drama in four acts, "The Love Child," in an adaptation by Martin Brown. Principal parts are assigned to Sidney Blackmer, Janet Beecher and Lee Baker. "Virtue," a melodrama of American life, by William Everett, will be produced Tuesday evening at the Nora Bayes Theater. In the company are Pauline Armitage, George McQuarrie, Laura Arnold and others.

Cast for "The Lucky One."

THE cast for A. A. Milne's "The Lucky One," which the Theater Guild is to present at the Garrick, consists of Denis King, Percy Wareham, Violet Heming, Helen Westley, Carrie Ashford and Romney Brent. Charles S. Coburn and Mrs. Coburn are to take a company of "So This Is London" on the road for George S. Cohan.

Miss Clemence Dane's "Will Shakespeare" is to be presented by Winthrop Ames about the first of the year, although no actor has as yet been found for the title role. The leading feminine parts have been assigned. Anne Hathaway will be played by Winifred Lenihan. Queen Elizabeth by Haidee Wright, and Mary Fytton, the dark lady of the Sonnets, by Katherine Cornell. The production will have incidental music in the Elizabethan manner by Deems Taylor, and settings by Normal Bel-Geddes.

Frank Bacon has grown so weary of playing in "Lightnin'" that he insisted on a vacation of two weeks between the play's closing in Chicago on Dec. 9 and its appearance in Boston. . . . Guy Bolton's newest play, called "Polly Preferred"—which sounds like further developments in the case of "Polly With a Past"—was tried out last Sunday night in Cleveland, with Patricia Collinge in the leading role. . . .

"Decameron Nights," which has been one of the outstanding successes in London, and which, by the way, was written by an American theatrical manager, Robert McLaughlin of Cleveland, will not be seen in this country till next year.

Harry B. Smith, librettist for a score of musical comedies, has received such acetylene treatment for some of the books he wrote that he has taken refuge behind the pseudonym of "Frank Dalton." His name has appeared thus on several programs, the latest being "Springtime of Youth."

Musical Comedy From the German.

FROM the German play, "Die Tolle Lola," a new musical comedy to be called "Lola," is being made, and will be shown here under the management of F. C. Coppicus, formerly concert manager for Enrico Caruso. . . "Barnum Was Right," a farcical comedy by Philip Bartholomae, had its opening Monday night at Atlantic City. . . . Lieutenant-Colonel C. T. Davis, who was in the Indian army from 1902 until the close of the recent war, will play the part of the Colonel of the British Indian army in Bernard Fagan's "The Wheel of Life."

Recent days have been blue ones for box-office spirits. Even the established successes that have been selling out regularly have known the sorrow of empty rows. Some tickets from the higher-priced reviews have been seen upon the cut-rate stands. More than 10 shows have admitted their plans for early departure. . . . Chicago has given Eugene O'Neill's "The Hairy Ape" its first big money outside of New York, placing it during one week at least on a par with "Anna Christie" for earning ability. Luigi Pirandello's "Six Characters

IF SKIN BREAKS OUT AND ITCHES APPLY SULPHUR

Just the moment you apply Mentho-Sulphur to an itching, burning or broken out skin, the itching stops and healing begins, says a noted skin specialist. This sulphur preparation, made into a pleasant cold cream, gives such a quick relief, even to fiery eczema, that nothing has ever been found to take its place.

Because of its germ destroying properties, it quickly subdues the itching, cools the irritation and heals the eczema right up, leaving a clear, smooth skin in place of ugly eruptions, rash, pimples or roughness.

You do not have to wait for improvement. It quickly shows. You can get a little jar of Rowles Mentho-Sulphur at any drug store.

Safeguard Their Health By Electric Cleaning!

Electrical outlets mean convenience and economy; convenience because with one or more outlets in each room in your house you can utilize an electric cleaner or other electrical appliance, to the greatest possible advantage; economy because electrical energy properly applied eliminates work, worry, dust and dirt, conserving human strength and the freshness and beauty of furniture, rugs, carpets and tapestries.

It is only possible by the development of your electric light and power company which in turn makes possible the proper development of your community.

IF every Mother knew the danger to her children that lurks in dirt infested rugs and floor coverings, she'd not sleep until they were as clean as only the electric vacuum cleaner can clean them.

Dirt has no place in the home, no more than disease and sickness. Where there are youngsters it must be fought as a pernicious evil! But because it is not always visible, many housewives believe themselves free from it. Nevertheless, it is present, lurking in floor coverings, hiding in hidden corners, cracks and crevices, breeding disease, vermin and contagion.

The floor is the natural indoor playground for the kiddies and their household pets. Rugs and carpets collect all the hairs, lint and litter, as well as the tracked-in grit. This is ground under foot, deep into the web, along with the germs that thrive on foreign matter. Sweeping, beating, shaking the old way, only dislodges surface dirt, scattering it about the house, while driving the fine minute particles of grit and grime still deeper into the fabric.

Only the electric vacuum cleaner removes this embedded germ infested dirt, without injury to the nap or fabric. Only the electric cleaner cleans away all foreign matter without raising dirt storms. Only electric vacuum cleaning brightens and renews coverings, upholsterings and furnishings, while prolonging their life, enhancing their beauty, safeguarding precious young lives by making the home hygienically clean. Considered from every viewpoint, no other method of cleaning ever devised is so easy, simple, thorough and economical.

Any dealer or lighting company will gladly prove all this to you, without obligation, if you'll telephone or call.

There is an attachment for your electric vacuum cleaner which removes all germ-laden dust, and keeps your library fresh and clean!

Invents New Lamp

Said to Be Whiter and Cheaper Light Than Electric or Gas.

Washington Patents have been granted by the Government to a lighting engineer by the name of Johnson, on a new lamp for burning ordinary kerosene oil. This lamp produces a vapor from the oil which makes a blue flame that incandesces a mantle and thus creates a very strong, soft, pure white light. As it consumes only 6% oil mixed with 94% air, it is exceedingly economical. Said to be very simple to operate, odorless, noiseless and dangerless.

One of these new lamps can be secured on 10 days' free trial by writing to Mr. L. A. Johnson, 609 W. Lake Street, Chicago, Illinois. He also wants local distributors and has a very unique selling plan to offer agents. He is even offering to give one free to the first user in each locality who will help introduce this new light.

DANDRUFFY HEADS BECOME HAIRLESS

If you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It does no good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. Four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.

in Search of an Author" has a last line not included in the official translation, though Pirandello, a Shavian of Rome, is said to be touchy about changes in his piece. The original had the manager yelling in disgust: "Pretense, reality, to hell with it all. I've wasted a whole day with these people." The new ending, as delivered nightly at the Princess Theater, goes: "Pretense, reality, to hell with it all. I'm in the theater to make a living. Frank, get out the parts of 'The Bride's Revenge!'"

"The Rubicon" Censored.

AFTER one performance, "The Rubicon," a lively play from the French, was closed by the Mayor of Cincinnati. . . . Laurette Taylor will appear around Christmas time, not in a new play by her husband, J. Hartley Manners, but in Fannie Hurst's "Humoresque." . . . Allan Pollock, having purchased "A Bill of Divorcement," has renamed it "Divorcement," for better luck.

Mrs. Fiske's new play, "Paddy," by Lillian Barrett, will open in Rochester on Nov. 20 and reach New York two weeks later. . . . Fred Stone's eldest daughter, Dorothy, will appear with him in a musical piece next season. . . . Laura Hope Crewes will appear with Eugene O'Brien in "Steve."

"Captain Applejack," in which Wallace Eddinger and Mary Nash have been holding forth at the Court Theater since last December, closed tonight, and will take to the road. . . . Ann Pennington is another performer likely to appear on the Orpheum circuit this winter. The musical production in which she was to have been featured has been postponed.

COLLEGE CLUB LECTURES TO OPEN TOMORROW NIGHT

First, of Course, to Be by Dr. B. T. Baldwin of the Iowa Child Welfare Service.

The College Club course of lectures on "Education Today," will open tomorrow night when Dr. Bird T. Baldwin of the Iowa Child Welfare Station will speak on "What Is the Normal Child?" at the little theater of the Artists' Guild, 810 North Union boulevard, at 8 o'clock.

Dr. Baldwin is a well-known psychologist, who is a firm believer in the necessity of co-relation of mental and physical growth for the best development of the child, and while others have devoted their attention to deficient or delinquent children, he has specialized in the study of children who are of the average, normal standards. He will show pictures and give mothers many valuable hints on the rearing of children.

The second lecture in the course will be given by Dr. Hendrik Van Loon, author of the "Story of Mankind," who will speak on Dec. 4 on "History Retold." Tickets for the course are on sale at 1111 Olive street.

Druggists Know the Value of Pluto

Your druggist knows that waste matter accumulated in the system is a breeding ground for disease of every kind. 80 per cent of all sickness, in fact, originates at this source.

Quick relief therefore is of utmost importance. That's why your druggist recommends Pluto Water. Its prompt action, within 30 minutes to two hours, means speedy elimination of dangerous accumulations. And Pluto, being a water laxative, is harmless, safe—will not gripe.

In cases of sickness, it is always best to call a doctor. Pluto, however, is the "ounce of prevention" which, when used promptly, will often ward off serious results. It is a wise precaution to keep Pluto always in the home.

lice force to work in a picture. Yet Police Chief O'Brien of San Francisco not only consented to allow some of his finest to appear before the camera during the filming of "In the Name of the Law," but actually worked with the director. "In the Name of the Law" is an Emory Johnson production which will be released in the early fall through the Film Booking Offices of America.

Johnson went to Chief O'Brien and told him a policeman was the hero of the picture he was making. This patrolman had a family and supported it by risking his life daily for an unthinking public. Would the Chief allow a few men to be used for atmosphere?

"I should say I will," the Chief told Mr. Johnson. "Any picture that has that theme has my support. There are too many bogus cops in pictures anyway."

Later the Chief took an interest to the extent that he was present at the making of scenes. He offered some valuable suggestions and as a result "In the Name of the Law" is one of the most accurate picturizations of police life ever shown on the screen.

Owen Moore was recently married to Marjorie Daw—in a studio scene. His wife, Kathryn Perry, looked on.

The announced screening, by Select Pictures, of Oscar Wilde's "A Woman of No Importance," reminds the publicity men that many of Wilde's plays have been staged in America, but none of them has been screened. Rose Coghlan starred in "A Woman of No Importance"; Edward Davis played, in vaudeville, "The Picture of Dorian Gray"; "Salome" was this Spring staged in New York, and other Wilde plays familiar to theatergoers include "Lady Windermere's Fan and "The Importance of Being Earnest."

Permission was granted to film the Kentucky Derby and pictures were taken for "Garrison's Finish," which is a racing story recently filmed. Besides scenes from the famous Kentucky race, there will also be views of the races at Belmont Park. These pictures, while giving greater realism to the story, will be of especial interest to all followers of horse racing.

In 1903, Douglas Fairbanks was employed by a New York hardware firm at the princely salary of $5 a week. Before that time he had been on the stage in stock. Business, however, did not appeal to him and he returned to the stage. Within a few years he attained the success which has culminated in his present-day fame on the screen.

Gladys Hulette was born and educated in New York; appeared in many parts on the speaking stage, and was seen recently in "Fol'able David" and "Fair Lady." She is 5 feet 4 inches tall, weighs 114 pounds and has brown hair and grey eyes.

Priscilla Dean has been in the movies nine years, starting with the old Reliance Company in New York in one-reel features.

Woman Heads Indian Tribe.

ARKANSAS CITY, Kan.—For the first time in history the Kaw tribe of Indians is headed by a woman. At a recent gathering of tribe members, Mrs. Lucy Toyiah Eads of Kaw City was chosen chieftainess, with Mose Bell Mard of Pawhuska as her assistant. The Kaws for 15 years have been without a leader, but recent developments in their fight for land brought out the need for a leader, and Mrs. Eads was selected as the one most fitted to head the tribe. Old Wahshunga was the last chief of the tribe. He died 15 years ago.

ST. LOUIS IS A GOOD CITY TO LIVE IN, WORK IN AND PLAY IN

Your Own City

ST. LOUIS—your own city—has gained wide-spread reputation as one of the progressive cities of the nation. The spirit of aggressiveness in St. Louis has awakened the business, financial and commercial world to the resources and facilities of this city. Those who travel or keep abreast of outside comment appearing from time to time in magazines and newspapers, appreciate St. Louis' enviable position among great American municipalities. The citizens of no other city have more to be proud of than have those of St. Louis.

What Others SAY About St. Louis

THE MUNICIPAL OPEN-AIR THEATER in Forest Park—the largest municipally owned outdoor theater in the world—brought the following from a visitor from afar in a recently published interview:

"We found the theater itself a gem in setting such as no jeweler ever conceived, so beautiful are its surroundings. We found it a tremendous factor in civic musical culture, yet providing its education in sugar-coated form, as it were."

THE CHARM OF THE MUNICIPAL OPERA PRODUCTIONS and the initiative of St. Louis in leading the world in this form of entertainment was complimented as follows by an Eastern critic:

"Certainly there is nothing else in America like the St. Louis Municipal Opera. I saw an opera made an art that is living and vital, and an art for all of the people instead of a society function at prohibitive prices."

THE ST. LOUIS FASHION SHOW has become a spectacle of national fame. Delegates come annually from other cities to study and imitate it. The success of this great style pageant received this tribute from an outsider:

"I have never witnessed a spectacle of such magnitude presented under such ideal conditions. The ability of St. Louis to act on so large a scale is a real example of the spirit which has advanced St. Louis so rapidly in the commercial world."

FROM ANOTHER:

"St. Louisans look upon everything that is good for St. Louis as their business. They've grown out of the narrow notion that each department of business must 'shinny on its own side.' They realize that the Fashion Show is for St. Louis, that it spreads the fame of the city and brings people and business to St. Louis."

THE ST. LOUIS ZOO, which is rapidly taking rank as one of the greatest in the United States, receives this comment:

"The St. Louis Zoo not only gives the animals a home, but reproduces as nearly as possible the natural habitat of the varied species."

ST. LOUIS' PACKAGE-CAR SYSTEM for quick deliveries throughout the St. Louis trade zone is regarded as follows:

"Through co-operation with railroad officials, the traffic department of the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce has established a package-car system which is attracting national attention. More than 1,200 package cars leave St. Louis daily with less-than-carload shipments under sealed orders to distributing centers. They reach their destination with express-like speed and make possible a rapid delivery to towns, large and small, in every territory.

"On the single item of interest charges accruing on shipments delayed in transit, it is estimated that the merchants of St. Louis are saving $1,200 a day, or more than $427,000 a year."

MISSISSIPPI RIVER TRANSPORTATION and the revival of river traffic has received this attention from the outside:

"River transportation is bound to have a big part in solving the distribution problem. The city that is ready to meet the program will have a part in it. That is why St. Louis is on its toes and in the fight."

ST. LOUIS MANNER OF DOING THINGS is "catching on," as is shown by the following editorial comment:

"Over on the banks of the Mississippi St. Louis is surprising the country by her awakening. There is a new spirit in St. Louis today. An aggressive element is in the saddle. This element has decided that the city is entitled to more than she has, and these live chaps are going out after everything St. Louis is entitled to. It is a pleasure to praise this new spirit of St. Louis."

ANOTHER SAYS:

"Today, St. Louis is hustling. There is new vigor in the old town. St. Louis knows the need of immediate action, and is not losing any time. It is from St. Louis that a good part of the West gets its impulse today."

Outside Opinion of St. Louis

The farmer of the Middle West thinks of St. Louis as an extensive grain and stock market. The metals producer thinks of it as one of the great steel-casting centers of the country. The leather interests study the policy of St. Louis' great shoe commodities. The cotton man thinks of St. Louis as one of the great cotton distributing points. The lumberman thinks of it as the largest hardwood and pine market in the world. Merchants throughout the Mississippi Valley, South and Southwest, know that St. Louis wholesale houses carry the largest open stocks of any wholesale market in the United States. St. Louis' Public School system is recognized by educators as one of the most complete in the United States.

THE

PIANOFORTE

The Mason & Hamlin Piano costs more than any other; and yet those competent to judge declare that its worth far exceeds its price, for into it are built the things that are beyond the measurement of money.

Like the old Cremona violins its enduring beauty of tone gives it a unique place among instruments of its kind. Harold Bauer, master musician, writes: "It is the most superbly beautiful instrument that I know": Pablo Casals, known as the greatest living musician who draws the bow, calls it "unequalled in its artistic appeal." Rosa Raisa, the great soprano, proclaims it "absolutely the most perfect piano"; and similar opinions are expressed by hundreds of other musicians.

We invite you to play and hear this remarkable piano.

COMB SAGE TEA INTO GRAY HAIR

Darkens Beautifully and Restores Its Natural Color and Lustre At Once

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur receipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use preparation improved by the addition of other ingredients, a large bottle, at little cost at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," thus avoiding a lot of muss.

While gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared. After another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant and you appear years younger.

Better Than Calomel

Thousands Have Discovered Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets Are a Harmless Substitute.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the substitute for calomel—are a mild but sure laxative, and their effect on the liver is almost instantaneous. These little olive-colored tablets are the result of Dr. Edwards' determination not to treat liver and bowel complaints with calomel.

The pleasant little tablets do the good that calomel does, but have no bad after effects. They don't injure the teeth like strong liquids or calomel. They take hold of the trouble and quickly correct it. Why cure the liver at the expense of the teeth? Calomel sometimes plays havoc with the gums. So do strong liquids. It is best not to take calomel. Let Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets take its place.

Headaches, "dullness" and that lazy feeling come from constipation and a disordered liver. Take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets when you feel "logy" and "heavy." They "clear" clouded brain and "perk up" the spirits. 15c and 30c.

PRIMA DONNA WHO WILL GIVE RECITAL AT ODEON

GERALDINE FARRAR

Farrar, Ukrainian Chorus, Sykora and Martin

THE musical season briskly accelerates its tempo this week. In addition to the usual trio of symphony concerts, there will be three offerings of prime interest—Mme. Geraldine Farrar's recital tomorrow night, the visit of the Ukrainian National Chorus on Tuesday night, and a joint recital of Bogumil Sykora, violoncellist, and Riccardo Martin, tenor, on Thursday night. All of these concerts will be given at the Odeon.

Mme. Farrar, who retired from the Metropolitan in the spring of 1921, after reigning there 16 years as leading prima donna, is said to have improved greatly in voice since she was last heard here. Her program is unusual in that it consists entirely of songs, without an operatic aria. The list is as follows: "Alexander's Feast," Handel; "Lassie With Rosy Cheeks," Franz; "The Chestnut Three" and "Spring Night," Schumann; "Oh, Shady Wood" and "My Love Is Fair," Brahms; "Madrigal," Chaminade; "Chanson," Massenet; "Si mes vers," Hahn; "Aime moi," Bemberg; "Idyl," Rubinstein; "Wounded Birch," Gretchaninoff;

"Here Beauty Dwells" and "The Tryst," Rachmaninoff, and "A Dream," Greig.

The diva will be assisted by Joseph Malkin, violoncellist; Henry Weldon, basso, and Claude Gotthelf, pianist. Malkin's principal number will be the first movement of Golterman's concerto in A Minor, and Weldon, among other pieces, will sing an aria from "Robert le Diable."

Ukrainian National Chorus.

BY all acounts, an evening of amazing and beautiful singing may be expected from the Ukrainian National Chorus of about 50 natives of Little Russia, in national costume, who will appear under the direction of Alexander Koshetz. The program is made up of canticles and folksongs, with solo arias from several unfamiliar Russian operas given by Mlle. Oda Slobodskaja, formerly leading dramatic soprano at the Imperial Opera of Petrograd.

Rarely has an organization won such fervent praise as was accorded the Ukrainian Chorus on the occasion of its recent performance in New York. The body was lauded as a marvel of technical skill, a human pipe organ, perfect in attack, superb in shading. The program, also, was described as being entirely novel. Most of the numbers were arranged by Director Koshetz.

The list follows: "Our Lady of Potchaiv," a canticle; "There Was a Widow," and "Behind the Mountain," Christmas songs; "You Little Gray Cuckoo," a folksong; "Shtchedryk," a serenade sung by choirs of children beneath the windows on New Year's eve; "Poor Hawthorne," "I Wish to Go to the Meadow," "Lullaby," "The Young Monk," "Hey! I Am a Cossack from Ukrainia," "The High Mountain," "A Violin Is Playing in the Street," "I Sat Spinning, Spinning," "Koza" and "Mushrooms." The entire program will be sung in the Russian language.

Mlle. Slobodskaja's numbers include several songs, and arias from Tschaikowsky's "Tcharodeika" and "Pique Dame," Glinka's "Russian and Ludmilla" and Moussorgsky's "The Fair of Sorotchinsk."

A BRILLIANT 'CELLIST.

THURSDAY night's concert, under the auspices of the Woman's Guild of St. George's Church, will mark the first St. Louis appearance of Bogumil Sykora, Russian violoncellist, who is regarded as one of the world's most brilliant performers on that instrument. Riccardo Martin, who appears with him, is the distinguished American tenor and member of the Chicago Opera Association. He will sing Don Jose to Mary Garden's Carmen Tuesday night in Chicago.

The Pageant Choral Society has decided to undertake a concert performance of Wagner's "Tannhauser" at its first concert, on the evening of Jan. 11, at the Odeon. The organization comprises about 200 mixed voices, under the direction of Frederick Fischer. The society has been reorganized during the week, and Miss Elizabeth Cueny has been engaged as manager and executive secretary. George L. Dyer becomes chairman of the finance committee.

Of interest to St. Louisans is the announcement that the new City Symphony Orchestra of New York will give its first concert next Saturday evening at Carnegie Hall. Dirk Foch, one of the candidates for the directorship of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra last year, is conductor, and the manager is Arthur J. Gaines, former manager of the local orchestra. The City Orchestra, which is backed by the Du Ponts, announces a series of 24 regular and 13 Sunday popular concerts. Among the soloists engaged are Elena Gerhardt, Sophie Braslau, Rudolph Ganz, Emilio de Gogorza, Marguerite Namara, Milhaud, Morini, Huberman and Bender.

THE Ladies' Friday Musical Club will continue its policy of giving free tickets for the symphony concerts to deserving students. Application must be made in person this morning or afternoon to Mrs. David Kriegshaber, 4939 Washington boulevard.

The first appearance in this city of Miss Edythe Marmion Brosius, harpist, will occur on the evening of Nov. 27 at the St. Louis University auditorium, in a recital under the auspices of the Women's Committee of the University Endowment Fund. She will be assisted by the students' orchestra and glee club.

The Mel-Harmonic Club, which will meet next Saturday afternoon at Baldwin's Hall, will hear a talk on French music by Harry C. Krone and musical numbers by Mrs. Fern Sutton, Miss E. A. Medell, John Lippert Jr., Raymond Falzone, Mrs. Earl F. Wheat, Francis Falzone and Mrs. Frederick Nussbaum.

The Morning Etude Club will give its first "guests' day" program Wednesday afternoon at Vandervoort's Music Hall. Among those taking part will be Miss Eva Murphy, Miss Minna Braun, Mrs. Charles Ford, Mrs. Frederick Niemueller Jr., Miss Adelaide Blase, Mrs. Julius S. Feydt, Mrs. Harry S. Hart, Mrs. Lillian Craig Coffman, Mrs. Victor Stempf, Miss Helen Henninghaus, Mrs. Mable Pierce Meisenbach, Mrs. Anna Craig Bates and Mrs. Jacques Londres.

Annual Needlework Exhibition.

The St. Louis branch of the Needlework Guild will make its annual collection of garments Nov. 20 at the Church of the Messiah, Enright avenue and Union boulevard. The garments will be placed on exhibition Nov. 21. Anyone desiring to become a member of the organization may do so by contributing two or more new garments or by making a cash contribution.

The Value of a Rheostat.

The majority of receiving tubes require a potential of five to six volts. A smooth-working rheostat is of great value in doing fine tuning, inasmuch as some tubes need very close filament adjustment before they work at their maximum advantage.

DR. COFFEE SAYS:

If You Suffer With Catarrh, Partial Deafness or Head Noises Like These You May Be Relieved.

Wednesday, Thursday

Dr. W. O. Coffee, one of the best known specialists in the Central West, has published a new booklet on deafness, head noises, catarrh of the nose, head and throat. It tells of his non-surgical method of treating these diseases, tells the kind of cases that are curable and incurable. If you suffer he wants you to have one of these, because he has treated over 20,000 people the most marvelous results in many long standing cases. J. C. Batterson, Elmer, Mo., [illegible] years [illegible] severely with catarrh, deafness and terrible head noises, completely cured. Mrs. Minnie Scherer, 3516 [illegible] St., St. Louis, growing deaf 25 years, suffered with catarrh and terrible head noises, hadn't heard a 'phone in 17 years. Can now hear it easily with each ear. J. P. Meyers of East St. Louis, Ill., suffered with catarrh, deafness and head noises coming on 20 years, completely relieved. Dr. Coffee says every case of catarrh can be relieved, that it affects the stomach and the system, may cause neuralgia, rheumatism, other diseases, and that deafness and head noises caused from catarrh may be benefited or relieved. He will examine you without charge, tell you whether or not you can be relieved and all about his new method, had 30 years' experience, is absolutely reliable. He is in his St. Louis office, room 409 Odd Fellows Bldg., 926 Olive St. every Wednesday and Thursday. Hours from 9:30 to 4:30, no other. He makes a 50% discount on all glasses fitted and all operations now. If you suffer with catarrh, deafness, head noises, eye diseases or cross-eyes and cannot consult him personally, write for his special pamphlet, he will send it free, but don't submit to a surgical operation until you get his opinion. He will tell you the truth.

Syrup Pepsin Loved By Hosts of Babies

Half a teaspoonful will make a fretful youngster happy and playful

ANY FAMILY MAY TRY IT FREE

Thousands of parents are asking themselves, "Where can I find a trustworthy laxative that anyone in the family can use when constipated?" I urge you to try Syrup Pepsin. I will gladly provide a liberal free sample bottle, sufficient for an adequate test. Write me where to send it. Address Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 515 Washington St., Monticello, Illinois. Do it now!

THE mother has her choice of many remedies for her baby's minor ills, but she should be careful which remedy she selects lest she do the child harm. What might be safe for herself may do injury to an infant. You will find that if the little one cries and doesn't want to play that its bowels are constipated. First look carefully to the diet and give the child one-half teaspoonful of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. You will then see results in a few hours. You will not have to force it on babies or children: they actually ask for it, it is so pleasant-tasting and free from griping.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a compound of Egyptian senna and pepsin with agreeable aromatics. The ingredients are stated on the package. It is a mild, gentle vegetable laxative that everyone finds effective and pleasant. It is better for you and yours than purgatives, coal-tar drugs, or salt waters and powders, which may concentrate the blood and dry up the skin; or mercurial calomel, which may salivate and loosen the teeth.

Use a safe laxative like Syrup Pepsin, and especially for the children, for invalids, growing girls, nursing mothers, elderly people, and persons recently operated upon who need bowel action with the least strain. Mrs. Lillian Brenington of Woodruff, S. C., always gives her children Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and Mrs. A. E. Blondin of Muskegon, Mich., will not have any other laxative in her home. Your druggist will supply you, and it only costs a cent a dose. Try it in constipation, colic, biliousness, flatulency, headaches, and to break up fevers and colds.

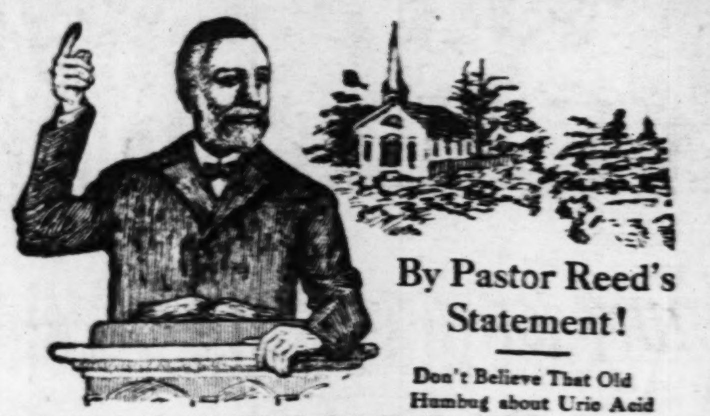
Thousands Convinced



By Pastor Reed's Statement!

Don't Believe That Old Humbug about Uric Acid Causing Rheumatism for—It Is Not So! You Can End Your Rheumatism Like I Did Mine—Wife also Rid of Neuritis

Emphatically asserting that thousands of unfortunate sufferers have been led into taking wrong treatments under the old and false belief that "Uric Acid" causes rheumatism, Pastor H. W. Reed says:

"As do some of our highest medical authorities, I now know that 'Uric Acid' never did and never will cause rheumatism! But it took me many years to find out this truth. I discovered how to get rid of my rheumatism and recover my health and strength, through reading 'The Inner Mysteries of Rheumatism,' a work written by an authority who has scientifically studied the cause and treatment of rheumatism for over twenty years. It was indeed a veritable revelation!

"I had suffered agony for years from rheumatism and associated disorders, and Mrs. Reed was tortured with the demon neuritis almost beyond endurance. We had read and talked so much about 'Uric Acid' that our minds seemed poisoned. But the 'Inner Mysteries of Rheumatism' made it all clear to us and now we are both free from the suffering and misery we endured so many years. I believe I was the hardest man in the world to convert! For me to discard the old 'Uric Acid' theory, and what I now know to be absolutely false, for the new, scientific understanding of the true causes and cure of rheumatism, was like asking me to change my religious beliefs! But I did change, and it was a fortunate day for me and mine when I did so."

NOTE: "The Inner Mysteries of Rheumatism" referred to above by Pastor Reed lays bare facts about rheumatism and its associated disorders apparently overlooked by doctors and scientists for centuries past. It is a work that should be in the hands of every man or woman who has the slightest symptoms of rheumatism, neuritis, sciatica, lumbago or gout. Anyone who sends name and address to H. P. Clearwater, 20-M Masonic Building, Hallowell, Maine, U. S. A., will receive it by mail, sealed in plain wrapper, postage paid, and absolutely free. Better send now, lest you forget the address! If not a sufferer yourself, cut out this explanation and hand it to some afflicted friend.

How I Provide Against Coughs and Colds

BY A MOTHER

"Last winter I resolved to provide in advance for the season's colds and coughs—and I did it. I spent less money and I had no doctor bills. I suffered no dread, no anxiety; I had no sleepless, worried vigils—watching my children through the dangerous periods of a bad cold. I want other mothers to know how I did it—my gratitude will then be theirs.

"I bought of my druggist a bottle of Essence Mentho-Laxene and mixed it into a pint with home-made sugar syrup. It's no trouble—three minutes, a little sugar and hot water, that's all. Just follow plain easy directions. The very first dose brings relief and I have not had a serious cold or cough in my family since I adopted this pure good medicine. It contains no chloroform, or narcotics whatever. It's delicious and children don't fight it. I give it to my baby, my two older children and both my husband and self have found it supremely good in every way. It destroys the cold, stops the cough, corrects catarrhal trouble and prevents the dangerous after effects of a cold, because it is antiseptic, mildly laxative and tonic to the system.

"The manufacturers guarantee every bottle satisfactory or money back."

Essence Mentho-Laxene sold by leading druggists, price 75c, or direct by mail. "Best ever sold for cough and cold."

tical way, is permitted to look into the future. Different paths of adventure, romance and intrigue are laid out before him. His choice and the way he literally fights out his own destiny make the story. A new comedy based on the radio craze will also be featured, and Bobbie Tremaine, a stage dancer, will appear in a dance number entitled "The Isle of Golden Dreams."

Tom Mix, in "Arabia," is the leading attraction at the Liberty. This is said to be a swift-moving farcical drama in which the star has able assistance from his famous horse, "Tony." It is all about a young Arabian Prince who is being educated in America. A thwarted elopement causes the Prince to go West, where he finds a rancher willing to impersonate him and go to Arabia in his stead. Mix plays both parts. Much of the action is supposed to take place in Arabia and the daredevil actor is said to do many thrilling stunts.

The Delmonte this week is presenting a triple bill as a benefit for Father Cesar Spigardi's Italian Parochial School. The film feature is a photoplay version of that successful stage drama, "The Rosary." Lewis Stone, Jane Novak and Wallace Beery have the leading roles. A second feature is the showing of moving pictures of the coronation of Pope Pius XI, and a third is the singing of solo and choral numbers by members of the St. Louis Italian Grand Opera Company.

CHURCH HAS UNIQUE FLOOR

Fragments of Cathedrals Ruined in War Imbedded In It.

By the Associated Press.

EVANSTON, Ill., Nov. 11.—Fragments from cathedrals ruined in the World War and a stone chipped from Mars Hall, where Paul preached to the Athenians, are imbedded in the new floor of St. Luke's Protestant Episcopal Church here. The floor, given by the Woman's Guild, was designed to harmonize with the idea of a "fourteenth century church which enshrines a twentieth century message and method."

The fragments of cathedrals were gathered by the rector, Rev. George Craig Stewart, D. D., while he was a chaplain overseas, in one instance while he was under fire. The people of St. Luke's believe that the floor is distinctly original in design, although the use of tile was suggested by King's Chapel, Boston.

WOMEN APT IN PUBLIC SPEAKING

Learn More Easily Than Do Men, British Woman Elocutionist Says.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

LONDON, Oct. 25.—Many women, vitally interested in politics, are taking lessons in public speaking in order to be ready to participate in the coming general election.

A well-known woman elocutionist, who has been teaching members of Parliament and other prominent men how to speak for 20 years, says that women learn to speak more easily than do men, and that the average ability to speak among the women coming to her is remarkably good. While this professor has to cure diffidence in men, she says she has to counteract excessive boldness in many of her women students.

Healing Power for Rheumatism

Mark H. Jackson, a business man at [illegible]-217 James St., Syracuse, N. Y., for a number of years, was a terrible sufferer from the pains, aches and soreness of rheumatism, some of his joints were swollen to twice the natural size, and like many others he tried almost everything without results, but finally found a simple home treatment that cured him entirely, and it has never returned.

He has since given it to many others just as badly afflicted, some of them up to eighty years of age, and it produced the same results for them. So sure is he of its healing power for all others so afflicted that he leaves it entirely to them to say whether they wish to pay. No charge is made. Could anything be more fair?

Wilde's "Burmese Masque" Now Recovered

LONDON, Nov. 11.

THERE has just come into print the lately discovered "Burmese Masque," written and seemingly forgotten by Oscar Wilde. It makes a slender volume of only 40-odd pages, although there are three acts. The greater part is wordless; there are only such threads of speech here and there as are needed to explain the action. The little fragment was written in or before 1894, not for publication of public performance, but in compliment to an English lady, Mrs. Chan Toom, wife of a Burmese barrister. She had been a friend of Wilde and his brother Willie from their childhood.

The persons are a Burmese King, his Prime Minister and courtiers, a Chinese wizard and a beautiful girl, half Italian and half Burmese. The setting is the thing rather than the play, though the latter is a slender and delicate little romance of the fantastic sort. The King spends the two years before his marriage to the Princess of Ceylon in a dream of love with the Burmese Italian girl. The Queen dies, and he sends for the two sons of himself and his former sweetheart. The latter persuades the wizard to give her the form of a peacock, so that she can follow and watch over the King and their sons until she can save him, when he is mortally stricken, by giving her life for his.

Wilde wrote in a letter that he would like to see the "Burmese Masque" performed, but this was the expression no doubt of nothing more than a momentary fancy. The piece is written, obviously, for reading only; its values, even when spectacular, are such as the written word can evoke better than the inventions of the stage artist.

THE Hall of a Hundred Doors, the waiting elephants outside, the peacocks "promenading proudly in the blinding sunshine of the late afternoon," King Meng Beng on his cushion sewn with rubies—all these scenes of conventional Oriental magnificence have a charm upon the printed page which would vanish in the theater. It is better to dream of them than to see them.

Two plays of American authorship are leading the London theater in length of runs. "The Bat" recently achieved its 300th performance at the St. James's Theater, and "Decameron Nights" has played more than 200 times at the Drury Lane Royal Theater. "Polly," the sequel to "The Beggar's Opera," is soon to be produced at one of the West End playhouses.

Marie Lohr's new play is a comedy by Alfred Sutro, entitled "The Laughing Lady." Austin Page, whose "By Pigeon Post" ran nearly 400 performances two years ago at the Garrick, has written an emotional drama in three acts, "The Beating on the Door," which begins with the fall of the Kerensky government in Russia and embodies a vivid picture of the bolshevist revolution. It is to be produced this month.

The first performance of Shelley's drama, "The Cenci," in 36 years is scheduled for next Monday afternoon at the New Theater, with Miss Sybil Thorndike in the role of Beatrice. In 1886 the tragedy was given at the Grand Theater in Islington, by the Shelley Society. A guinea was charged for admission, a sum automatically making the subscriber a member of the society. The measure was adopted in order to avoid any interference from the Licenser of Plays. The present Lord Chamberlain has offered no opposition.

FAMOUS OLD PRESCRIPTION FOR RHEUMATISM

From coast to coast the fame of a wonderful treatment for rheumatism has spread until it is now estimated that the 50,000 drug stores in the United States each fill this prescription an average of eleven times in a year, making a grand total of 550,000 bottles of medicine consumed by those who suffer from rheumatism.

This indicates efficacy in no uncertain manner, for it is a truism that merit is its own best salesman. Even the medical fraternity, always skeptical, now admit the most proficient utilize this splendid formula in their daily practice, as most any well-stocked druggist can supply the ingredients, which long ago became staples of the drug trade.

The formula, as quoted by a licensed physician, is as follows:

Iodide Potash	2 drs.
Soda Salicylate	4 drs.
Wine Colchicum	4 drs.
Comp. Ess. Cardiol	1 oz.
Comp. Fl. Balmwort	1 oz.
Elix. Lactated Pepsin, ad. q. s.	8 oz.

Mix. Take 1 teaspoonful after each meal and when retiring.

This is a constitutional blood treatment, consequently must be taken over a considerable period of time.

NOTE: To subdue the acute pains of rheumatism, it is suggested the patient procure 5-grain Su-thol tablets and take as directed on carton. Immediate relief of pain should follow, and the liquid formula ultimately overcomes the dreadful affliction.

CHICAGO OPERA CO. WILL OPEN SEASON TONIGHT

New Civic Organization Is Backed by 2200 Guarantors for Next Five Years.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Nov. 11. — Chicago's Civic Opera Co., backed by 2200 guarantors who have pledged financial aid for the next five years, will make its bow tomorrow night, opening the regular 10 weeks' season.

Rosa Raisa will sing Aida, supported by Guilio Crimi, Ina Bourskaya, Cesare Formichi, Vigilio Lazzari and Edouard Cotreuil, with Mestro Giorgio Polacco at the conductor's desk.

The new company succeeds the old Chicago Grand Opera Association, which was principally supported by Harold F. McCormick and Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick.

Mary Garden, general director last year, will appear Tuesday night in Carmen, supported by Georges Baklanoff, Mary McCormick, the Oklahoma cow-girl who was made a star last year by Miss Garden, Edouard Cotreuil, Desire Defrere, Octave Dua and Irene Pavloska.

The season's repertoire, as planned includes 18 operas sung in Italian, [illegible] in English, six in French and [illegible] in German.

Among the Chicago debuts will be Rimsky-Korsakov's "Snegourotchka" (The Snow Maiden); Halevy's "La Juive" (the Jewess); and Verdi's "La Forza del Destino" (The Force of Destiny).

Revivals which have not been heard here for several seasons will include Victor Herbert's "Natoma" (in English); Wagner's "Parsifal" and "The Valkyrie"; Humperdinck's "Koenigskinder" and "Haensel and Gretel," Von Flotow's "Martha" and Giordano's "Andrea Chenier."

The artists for the season include most of the old favorites of the former Chicago company, and a large list of newcomers, including Feodor Chaliapin, the famous Russian basso, and Grace Holst, a Danish soprano who has never been heard in this country. Besides Miss Garden and Raisa, the mezzo-soprano and contralto list includes Edith Mason, Cyrena Van Gordon, Maria Claessens and several others who have sung here in the past. Tito Schipa, Forrest Lamont and Octave Dua again head the list of tenors, while the baritones include, besides Baklanoff, Joseph Schwarz, Giacoma Rimini, Defrere, Formichi and Milo Luka, a newcomer, Chaliapin, Lazzari and Cotreuil will be the principal basses.

Mestro Polacco will be assisted by Pietro Cimini, one of last year's conductors, and Richard Hageman, a new addition.

ERIC GEDDES SOUNDS WARNING FOR ENGLAND ON REPARATIONS

Declares Money Is Not to Be Had and Taking of Goods Would Cause Unemployment.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

LONDON, Oct. 25.—Sir Eric Geddes did some very plain talking about German reparations as the guest of the Thirty Club of London recently. This club is an association of advertising men. When in Parliament Sir Eric was noted for his straight-forward style of speech, and since he became a business man again he is more outspoken than ever.

"In 1918 I was a politician," he said, "and I said then that we should not make a fetish of reparations; that we might find reparations a boomerang, and that the demanding of great sums from Germany might be bad. I nearly lost my seat over that statement, and I had to hedge a bit."

He was under no necessity of doing any hedging before the Thirty Club, he continued. "What I said in 1918 has come absolutely true now," he declared. "We were absolutely wrong, as allies, in trying to get the last penny out of Germany. We cannot get it because it is not there.

"It is no use chasing a mirage. You can only get reparations out of Germany by either money or goods. She has no money, and if you take her goods it will mean unemploment here. If the leaders of thought could bring that home to our people, it would be a good thing for this country."

LINKING OF TRAFFIC CHANNELS

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Nov. 11.—The question of union and co-ordination of the nation's transportation facilities—railways, waterways and highways—will be an important part of the program of the fifteenth annual convention of the Southern Commercial Congress, to be held here Nov. 20 to 22. This convention will be the second held north of the Mason and Dixon line since the formation of the association before the Civil War. The annual meeting in 1914 was held in New York.

The congress has taken a strong position in favor of linking the hard-surfaced highways of the country with the navigable streams, waterfronts and railway systems of the continent. Still further action in this work is expected to be taken at this meeting.

Are We All Alike?

Success in life does not consist in not making mistakes, but in not making the same one twice.

Experience is a universal university which we all involuntarily attend, but which has no graduates. Experience, thou art a masterly teacher; we are but unappreciative scholars.

For ages past have thy teachings been bequeathed to the generations that were to come; many have been, are and ever will be the regrets at not having hearkened to thy admonitions. Poor, weak humans that we are, we continue in our headstrong way, heeding not thy wisdom which can be naught but advantageous to us.

How manifold are our opportunities for improvement.

Old Axiom That Juries Will Not Convict Women of Murder Being Exploded

REVIEW OF NOTED RECENT CASES SHOWS MORE ARE BEING SENTENCED THAN ACQUITTED

Killings in Which a Man Was the Motive Have Been Common To All Sections of the Country

Presence of Women on Juries Possible Factor in Sterner Attitude Being Taken Toward Fair Defendants.

Women on trial for murder are losing their prestige with juries and the old axiom of the criminal law office that juries will not convict such defendants is being exploded. Recently the attitude of jurors toward women slayers has undergone a material change, a tendency to be less lenient being pronounced. Even in those cases where acquittals have been made it has not been with the spontaneity of yore, for hours have been required before the twelve peers could marshal their judgment into common accord.

The psychology of this change in attitude may be attributed to general causes. Perhaps the strongest is eligibility of women themselves to sit on juries. Lawyers who specialize in practice in the criminal courts have remarked that women jurors are less susceptible to the appeal of one of their own sex in the prisoner's dock, especially if the prisoner's own misconduct has been responsible for her condition that they pierce the screen of femininity, clearly comprehending and co-ordinating motives in a passionless way the same as men jurors view and analyze one of their sex in similar circumstances. Also that in turn this new influence in the jury has had its effect on the men members, letting down the feelings of chivalry that restrained them before and admitting a platonic administration of their duties.

Lawyers Hit Hard, Too.

Whereas in the olden days of one-sex juries a clever and eloquent lawyer could appeal to 12 husbands for the life of a woman on trial, laying stress on the homely fact that each one of them had had a mother, possibly sisters and daughters, emphasizing the motives he had advanced as justifiable for a woman to take life and leaving planted the subtle thought that if his client were convicted each juror would walk forth forever afterward marked among his fellows as one who had voted away the life of a woman and thereby be scorned, such an appeal is of little worth today. For, sitting in the jury box may be a woman who sees farther into the woman heart than even the most astute of criminal defense minds may penetrate, and is able to segregate the chaff of rhetoric from the grains of fact.

Three recent cases of the conviction of women murder defendants stand out boldly in exemplification of this new attitude of juries.

Mrs. Mable Champion, 22 years old, physically equipped to make a potent appeal to a jury of men, handsomely gowned and modishly hatted, was found guilty at Cleveland last week in connection with the slaying of Thomas Connell, Yale man. Her taciturnity under the pressure of police grilling earned her the sobriquet of "The Sphinx." Only when she was on the witness stand did she give her version of the slaying in the downtown restaurant. After 28 hours of deliberation a jury of seven women and five men convicted her and she was sentenced to 20 years in reformatory.

Mrs. Ivy Gibson, steel-nerved and source of amazement to criminal lawyers and court attaches with her stoicism and ariddle-like personality, was sentenced to life imprisonment in connection with the slaying of her husband.

Pearl Beaver Odell was sentenced to 20 years' imprisonment in connection with the slaying of a former sweetheart, her husband having been electrocuted in connection with the same crime.

Last week Mrs. Meda Hodell, 20-year-old swamp country girl, was convicted in Michigan of first degree murder in connection with the slaying of her father-in-law.

Mrs. Madalynne Obenchain, defendant in one of the most sensational and picturesque murder mysteries of the higher stratas of social life, is in a Los Angeles jail awaiting a third trial in connection with the slaying of J. Belton Kennedy, a broker. Two mixed juries have heard her case and each has disagreed despite efforts of her attorneys to stampede them into a sympathy verdict.

"Peggy" Marie Beal, slayer of Frank Warren Anderson, who styled herself "the avenger of 50 women" whose hearts she says Anderson admitted having broken, was acquitted of the charge of murder at Kansas City last week.

So was Mrs. Catherine Rosier of Philadelphia, freed of a charge of killing her husband and his stenographer.

But each of these women had a moving story to tell of shocking mistreatment, one by a faithless lover, the other by a faithless husband. When they had testified, there was no chance for any other verdict. But these cases simply emphasize the fact that juries are discriminating, that, in this day of equal rights for the sexes, they are dealing equal justice, that the woman who can show a grievance that society recognizes, though statute law may not, will get the same justice a man would under similar circumstances but that a grievance cannot be established for a woman just because she is a woman when it would not be recognized for a male defendant.

Mrs. Champion made it a point to appear stylishly gowned at her trial every day, changing costumes often, which may not have helped her with some of the women jurors.

Motives in the feminine mind for slaying appear to be varied, with that of killing over a man in the ascendancy.

The Michigan swamp country wife, Mrs. Meda Hodell, 20 years old, who was convicted of killing her father-in-law, is alleged to have given as her motive the fact that he was an invalid and that "he was better off dead, as he was old and required a great deal of attention." Mrs. Hodell, the testimony showed, put arsenic in his coffee Feb. 4 and he died a few minutes thereafter. She is charged also with the murder of her husband, Romie D. Hodell, on May 6. She is said to have used a rolling pin while he slept, and later, with the aid of her mother, brothers and a farm hand, hanged the body in a barn, causing the authorities to be told her husband had taken his own life. The jury in her case deliberated only two hours.

Mrs. Mabel Champion, young and attractive, from the moment after Thomas A. O'Connell, Yale man and carnival promoter of New Haven, Conn., fell dying from three bullets, fired into his body in a Cleveland restaurant four months ago, maintained a taciturnity so baffling to the authorities that she was dubbed "The Sphinx." No trick or artifice to pierce her shell of cool reticence was successful.

Handsomely gowned and with an air of assurance, she went to her trial Oct. 22 on a charge of first degree murder. There was never a moment of wavering. Hammer as the State's Attorney would, she met his every assault with supreme confidence, apparently turning aside each thrust with ease and resetting herself coolly for the next. Day after day this play between the the crowded room. Only this persistent stalking of the woman-defendant by the criminal hunter remained. Even the murder itself faded in importance, the trial became insignificant except as the setting for this mental chase.

"Sphinx's" Transformation.

And then, Nov. 2, seven women and five men returned a verdict of guilty.

Slowly "The Sphinx" arose from her chair. Half crouching and half leaning across the counsel table, she gazed stupidly at the jury. Her lips parted, her chin sagged and her eyes then turned toward Prosecutor James T. Cassidy and clung there.

Cassidy sat on the edge of his chair, shoulders hunched, arrested in his movement to arise and address the Court.

The more than 200 spectators in the courtroom seemed to be transfixed in the tense positions they had assumed, the better to hear the jury foreman's word. The Court, his hand stayed in its toying with his gavel, gazed interestedly at "The Sphinx."

So the tableau hung for a moment. Then Mabel Champion collapsed. Fierce sobs and convulsions shook her form and she buried her head in her arms. The fine composure, the sure defiance, the stilted confidence that had carried her through the rigors of arrest, questioning and trial were broken. All the pent-up emotions she had so successfully controlled and concealed for weeks welled up in her and she gave way to muffled sobs and a rain of tears.

Sentenced to 20 Years.

Each of the women jurors was weeping. The men members had turned their eyes. From here and there over the crowded chamber there were half-smothered sobs. The tension at last was broken.

Judge Maurice Bernon imposed the maximum sentence of 20 years in Maryville reformatory. The motion for a new trial was denied. The jury was out 28 hours.

The history of the case against "The Sphinx," who was known by a variety of names, among them being Teddy O'Brien, Inez Parker and Mabel Barnett and who was the wife of Clifford Barnett, alias Champion, who gave the address, 28 East Sandusky street, Kansas City, is best reviewed in the following summing-up by County Prosecutor Cassidy:

"Let's go up to Downing's restaurant at 1708 Euclid avenue on the night of July 26 and visualize it. A car drives up containing a man and a woman—Mr. and Mrs. Champion. A bottle of whisky is in the car. Somebody told a crowd of youths in front of the restaurant that the whisky was there. No one knew of it except Mabel Champion and her husband. They must have told them.

"Another young man was there—O'Connell, so drunk he had had to be assisted from a taxicab. He also wanted a drink and asked for it. He and Champion quarreled. Right then, Champion threatened him, and O'Connell dared Champion to shoot. Mabel Champion knew of this and knew the revolver was in the car.

"Step Back, Daddy."

"They went inside and sat down. O'Connell came and sat down next to them. Testimony shows O'Connell and Champion shook hands.

"Later there was a quarrel. The two men fell on the floor in a struggle. They were picked up and placed on their feet. Then the quarrel began again. O'Connell threw a salt cellar at Champion, and Champion struck him.

"Then Mabel, with cool decision, walked to the wall, took her husband's coat and laid it on her arm, and then, revolver in hand, started to where the men were scuffling. She said, 'Step back, daddy, and I'll riddle the —— with bullets.'

"One bullet, fired from her gun, entered his body without touching the shirt, for the shirt was open. Mabel shot as he raised his arms. He fell on the floor in his own blood. There, when he was in agony, with no chances to rise, Mabel watched her husband smash O'Connell over the head with a chair.

"Curtis, a witness, saw her, and Conklin saw her, fire three shots at O'Connell. No witness, except the defendant herself, said anything about O'Connell having his hand on the weapon.

"I believe O'Connell did go toward her, as she says—but he fell forward, as is natural when a man is shot and mortally wounded. As he fell forward she shot him under the pit of the arm."

Case of Mrs. Giberson.

Another example of stoic endurance and resistance to all tricks of police or lawyers to break down her composure before and during the trial for her life, was that of Mrs. Ivy Giberson of Lakehurst, N. J., who went on trial Oct. 11 charged with having murdered her husband, William F. Giberson, at Toms River. This also is a case in which the jury struck at the old belief that a woman is immune from conviction, for after four hours' deliberation it returned a verdict of "Guilty of murder in the first degree," which had been found on circumstantial evidence. The wiseacres had predicted that never could a woman be convicted of murder on circumstantial evidence.

MRS. PEARL ODELL.

Mrs. Giberson is not only the first woman convicted of murder in Ocean County, N. J., but she is the first woman tried on that charge there.

The skeleton of the mystery as pieced together by the State's lawyers showed an intrigue with a former roomer, which it was alleged furnished the motive. At any rate, Giberson was found dead in bed and the wife, with hands and feet tied and a napkin around the lower part of her face, was found at the foot of the front stairs of their home by railroad men who had responded to cries coming from the house. Her explanation of the situation was that she had heard noises in the kitchen, had arisen to investigate, had been seized, throttled and bound by two men who then had robbed her of $600.

She held to her story from beginning to end. She is described by some who know her as "bold" and "rough," but she carried herself throughout the trial with poise and dignity. On the stand she denied ever having written "damn" in a letter to a friend, but when the epistle was produced she cooly glanced at it and admitted it was in her writing.

Mrs. Giberson heard the verdict and sentence with a stony face.

Saved Life by Guilty Plea.

Without doubt the change in attitude of juries toward women murder defendants was recognized by the counsel for Mrs. Cora Lou Vinson, convicted and sentenced to death for the murder of her husband at Atlanta, Ga., last March when, last week, she snatched her life from the State by obtaining an immediate new trial, pleading guilty and receiving a term for life.

Mrs. Vinson shot her husband, Dr. W. D. Vinson, in his drug store, declaring afterward that he had threatened her with violence and had told her he was leaving her for a younger woman. State witnesses testified that Mrs. Vinson had been cruel to the doctor.

The fate of "Peggy" Beal at Kansas City, however, provides a striking contrast to the trend of fashion in murder cases, for she was acquitted speedily of a charge of murdering Frank Warren Anderson, member of a Philadelphia family and one-time floor walker in a St. Louis department store. Immediately on her release she announced herself as consecrated to saving girls and women "from the misery that comes with misplaced love."

Anderson, standing in the middle of a hotel room at Kansas City last June 3, according to the story Mrs. Beal told on the witness stand, laughed at her, telling her he would not marry her, and waved in her face a list of 50 names of girls and women whom, he said, he had snared in his love wiles. She declared that as she lay on the bed, realizing that her love affair was shattered she was filled with loathing and drew a revolver from underneath the pillow, firing the shot that killed Anderson.

Child Born in Prison.

A few months ago Gussie Humann surrendered her 2-weeks-old baby and was returned to Auburn (N. Y.) State Prison to complete her term for the slaying of her sweetheart, Harry Dewey Gurbey, Oct. 27, 1921. Her child was the first to be born under the new statute providing that babies born to convicts must be taken from the mother not later than two weeks after birth.

In this connection it is to be recalled that recently the 2-year-old daughter of Pearl Beaver Odell, serving 20 years for her part in the slaying of her former sweetheart, was taken from her in accordance with law, and was adopted by a Rochester family. Pearl and her husband, who was electrocuted in connection with the same slaying, were alleged to have manacled the victim to a sapling near Rochester, N. Y., and there, on a winter night, the woman is said to have beaten and lacerated the prisoner with a rasp.

Another woman to whom a child was born after her conviction is Mrs. Rolla de Hart, serving a sliding term of one to 10 years for abetting her husband in the slaying of John Mize, in Holt County, Neb. Mize's body was found in a slough and the crime traced to De Hart, who alleged it was Mize's conduct toward his wife that caused the tragedy. The woman sustained her husband, who, however, was held to have killed the man for robbery.

Another Woman Acquitted.

Only a few days ago Alice Thornton, George Cline and Charles Squillion were acquitted of having been implicated in the shooting to death of "Daredevil" Jack Bergen, movie actor, at Hackensack, N. J. The verdict in this case was delivered by a 23-year-old girl, the first time in the history of New Jersey murder trials that a verdict was handed up by a woman jury "foreman." The jury was composed of an equal number of men and women.

Mrs. Lillian S. Raizen, after having been declared sane last spring by a commission, is to stand trial in connection with the murder of Dr. Abraham Glickstein last December in his Brooklyn (N. Y.) office.

Mrs. Raizen was surrendered to the authorities shortly after the killing by lawyers acting for her husband and her father, a New York manufacturer. Well mannered, quiet and with every appearance of refinement, Mrs. Raizen quietly told the District Attorney that she killed Dr. Glickstein because he had ruined her life. Brooding over the wrong for eight years, the comely young wife of a prominent toy manufacturer traveled from Florida to Brooklyn to avenge the alleged wrong, the authorities say she admitted. She charged in her defense, the authorities say, that eight years ago when she went to Glickstein's office for treatment he forced himself on her and since she had been under his influence. Her husband, she said, forgave her when she revealed the alleged episode to him during their honeymoon.

Relations Continued.

According to the State's information, the alleged relations between Glickstein and Mrs. Raizen continued until about two years ago against her will when she believed she was free of his influence. But last May almost on the eve of her marriage to young Raizen, she said, the doctor again sought to force himself on her. She resisted and escaped. But the memory of this last outrage is said to have obsessed her and last December she sought out Glickstein and killed him.

The unusual in crime is elaborated on in the Vance murder mys-

IN spite of the inhospitality and unfriendliness of what has been popularly termed the Great White North, a region nearly every land of which is marked by a starvation trail and tragedy of both natives and whites, the Eskimo remains the same smiling, optimistic and hopeful individual as described by early explorers of two and three centuries ago.

Music hath charms the world over. Mary's two white fox pelts for an accordeon at the Hudson Bay Company's store. It was a hard bargain on the Company's part but Mary is delighted nevertheless. Eskimos readily learn to play on an accordeon any selection they hear on a Victrola.

This race, essentially maritime, and consisting of some 30,000 souls, inhabits the longest stretch of coast-line of any nation in the world. Its people differ considerably in their habits and customs, according to their geographical distribution and immediate environment; consequently generalized statements pertaining to them are altogether too frequent in writings of travelers of today.

The Eskimo has wandered over all lands from the northern coast of Siberia eastward to the eastern shores of Greenland, through 170 degrees of longitude, or nearly half around the world, their migration trail marked by tent rings, walrus and bear skulls, the bones of the caribou, musk-ox, seal and whale, and their winter rock igloos. Wherever our trail led throughout our 10,000 miles of sledge travel, far up on the northern shores of Greenland and Grant Land, throughout Ellesmere Land and islands westward, Baffin Land, Hudson Bay region and Labrador, there we found evidence of these interesting, black-haired, black-eyed children of nature.

Believe Stars Are Spirits of Their Beloved Dead

Slowly they are becoming civilized through contact with whalemen, traders, explorers and missionaries, and generally in the order in which I have mentioned them. The missionary is last and too late in many cases; he should have been first to strengthen the native in his fight against "civilized" man, who has torn down the walls of Northern churches, shattered the ideals of them who would believe, and brought shame to man who boasts of his superiority over the savage.

They have a religion, as every nation has under the sun, and which centers around death and the hope of immortality. The glittering stars in the heavens are the spirits of their own. The Northern Lights rolling, shooting and darting across the sky are their people at play. Today is but a step toward that great happiness beyond. The man's harpoon, his bow and arrow, his kayak, his sledge, and even a few of his best dogs, are placed beside the grave, all to go with him into the next world. The woman's drying rack her needle and thread, her lamp and cooking pots are broken or pierced to release their spirits, and placed beside her. She will need them all when she again takes up her duties in the next world. A man or woman who commits suicide will be forever happy, for such an act is self-sacrifice and only occurs when the aged are a burden or when the little ones are starving and need the food consumed by the old. A woman who dies in childbirth has the highest place of honor in the future world, for what is nobler than the bearing of children.

These are but a few of the concepts of their religion, of a life not ruled by one God but by many guardian spirits, both good and evil, which contend among themselves for supremacy. Living as they have lived through the thousands of years, yet how like ourselves in thought and deed! Living and thinking and reasoning with them we can but help questioning the progress of the human mind.

Seals' Eyes Eaten as Lollypops by Eskimo Youngsters

The Eskimo's staple food is seal meat, rich in blood, sweet, nutritious, and very palatable even to the daintiest of white men. There is no choice as to which way it should be cooked, for there is only one method of cooking in Eskimo land—toss it into a soapstone pot of boiling water, which is generally kept suspended by rawhide thongs over a seal oil lamp. Comparatively very little seal meat is eaten raw, and then only in a frozen state.

I noticed that it was the habit in Baffin Land that soon as father arrived dragging the still warm seal over the ice, the mother promptly slit it open in order that the children might partake of the raw liver, which they ate with every sign of extreme pleasure. The eyes were plucked out and given to the youngest child as the delicacy of the feast. To see a child with two eyes of its own and a third peering at you between parted lips is a bit weird to say the least. The eye is sucked for some time as an Eskimo lollypop before it is crunched and contents eaten.

The walrus is the prize catch of the Eskimo, its huge bulk of two and even three thousand pounds furnishing an abundance of food for men and the very best for the dogs. Its capture is attended with considerable danger, especially during the mating season and when the mothers are with young, when both male and female challenge man to bring his boat within reach of their strong ivory tusks. Some 50 walrus charged our 28-foot whaleboat in 1908, two succeeding in hooking their tusks over the rail and endeavoring to capsize the boats. Our automatic rifles possibly saved the day.

Some Eskimo Dainties That Civilized Folks Wouldn't Enjoy

Another advantage in the capture of the walrus is that his stomach is generally filled with freshly dug clams, all shelled and ready raw for the first course in the feast. The walrus is the unpaid clam digger of the Eskimo. This he does with his curved ivory tusks, rooting the clams out of the mud and sand by the bushel.

When killed feeding over a clam bottom, a favorite place for walrus hunting, as the animal rises to the surface ever nine minutes to breathe, it is towed to the shore by a number of kayaks. The mother of the family immediately cuts out the stomach, around which all the children of the village may gather, and slits it open for the entrance of the many hands and even arms—a dish greatly enjoyed by young and old.

The fat is packed away in walrus skin bags, to be burned later in soapstone lamps for heating and cooking in their snow houses. Most of the meat is cached for the dogs, the legs or flippers being saved frozen, and eaten raw during the winter months, when visitors are expected almost daily. The huge piece of frozen meat occupies the center of the igloo and the center of the circle as a buffet lunch, which is not from 1 to 2 p. m., but continuous throughout the 24 hours. Knives and a hatchet are thrown carelessly about and on the frozen mass. Help yourself any time.

Polar bear meat is tough and stringy and much more palatable raw and in a frozen state than when cooked. The liver, strange to relate, is poisonous and is never eaten by men or dogs. Whole ship's crews and men of various expeditions have been seriously ill, some even dying.

Caribou and musk oxen, both delicious; white whale, narwhale, ptarmigan, geese and eider ducks constiute the other foods of the Eskimo. When starving, several kinds of seaweeds are eaten, principally rock weed and kelp.

With no King or Queen or chief or real government, the family remains the unit in the North and absolutely independent of all other families. The father provides the food and skins for clothing and shelter, the mother prepares the food, feeds the children and looks after the household.

Matrimony does not require a marriage license, cards, orange blossoms and a clerbyman or Justice of the Peace to exact promises and bind the tie. A very simple ceremony—the bridegroom takes his chosen one and off the couple ride, either to live with her parents for a year or so or with his, depending upon the locality and also upon the number in each family. Marirages are generally prearranged by the parents at a very early age of the children. A boy of 8 pointed to a little girl riding in the mother's hood and informed me that she was to be his future wife. He had been informed of this by his mother. Such a union strengthens the bond of friendship between these two families. In the Far North girls are married at the age of 12 and 13. Since there are many more men than women, all young girls are married, some to men 40 and even 50 years old.

Women are the property of men and must obey implicitly as a dog must obey. Consequently when she is loaned to a friend for a week or month, or exchanged for a similar period and even a year, as often happens, she must submit cheerfully to the will of her husband.

All children, even of doubtful parentage, are loved and tenderly cared for. The child rules the home absolutely, is very rarely corrected and never denied anything which it may want. The mother patiently submits to all of this, knowing that it is but a short time, and willing to sacrifice all for her little one. Strange to relate, contrary to all our teaching and experience in civilized countries, the child at the age of 9 and 10 voluntarily ceases to take advantage of its powers over the household and tries in every way to please its parents.

The practice of submitting to the will of the child is undoubtedly due to the fact that within the body of the little one is the spirit of the parents' own father or mother; therefore, such should be treated with great respect. A child named for its grandfather is always addressed as "father" by its own father. By the child the father is called "son."

Some Take Second Wife to Keep First One Company

It is the custom among the Eskimo bordering the shores of Hudson Bay to take a second young wife some 10 years after the marriage of the first. This is generally done with the approval and even at the request of wife No. 1, her reason being that she needs help in cleaning the skins, sewing clothing and attending to the children. Such an arrangement seems to be a very happy one for all concerned.

Small families are the rule; owing to a high death rate among the newly born children, many being born dead and many dying within a few minutes after birth. That among such an extremely healthy people as the Smith Sound Eskimos there should be such a frightful infant mortality is hard to explain.

In former days an Eskimo was never permitted to die within the walls of his own tent or igloo. If such did happen unexpectedly, the tent was abandoned and slowly rotted and fell to the ground. The stone house, with its skeleton in the bed, stood for years and finally became the tomb of its lone occupant.

The character of the land, only the top soil of which thaws, prevents burial. The bodies, therefore, are wrapped and sewn in seal and caribou skins and placed on the hillside or hilltop above the village and covered with a mound of rocks closely packed as a protection against dogs, wolves and foxes. Small pieces of meat are placed in the grave from time to time to sustain the traveler on his journey into the next world.

In certain tribes it is the custom to place a dog's head in the grave with the child in order that the little one might have a companion and guardian in the next world while awaiting the arrival of its parents.

Keeping Warm at 60 Below Zero No Problem for Eskimos

Necessarily all Eskimos formerly were clothed in skins winter and summer, as are the Smith Sound Eskimos today. In their clothing lies the secret of their apparent hardihood in extreme temperatures of 60 and 70 degrees below zero. Peary was the first to recognize the true value of the native costume and to adopt it without change for his arduous work. Porous woolen clothing in lieu of impervious skins has been the cause of the death of many an Arctic man.

In Baffin Land and around the shores of Hudson Bay we find the Eskimos clothed as follows: A fawn skin undersuit, worn with hair in; carabou pants and coat, with the hair out; boots, sealskin or made from the forelegs of a carabou; stockings, sealskin or hare skin. Mittens, sealskin and young caribou.

In the Far North bird skins are used for underclothing and polar bear skin for pants. When thus clothed one may sleep in comfort in a snowbank at 50 and even 60 below zero. It will be remembered that Peary never used a sleeping bag, did he permit any of us to do so on the Polar dash in 1909. I must confess that this was missed a bit on the night that we experienced 74 below zero.

The arrival at the ship of our two Eskimo assistants and their families meant a new drain on our larder, for we must care for the lot of them. Nevertheless, we were glad to see them, and knew that our goods in payment would be profitably exchanged for warm skin-clothing beautifully sewn by the women and absolutely indispensable for winter travel. And the old couple, father and mother, bent with age and wrinkled with the effects of the bright summer suns and driving winter snows, were doubly welcome, for I knew that in them we had a store of treasure—the tales and traditions of their race, stories of the Tornait (spirits), of the Tunit (Norsemen) and of the terrible Adlet (Indians) who came from the interior and massacred women and children. And with equally as much pleasure I anticipated many an evening in the snug little after cabin of the Bowdoin beneath a roar of wind and drifting snow listening to the actual experiences of old Ook-took-he, his fights with walrus and polar bears, with drift-ice and winter storms—a life short in years, but in comparison with our prosaic home life, certainly a generation longer.

Snow Houses Wonderful Pieces of Architecture, Warm, Durable

Following a good hot supper in our forecastle they stood beside their dog team in doubt as to whether to accept of our hospitality and make up their skin beds in the hold of the ship or build a home of their own on the land. The very thing which would have influenced a man to accept our invitation was the deciding factor in turning these children of nature toward a snowbank. The thermometer was 10 below zero. They would be warmer in a snow house than in the hold of the Bowdoin! And off they went punctuating their orders to the dogs with revolver-like cracks of a 30-foot rawhide whip.

A half hour later I found the work well along and so beautifully done as to leave in my mind no doubt as to the superior excellence of their work over that of the Smith Sound Eskimo. To build a good snow house is a beautiful and interesting bit of work, for the Eskimo builds a 12 and even 18-foot arch with apparently no support, and yet so strong when once completed that the whole family can perch on the roof.

Their method of construction differed slightly from that of the Far North in that the individual blocks were larger and much heavier, the houses wider and flatter, and all building material cut from the inside, which enables one man to build his home and be independent of help; for all blocks are under his feet and need not be passed over the wall by his assistant. Snow houses consist of about 50 blocks roughly 3x2, are from 12 to 18 feet in diameter, and are constructed spirally from right to left or counter clockwise, each block so beveled on edge and bottom as to be supported by the last in place. This enables the builder to hold the blocks with the left hand and fit by cutting with the right. In the meantime his wife is chinking the joints on the outside with loose snow.

Windows of Clear Blocks of Ice Make Igloo Bright

Within two hours their winter homes were complete, both opening into a common porch and one snow entrance. The snow beds were raised two feet from the floor and covered with skins. The next day large windows, made of blocks of clear ice from the neighboring pond, were fitted into the sloping walls of the house. No one could believe that a home made of such material could be comfortable; but yet, when lined with seal skins or an old tent, seal-oil lamps lighted, pot boiling, and phonograph going, it's a palace—to an Eskimo, and a home to the white stranger from the South who has had a long march through rough ice against a cold biting wind.

It is also customary here to encircle the igloos with a five-foot wall of snow as a protection against the abrasive power of drifting snow as well as a non-conductor of cold, thus aiding the occupant to maintain an equable temperature within. A hole in the roof some four inches in diameter insures a plentiful supply of fresh air. One can easily believe, as we have learned, that prior to the advent of whites tuberculosis was unknown among these people.

Unlike the Eskimo of the far North who lives in a very comfortable dry rock house throughout the winter, these Baffin Land natives seem content with the snow igloo. Very old tumbled-down rock houses are found at every turn all up and down the coast, but have not been inhabited for 100 years or more.

Today the Eskimo of Southern Baffin Land is a servant to the Hudson Bay Co., subject to the strict orders of the chief factor and with no knowledge of where he shall be one year hence, consequently he is but a transient, and spends no time upon a more substantial home than a tent during the summer and a snow home during the winter.

How Capt. Grant Disappeared Forever in Ice With Ship

Once settled in their snow homes, they began their daily and nightly visits to the cabins of the Bowdoin, which were mutually enjoyed.

From them we learned the particulars of the loss of Capt. Grant, all of his crew and his ship, which has been more or less a mystery for the last 10 years. One of the Eskimos, who was with the white men at the time, told and retold the story until I was familiar with all the details.

Capt. Grant left his trading station on the eastern coast of Baffin Land with a large number of native assistants, including their wives and children, for the purpose of hunting both whales and walrus in the vicinity of Salisbury and Nottingham Islands. It has always been the custom among both Scotch and American whalemen to employ native help in the capture of these animals.

When near Nottingham Island a large herd of walrus was sighted. Capt. Grant himself was in the crow's nest and in charge of the ship. In his excitement in endeavoring to overtake the herd he ran the ship hard and fast upon a ledge distant a few hundred yards from the shore. A kedge anchor was run out immediately off the starboard quarter and both white men and Eskimos labored hard against a falling water to extricate the ship from her perilous position.

With a rapidly rising wind and sea, Capt. Grant must have realized that there was but little hope of saving the ship; consequently he ordered all Eskimos to man the boats and land their wives and children upon Nottingham Island together with half a ton of walrus meat. This done, they were to return to the ship with the boats. Because of the strong wind and sea which arose shortly after their landing, the Eskimos were unable to regain the ship.

Just before daylight, above the roar of the wind and sea, several shots were heard, the result, the Esikmos declare, of trouble which had been brewing among the men for some time, but which I believe to have been signals of distress and an appeal to the Eskimos to make another attempt with the boats, for undoubtedly the ship, weakened by continuous thumping upon the rocks, was slowly filling with the rising tide.

At daylight not a sign of the ship was seen. Some weeks later two frozen bodies were found, one at the high water and one among the rocks but a few yards from the beach, where the poor fellow had evidently crawled in a vain attempt to find shelter. Nothing more is known of the ship and her crew.

The Eskimos remained that winter upon the island, subsisting upon foxes and polar bears and now and then a seal. In the spring, in additional skin boats which they made, they retreated northward to the Mill Islands and thence through the running ice to Baffin Land, landing a short distance below Bowdoin Harbor.

Christmas in Santa Claus' Land Wonder Occasion for Eskimo Guests

Shorter and darker and colder grew the days. Standing on the deck of the Bowdoin on Dec. 22, the shortest day in the year, we could see the sun tangent to the crest of the hills bordering the southern shores of Bowdoin Harbor. The thermometer stood at 25 below zero. We raised the flag to celebrate the day, the most important in the Northland; for it marks the end of the southern journey of the sun, which from now on would mount higher each day, bringing back light and an abundance of life to a dead, white world.

No expedition ever had a better or happier Christmas, or more of an abundance of good things. Santa Claus lived so close to Bowdoin Harbor that it was but a few minutes' fast travel for his reindeer to deliver a load of gifts right at our snow house on deck. I was busy all the morning unpacking and sorting out these boxes and getting ready a real Christmas tree from Bustins Island, Me., brought up by my chief assistant, Robinson.

And the dinner! No one man could describe it, for no one man of our party ever heard of so many good things to eat! A Boston grocery firm was the generous donor, the menu including everything imaginable from fruit cocktail, caviar, antipasto, diabolo, mammoth olives, down through green turtle soup, roast stuffed turkey, cranberry sauce, corn on the cob, to plum pudding, crackers and cheese, nuts, raisins, dates, figs, coffe and cigars.

I have mentioned only half the items. Our turkey was roasted and sealed up whole in a tin.

After we had finished, all the Eskimos were invited to sit down at a table still piled high with good things and each was served with a heaping plate of turkey and vegetables. Loud were the expressions of delight and grunts of satisfaction as they ate and ate and ended their feast with nuts, raisins and cigars.

When their dinner had settled a bit and they were a little more at ease, they were called out upon the ice to see the fireworks which we brought from home. Possibly our roman candles preferred the snugness of their warm wrappers to a freezing whizz through space, for many of them uttered but a protest at being awakened from their winter's sleep and died on the spot. But what did go off brought forth startling yells, especially from old Ook-took-he, who vigorously waved his candle and crowed like a rooster.

Tom, our Newfoundlander, contributed brilliantly to the whole effect by fashioning a huge torch, such as are used in the seal fishery. When soaked in oil and lighted and stuck in a snowbank the whole area about the Bowdoin was beautifully illuminated.

When darkness had again settled down over the harbor ice and we had returned to the warm little forecastle of the Bowdoin, the presents were distributed to the Eskimos and crew. It is safe to assert that they had never received so many gifts in their life within the short space of 20 minutes. The problem was how to get them home to their snow houses on the land. This was solved by tying up the sleeves of their seal-skin coats and cotton dickeys and converting them into bags; and off the Eskimos trooped early to unwrap and look their gifts over carefully one by one.

But before going, Mary, with Pipatchee, gave us a concert on her new accordion which she traded for at the Hudson Bay Co.'s post for the white fox skins. It is interesting how delighted they are with music and how quickly they pick up anything heaard on the phonograph.

Our Christmas at Bowdoin Harbor will long be remembered, especially the corn on the cob.

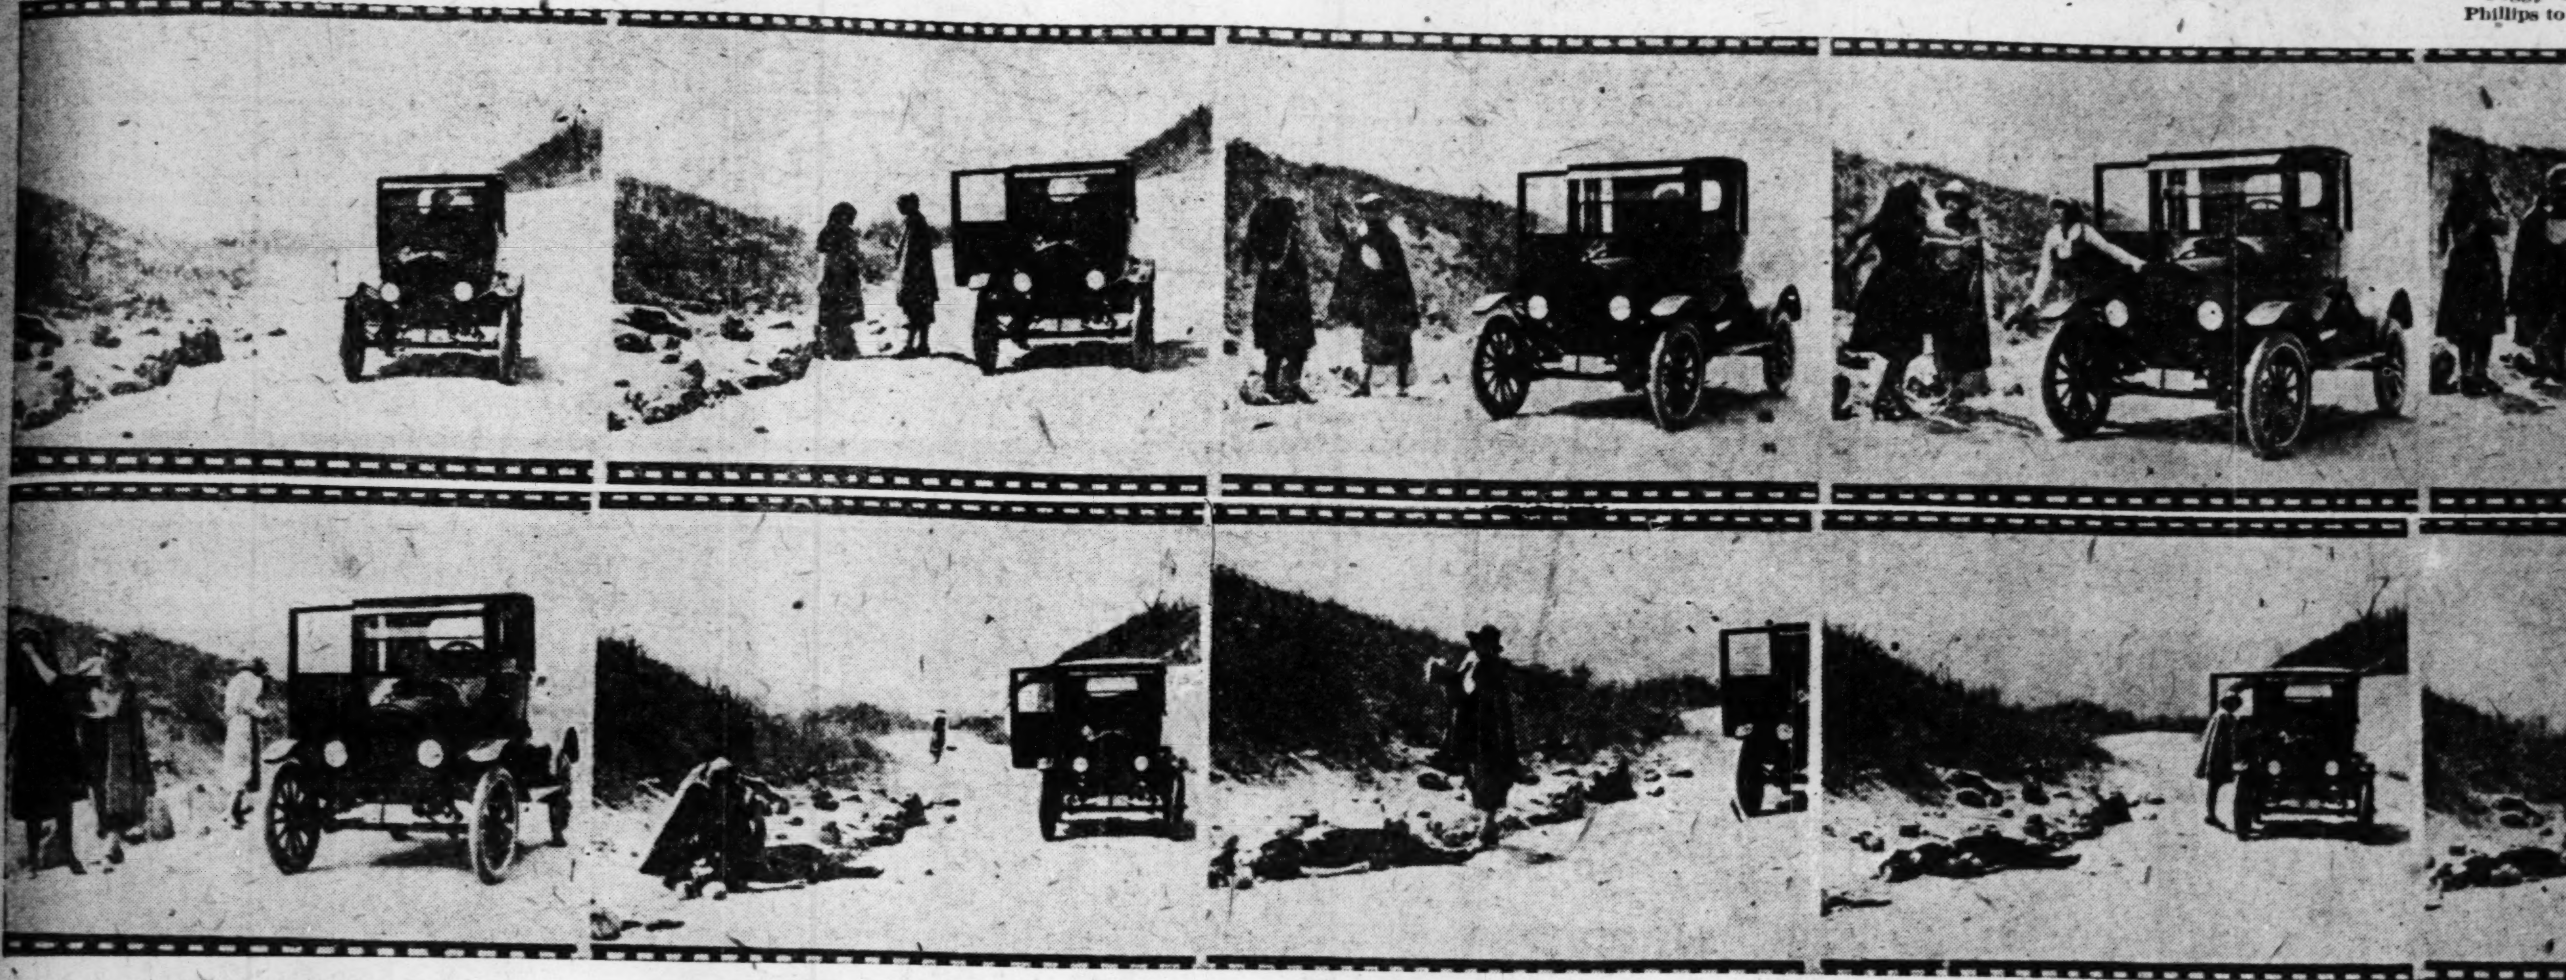
Curious Climax in "Hammer Murder" When Woman Defendant and "Pal," Now State's Chief Witness, Accuse Each Other of the Crime



Mrs. Meadows stops the car at Mrs. Phillips' order.

They get out and begin to quarrel over Clara Phillips' husband.

Mrs. Meadows is attacked with a hammer.

Peggy Caffee rushes to interfere.

Peggy Caffee attempts to persuade Clara Phillips to stop wielding the hammer.

Seeing her efforts in vain, Peggy Caffee retreats down the road.

She turns and looks back and sees Mrs. Meadows on the ground and Clara Phillips bending over her.

Again looks back and sees Clara Phillips arise over the prostrate form.

Clara Phillips enters her automobile again, leaving the body of Mrs. Meadows in the road.

Clara Phillips leaves the scene.

These "movie" strips picture the murder of Mrs. Alberta Meadows, the tragedy being re-enacted for the purpose of following the entire action of the crime, as described by Mrs. Peggy Chaffee. Mrs. Chaffee described how she, Mrs. Phillips and Mrs. Meadows were driving in a little car; how Mrs. Meadows and Mrs. Phillips began arguing, and how, after they left the car, Mrs. Phillips struck Mrs. Meadows on the head with a hammer. Mrs. Chaffee's story contained the information that she left the car to go to the aid of Mrs. Meadows, but that Mrs. Phillips continued to rain blows with the hammer on Mrs. Meadows until she fell to the ground. Mrs. Chaffee began to run away, turned and saw Mrs. Phillips drop a rock on the head of the prostrate Mrs. Meadows, re-enter the car and then drive away.

Woman in Fight For Life Tells of Death Ride in Auto With the Victim

Prisoner Asserts It Was Peggy Caffee Who Actually Swung Hammer That Caused Death of Mrs. Alberta Meadows, Widow and Alleged Sweetheart of Defendant's Husband.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Nov. 11.

AT bay before the testimony of the only eyewitness to the slaying of Mrs. Alberta Meadows, pretty widow, Mrs. Clara Phillips, on the witness stand, dramatically developed the big moment in the melodrama of the case when she hurled back Peggy Caffee's charge, declaring that it was Peggy who wielded the death hammer, and not she.

Mrs. Phillips, in deliberate and shaded tones, coolly and clearly, described each stage of the death trip of the three women in the small car from the heart of the city to the lonely hillside scene of the tragedy. She concluded thus:

"After Alberta told me she was going to run away with my husband, Peggy came running with the hammer and began to strike Alberta on the head and in the face with it. Then my mind became a blank."

The amazing climax that this statement suddenly and sensationally lurched the case into had not been anticipated even in the most remote conjectures of its possibilities.

Use of Motion Pictures.

No hint of this sharp twist had been intimated nor was there even the suggestion of it in a specially prepared reel version of the slaying. The moving pictures depicting the fatal moments following the arrival of the three women in the small car at the lonely spot along the hill road appeared to indicate the principal characters acting out the version that had been testified to by Peggy Caffee on the witness stand. The more closely and clearly to assemble and co-ordinate the action during the slaying, the motion pictures were made. In conjunction with the verbal description, the pictures had made the events of that afternoon stand out with the clearness to all that they had stood out to the only eye-witness, Peggy Caffee, who was Mrs. Phillips, chum or "pal" as she calls her.

But the startling statement of Clara Phillips caused a swift shift of the characters and their positions. The role of Alberta Meadows was not changed. In place of Mrs. Phillips standing over the beautiful Meadows woman, her arm upraised, her fingers twisted tight about the handle of the hammer, the counter charge of Clara Phillips pictures the form of Peggy Caffee.

Accuser Accused.

Accuser and accused changed parts there in the courtroom.

Thus the accused woman brought to a dramatic junction the three lines of defense that have been carefully developed for the last week by her attorneys. The first line is that Mrs. Phillips is a moron, a mental defective, subject to epileptic convulsions and periods of violent insanity.

Relatives testified that her family tree for generations back was tainted with mental weakness.

The second line of defense is the unwritten law, the alleged taunting of Mrs. Phillips by Mrs. Meadows over Phillips' infidelity. The third line is the accusation that Peggy Caffee actually swung the hammer and directed the whole killing.

Mrs. Phillips asserted that while the three women were riding from the city, Mrs. Meadows said to her:

"Armour Phillips, your husband, loves me, and I am wild about him. We are going away together. You and he are not mated, and you might as well know the truth." Here they all three alighted from the car. Mrs. Phillips continued.

"Then she slapped me and we fought and fought. Mrs. Meadows was getting the best of me and I called Peggy Caffee to come and rescue me. She came running with the hammer that she had bought that day.

The Death Struggle.

"All the strength seemed to have left me when Alberta admitted the truth—that she was infatuated with my husband and intended to run away with him. Peggy came running with the hammer and started striking Alberta and then my mind became a blank."

The witness at this point broke into tears, sobbing in her kerchief, and Bertram Herington, her attorney cut off the examination at its most emotional moment.

Wilhelmina Atkinson, who had been on the road with a theatrical troupe five years ago with Mrs. Phillips, told of seeing the young woman fall into a convulsive fit and then "snap out of it" soon after. On another occasion, the witness said, Clara went into a fit in the room they occupied together and flung everything in the place around "until the room looked like a madhouse."

While Mrs. Atkinson was explaining how long it took physicians to waken Mrs. Phillips from the seizure, her testimony was interrupted by a burst of wild laughter from the accused woman. Mrs. Atkinson paused and stared. Clara Phillips, rocking with mirth, forced a handkerchief into her mouth to stifle the sound.

Witness Laughs, Too.

In a momentary silence another question was asked. Mrs. Atkinson looked at Mrs. Phillips, the latter shook with suppressed laughter again and this time the witness joined in the weird hilarity; rocking to and fro in the chain on the stand for minutes before she was able to control herself.

There are three women in the jury which is trying Mrs. Phillips, but it was impossible to read in their faces the effect the unexpected incident produced on their minds.

Peggy Caffee, despite a raking cross-examination by the defense, held steady to her original story of the tragedy and added several important features not hitherto revealed. After describing the purchase of the hammer, she went on:

Peggy Chaffee, State's chief witness, who is accused in turn of murder by woman defendant she accused.

"It was then that Mrs. Phillips told me that she had heard that her husband, Armour, was going with another girl. We drove to the apartment of Mrs. Meadows that very night, but she was not home. Clara came home with me and stayed all night.

"Next day, we went to the apartment of a friend at Long Beach and had a few drinks. There was a little left in the bottle and Mrs. Phillips carried it with her. Then we started back to the city.

"When we reached the city, we went directly to the automobile park where Mrs. Meadows kept her car and waited for her to appear. When Mrs. Meadows started to drive out of the little park, we went up to her. Mrs. Phillips asked Mrs. Meadows if she would take her out to her sister's, where she was staying.

"Mrs. Meadows said she would, and Mrs. Phillips then introduced us. We got into the car and Clara said she would direct Mrs. Meadows how to go to our destination. After we got outside of town, Mrs. Phillips said she wanted to speak to Mrs. Meadows, and a little farther along the road, which was uphill, Mrs. Phillips said:

"'Stop here.'

"We all got out of the car, and the motor was left running. Mrs. Phillips turned to Mrs. Meadows and said:

"'My husband bought those tires and that steering wheel for you!'

"Mrs. Meadows replied: 'No, I purchased them myself.'

Mrs. Phillips Hit Her.

"Mrs. Phillips then struck her on the forehead with the hammer."

As the witness described, thus briefly, the striking of the first blow, Mrs. Phillips moved forward in her seat and was greatly affected, evidently. She reached out and tried to attract the attention of her attorney, as if in protest. It was like a motion for aid in a moment of danger, but the lawyer ignored it, as Peggy Caffee on the stand continued:

"Mrs. Meadows ran down the hill screaming. I ran up the hill screaming. After rounding a turn in the road, I heard voices and went back again. The two women were walking toward the car arm in arm, and talking.

"As we reached the machine, Mrs. Phillips said:

"'He also bought you that wrist watch!

"'He did.'

"With that Mrs. Phillips struck Mrs. Meadows again with the hammer on the forehead. Mrs. Meadows put out her hands to her, and Mrs. Phillips swung toward me. I ran down the road again, screaming. Suddenly I became weak. I must have fainted. Afterwards I looked up the road and saw Mrs. Phillips leaning over the body. The next I remember Mrs. Phillips drove the car up beside me and blew the horn.

Covered With Blood.

"She told me to get in. Her face, dress and gloves were covered with blood. She picked up Mrs. Meadows' handbag, took off her rings and dropped them into the bag. She then asked me for my gloves, so as to cover the blood on her hands.

"As we drove away she steered with her left hand, while I tried to put a glove on her right hand."

The defense cut somewhat into Peggy's story by forcing admissions from her that she testified falsely before the grand jury and the Coroner's jury regarding the movements of herself and Mrs. Phillips on the day of the slaying.

In her first testimony Peggy said they had spent the day window-shopping until they met Mrs. Meadows late in the afternoon.

During the dramatic recital of the slaying Mrs. Caffee at times paled and appeared greatly distressed. She halted her testimony once and asked for a glass of water. She said she met Mrs. Phillips for the first time in the chorus of a musical show two years ago. She said that Clara once told her that she had heard from neighbors that her husband had been attentive to a girl, and that he was cold to her at times and sometimes would not talk to her.

As Mrs. Caffee's testimony closed Mrs. Phillips smiled, apparently undisturbed, and greeted the relatives who gathered around her with kisses.

tery that kept Kentucky in a stir of speculation for months. A 16-year-old girl, accusing her mother of the murder of her father and revealing a pact alleged to have been entered into to keep secret the circumtsances of his death, figures in the situation that recently came to light at Bardstown, Ky., as a result of the indictment of Mrs. Joseph Beulah Vance Lindsay and her present husband. They are accused of killing Charles Vance, Mrs. Lindsay's first husband, Aug. 18, 1921.

Allie Nolan Vance stood to the pact between her and her mother even when circumstances seemed about to fix the murder on her, ascribing as the motive the fact that at one time her father had objected to her going with a certain young man. Under the inquisitorial fire of the State authorities she maintained her innocence and held close the secret.

The girl, who is living at Louisville, told a story recently that implicates a former hired man on her father's farm and who, after the murder, married her mother.

Triangular Affair.

Life's proclivity toward the triangle emphasized itself only a few weeks ago when Mrs. Alfred leBeck shot and killed George Bohnk, 27-year-old farm hand, in the leBeck general store at Prairie Rose, Ia. Mrs. leBeck then turned the pistol on herself, suffering a serious wound in the neck which threatened her life.

In this situation, it is alleged, an intrigue between the two had its inception at a dance and thrived for some time, coming to its tragic climax when Bohnk, entering the Le Beck store with a young woman facetiously introduced her as his wife. Mrs. le Beck is said to have become angry said to have told him that if ever she saw him with the girl again she would kill him. Bohnk, the State's story goes, stepped toward her and she pulled the trigger of the pistol she held.

For 18 years Mrs. le Beck had borne a stainless reputation in the neighborhood as a wife. It was not until the jealous outburst that had its speedy ending in the fatality and the attempt on her own life that the clandestine alliance even was suspected.

Shot Man Through Fear.

Anna Gurrea, 20 years old, evidently could see only one sure way out of her fear for Ralph Acito, 27, of Newport, Ky., so she shot him. A Coroner's jury returned a verdict that the girl shot in self-defense, but the victim's sister immediately swore to a warrant charging Anna with murder.

Miss Gurrea, in telling her story, declares that Acito had threatened her and that when he called again to see her she shot him. She also charges that the attempt of Acito to draw a pistol prompted her act.

Mrs. Elizabeth Sherrill, 30 years old, is awaiting trial, in connection with the shooting of Miss Hannah Novak, 18, at Tulsa, Ok., March 25, as the young woman sat in a motor car with Sherrill in front of Mrs. Sherrill's rooming house.

Mrs. Sherrill told the police she had warned her husband to let the girl alone and that she had told the girl not to bother her husband. When she looked out of a window and saw the two chatting there before her eyes and her home—it was too much. She tossed a shawl about her shoulders, concealed a pistol beneath its folds, crossed the street and fired one shot at the girl. As the victim screamed, Mrs. Sherrill admitted stepping closer, pressing the revolver close to her side and firing the remaining five shots.

Thought It "Bluff."

"I thought my wife was 'bluffing' when she told me to let that girl alone," remarked Sherrill after the tragedy. "There never was anything wrong in my relations with Miss Novak."

Another triangular affair in which a husband was eliminated was that in which James Hensley, who lived near Inez, Ky., was slain. Mrs. Mary Hensley was sentenced to life imprisonment on a charge of aiding in the murder of her husband. Her alleged paramour, Frank Chapman, had been sentenced to a similar term a few weeks before.

The killing of Hensley took place about the first of the year. Chapman had been paying attention to Mrs. Hensley for some time, it was brought out at the trial. On the night of the murder, it was alleged, the two were together. Hensley was heard coming along the path toward his home. Chapman left the house, going in the direction of the sound. Then came the report of the pistol. It was alleged that after the fatally wounded man had been carried into the house by his wife and her sweetheart, the latter went to bed in the same room with the dying man.

The next day Mrs. Hensley denounced Chapman as the slayer and both were arrested.

Kentucky Murder Mystery.

The alleged confession recently made by Jane Riley of Hazard, Ky. is taken as the solution of one of the murder mysteries of the State. W. A. Bunigan, a young business man of Blackey, Ky., was found slain a year ago on the side of a mountain in Letcher County. Apparently nothing could be established and the case was marked unsolved.

Then came Jane Riley, who implicates Lizzie Lawson, 17 years old, who is an inmate of the State Reform School, where she was sent on a charge of delinquency. Jane is quoted as saying the two lured Bunigan to the mountain side where they killed him with a billiard cue and robbed him. Officers at Hazard, on the strength of the Riley girl's story, arrested George Nickels and Hood Lawson, a relative of the Lawson girl, in connection with the crime. The authoritites are holding the quartet while they are seeking to Wilford M. Aiken has been chosen as director of the new John Burroughs School, a country day school for girls and boys, which is to be opened next fall in buildings to be erected on an 18-acre tract at Price road and the Clayton car line. The site has been obtained by a committee of parents.

Aiken is a graduate of the University of Michigan, and was until last June director of the Scarborough School, at Scarborough-on-Hudson, N. Y. He is now giving a special course of lectures in the department of education of the University of California. He will come to St. Louis in January, and will supervise the construction of the new buildings, organize the faculty and arrange the program of studies for next year. The school will endeavor to fit pupils for entrance to college, and to give a thorough training to those who do not plan to go to college.

HUSKING CORN TOO HARD FOR MEN

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

AURORA, Ill.—A score of men were in the offices of the Illinois Free Employment Bureau here recently when W. A. Rompf, a Somonauk farmer, walked in and told the superintendent he wanted to hire a couple of corn huskers. Not a man in the room wanted the job. "Husking corn is too tough for me," said a man standing 5 feet 11 inches and weighing nearly 200 pounds.

Mrs. Raymond Davidson, 21 years old, weighing less than 115 pounds, was the only woman in the place looking for a job. When all of the men turned down the corn-husking job she stepped up and said the work wasn't too hard for her. Rompf is paying her 4 cents a bushel. Farmers say it is almost impossible to hire men to husk corn.

collect corroborative evidence bearing out the alleged confession of the Riley girl.

Kentucky's most noted murder trial of recent years is scheduled to begin Dec. 11 in the Circuit Court at Winchester. In this case three persons are charged with conspiracy to murder Leon Renaker, millionaire "turkey king" of the Bluegrass state, who was known in the produce markets over all the country.

Widow a Defendant.

The defendants are Mrs. Nancy Catherine Renaker, 32-year-old widow of the slain man, who is accomplished and was a social leader in her home town; Scobee Hardman, member of a wealthy pioneer family of Kentucky and Reese Fox, whose personal wealth is reputed to be large and whose family is regarded among the wealthiest in the state. Mrs. Renaker is at freedom under $5000 bail.

The grand jury fixed the date of Renaker's murder as about July 25 just after he had returned from Cincinnati where he had gone on a visit with Mrs. Renaker. She remained in the Queen City for a day or so and on her return to her home found her husband's body in the house. Since that time she has refused to enter the building. Renaker carried more than $50,000 life insurance, all drawn in favor of his wife. Court officers have declined to make public the evidence on which Mrs. Renaker was indicted.

The instrument with which the murder was committed never has been found. It has been established that Renaker was hit on the head with some blunt weapon as he was preparing for bed and that the body was then dragged onto the bed, where it was laid out carefully. The theory of robbery which, at first, was seized on, was abandoned shortly when it was found nothing was missing.

RED CROSS ORGANIZES FOR ROLL CALL WORK

Edward Hall to Have Charge of Efforts by Several Hundred Business Men to Obtain Funds.

Several hundred business men will handle the St. Louis enrollment in the American Red Cross this year, it is announced by John Lawrence Mauran, chairman of the St. Louis Chapter. An organization has been formed under the leadership of Edward T. Hall, who has named as his chief lieutenant Samuel C. McCluney. John Ring Jr. has been placed in charge of publicity work. The Roll Call will begin Nov. 22 and close Nov. 29.

Work of Reorganization.

"We do not expect to occupy the entire week in enrolling the citizens of this city," Chairman Hall said. "We have one of the strongest sales organizations that has been formed here since the war, and have met with such universal enthusiasm and cordial co-operation that we expect the Roll Call this year to go over in a big way. Not a single man whom we have asked to head a section of our Roll Call organization has turned us down, and we believe that the enthusiasm encountered in forming the organization is an indication of that which we will meet in enrolling the people of St. Louis.

"The service of the Red Cross to the people of this country, especially the disabled and deserving ex-service men and their families and the sick and suffering in all parts of the country, as well as abroad, since the war, has shown beyond question that the Red Cross is as essential in peace times as in war times. A great agency, national in its scope and working under a Government charter, can and does accomplish results which smaller organizations cannot achieve.

"The Red Cross does not undertake service which other agencies can perform in community welfare, but there are certain functions which devolve logically and necessarily upon the Red Cross. It is for this work that the peace-time Red Cross organization must be maintained.

"For example, last year in St. Louis the Red Cross assisted more than 7500 disabled veterans in obtaining their Government compensation and gave financial aid to more than 700 disabled and deserving ex-service men and their families, pending the adjustment of their Government claims. It also conducted a free employment bureau which found jobs for nearly 5000 able-bodied ex-service men and carried on other work among the former soldiers. The Southwestern Division of the Red Cross, of which St. Louis is the headquarters, spent $730,000 in caring for and rehabilitating the victims of fire, flood, tornado and other disasters occuring in this division during the year.

Supported by Membership Dues.

"On the whole, the Red Cross is an institution which we must have and as it is supported by membership dues the men and women who enroll this year and pay their $1 membership fee will be serving their country and the people in it for the entire year."

Hall has appointed the following group leaders for the Roll Call campaign: Collins Thompson, county; T. W. Van Scholack, industries; Frank W. Swann, speakers; Leo Fuller, department stores; Mrs. John H. Holliday, women's division; Mrs. J. B. Rule, supplies; Horace Swope, booths, and A. W. Pauley, assistant to chairman.

Hall, with Vice Chairman McCluney, Charles Martin and T. W. Redmond will be in charge of the downtown division, and Edward Mead has been made chairman of a special committee on "stunts." This committee includes John McKinley, Jack Grohs, Allen Center, Oliver Hickel and Walter E. Zemitzsch. Victor Stempf has been named treasurer for the drive. The various committees are in process of formation and an executive committee to work with Chairman Hall will be organized at once.

IF KIDNEYS ACT BAD TAKE SALTS

Says Backache often means you have been eating too much meat.

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it may mean you have been eating too much meat, says a well-known authority. An excess of meat may form uric acid which overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids so they no longer irritate, thus often ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure and makes a delightful, effervescent lithia water drink. Drink lots of soft water.

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH

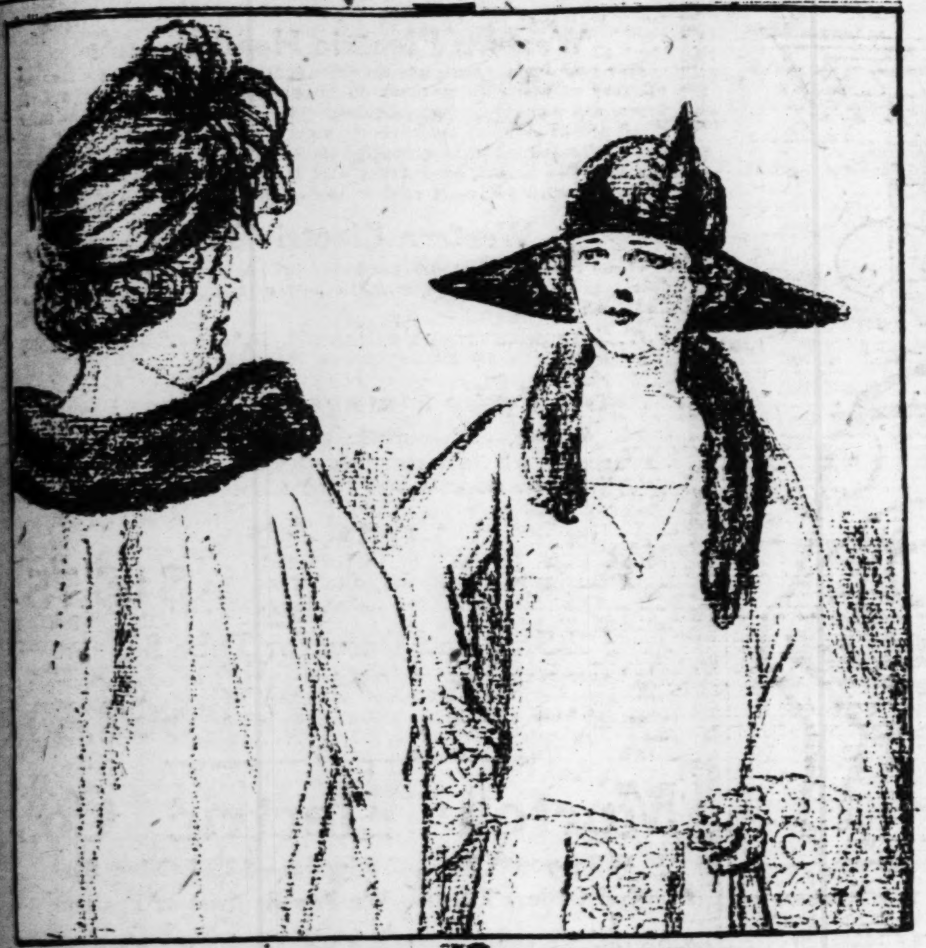
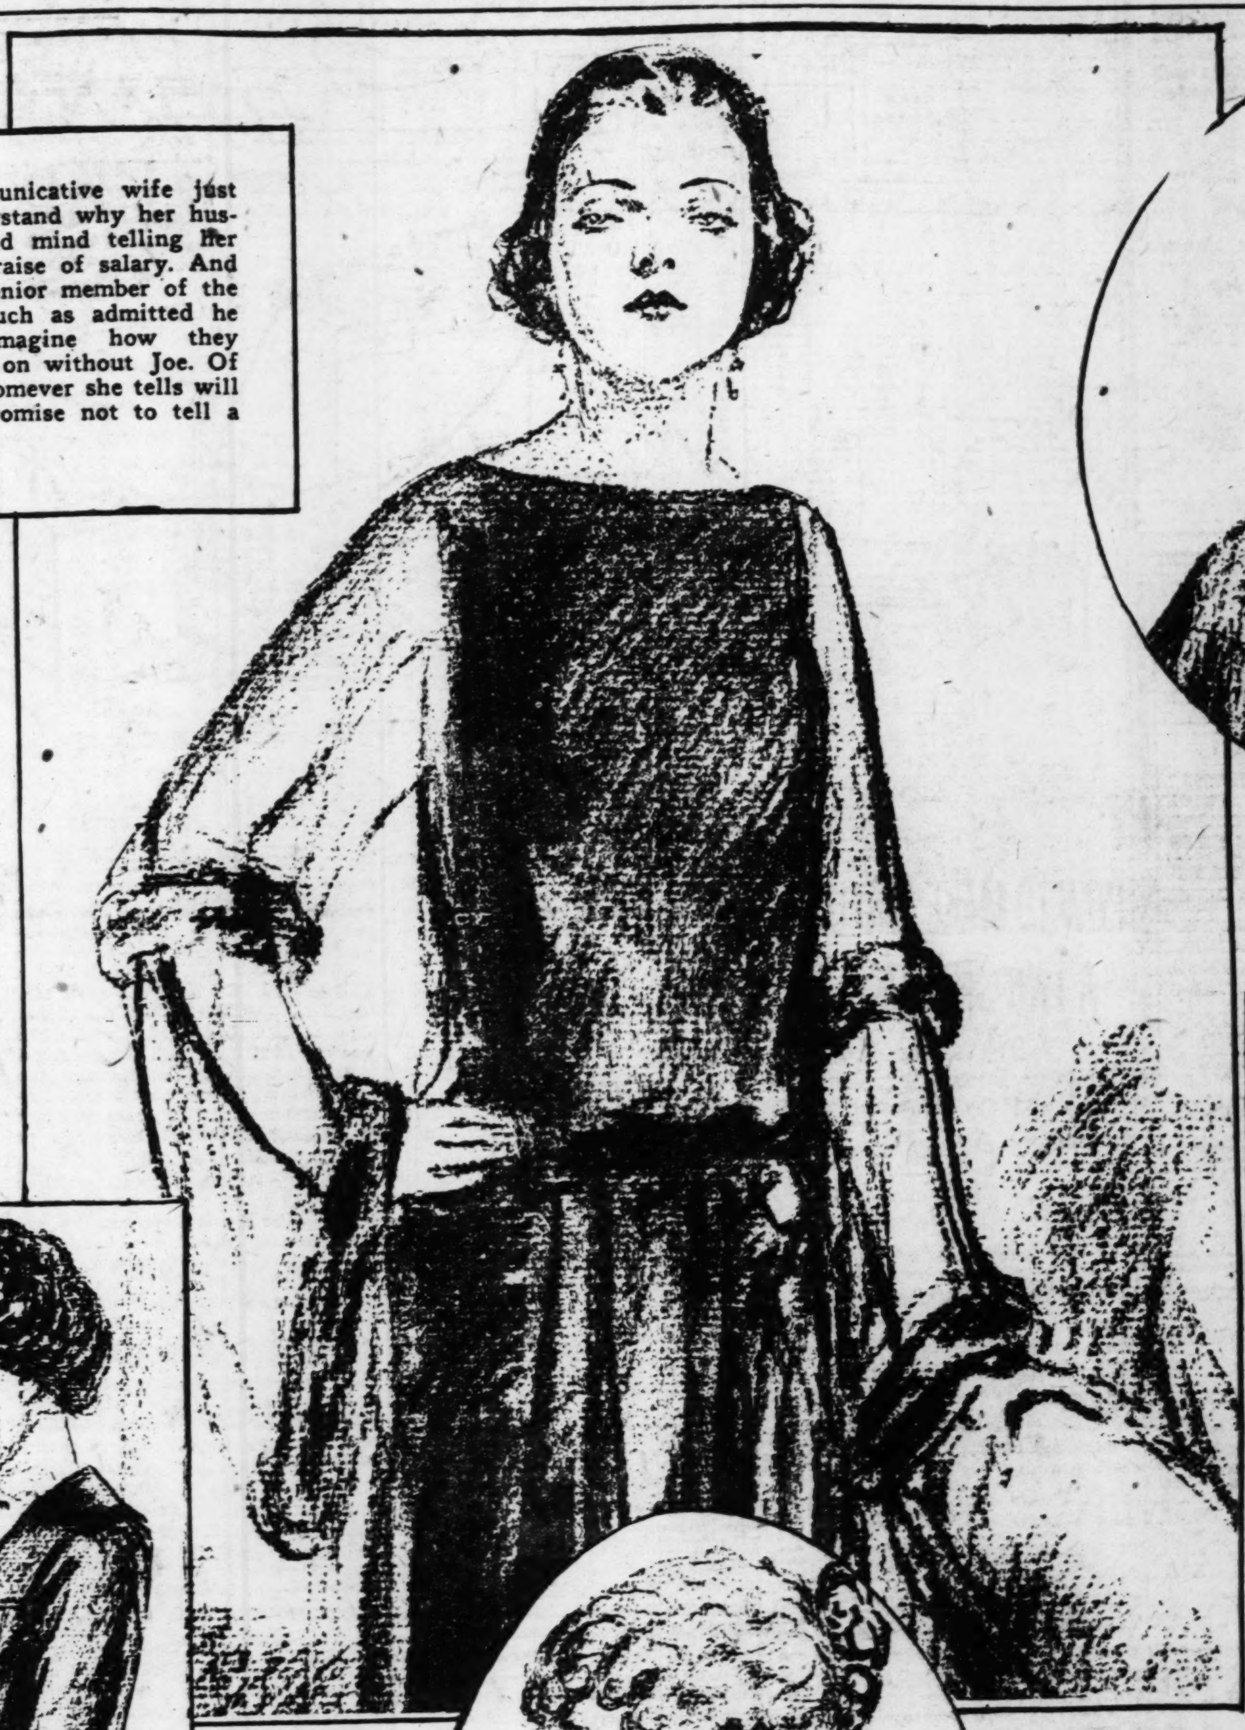
PART SIX. ST. LOUIS, SUNDAY MORNING, NOVEMBER 12, 1922. PAGES 25—32.

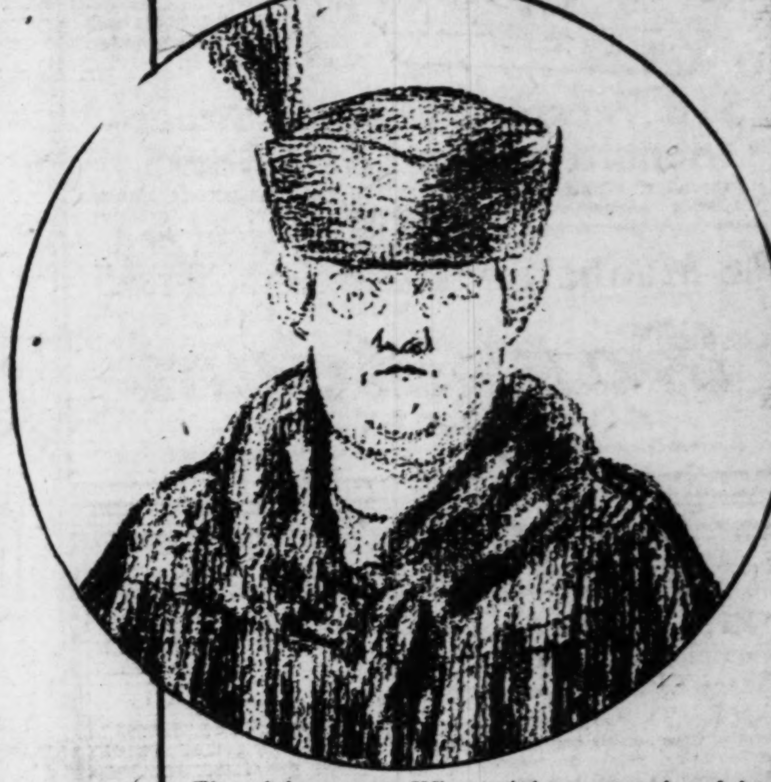
THE LITTLE WIFE

By W. E. Hill

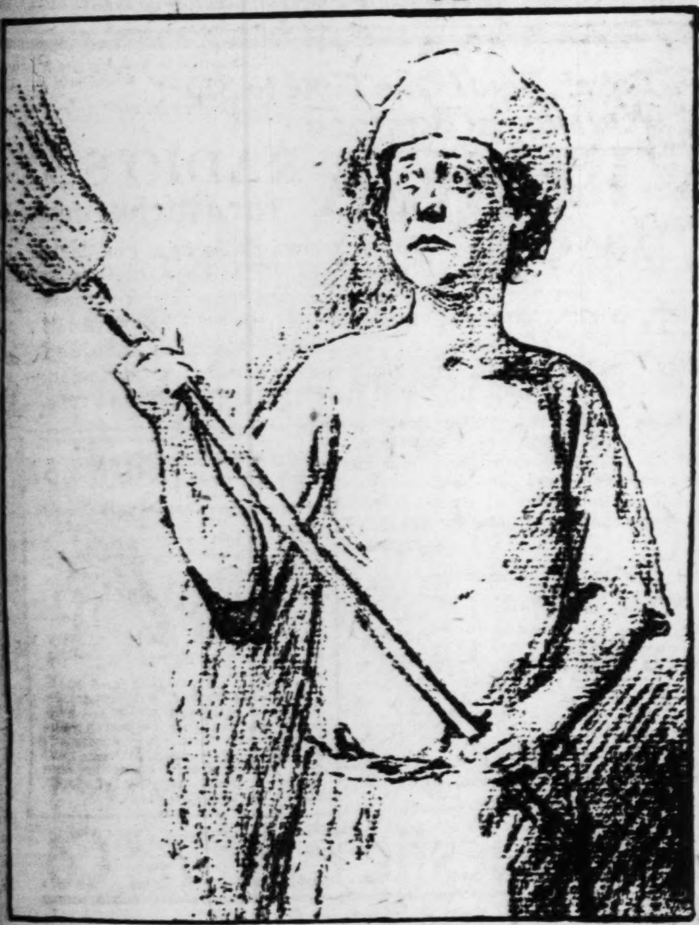


The communicative wife just can't understand why her husband should mind telling her about his raise of salary. And how the senior member of the firm as much as admitted he couldn't imagine how they would get on without Joe. Of course, whomever she tells will have to promise not to tell a soul.

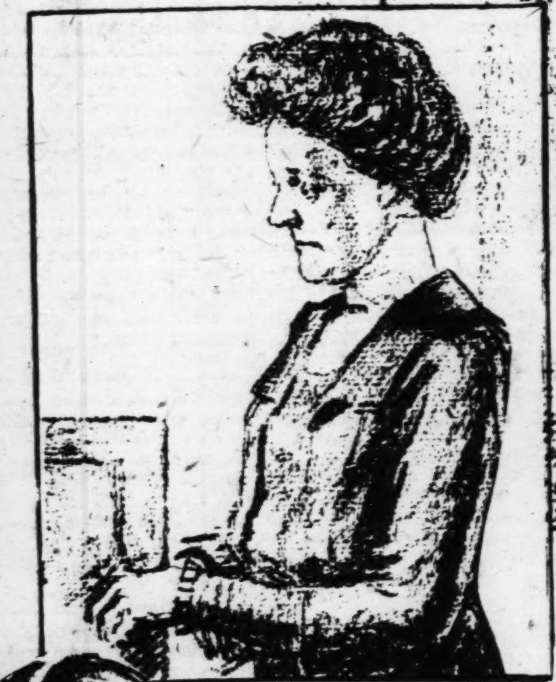




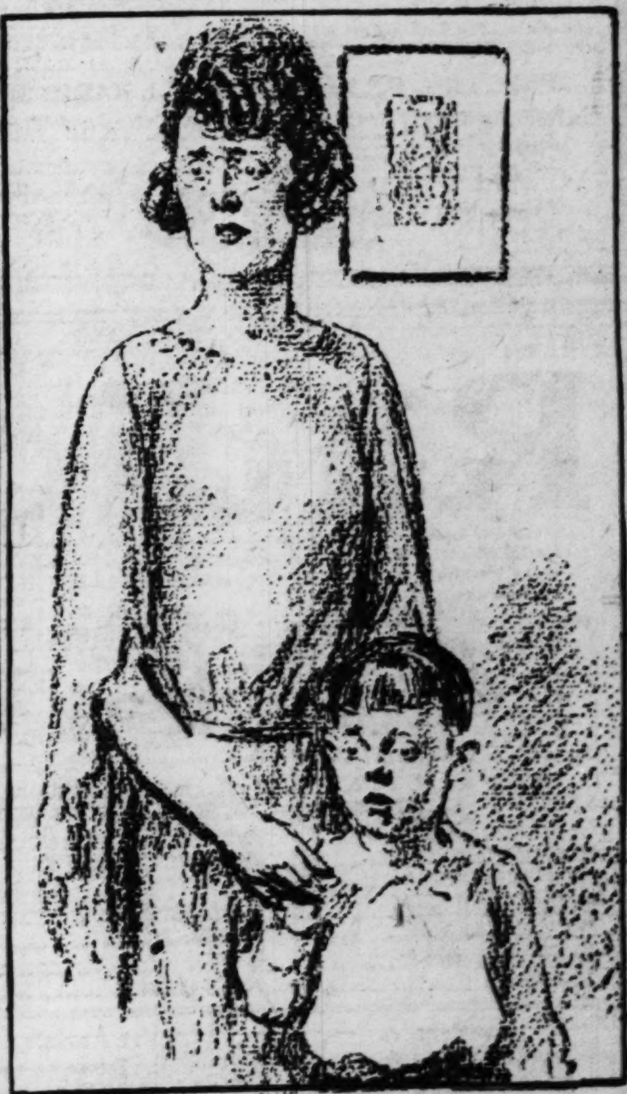
The clubwoman. When night comes the clubwoman will be tireder than the tired business man to whom she is joined in holy wedlock, and she will have a headache between the eyes from reading the minutes of the last meeting before the Woman's Civic Club.



The doctor's wife. The wife of a successful doctor has to be oh, so nice and chatty with everybody. You never can tell who's going to be ill.

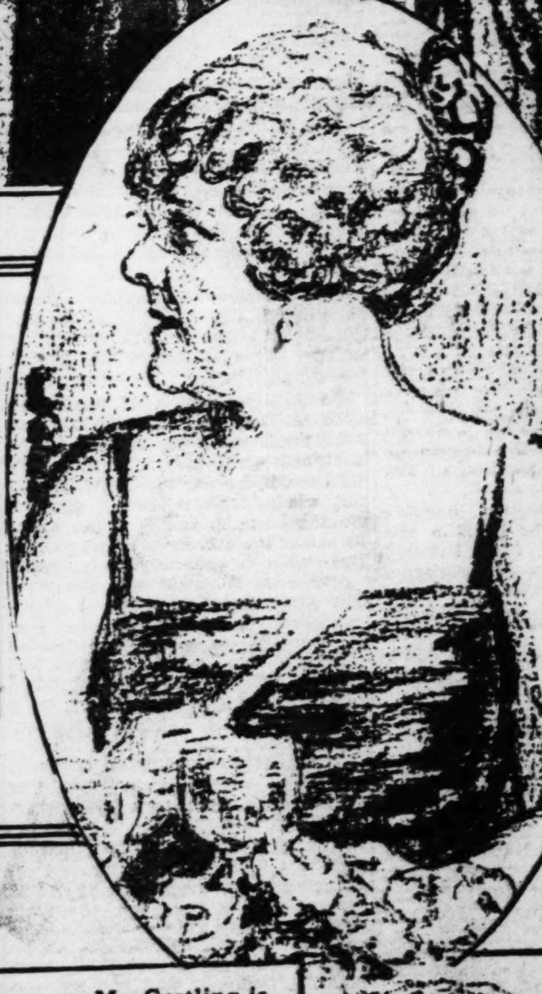


The good housekeeper The good housekeeper spends her days showing Annie, the maid, how it ought to be done. She is always cleaning something, or canning something, and her proud boast is that you can eat from off her kitchen floor if you feel like it.

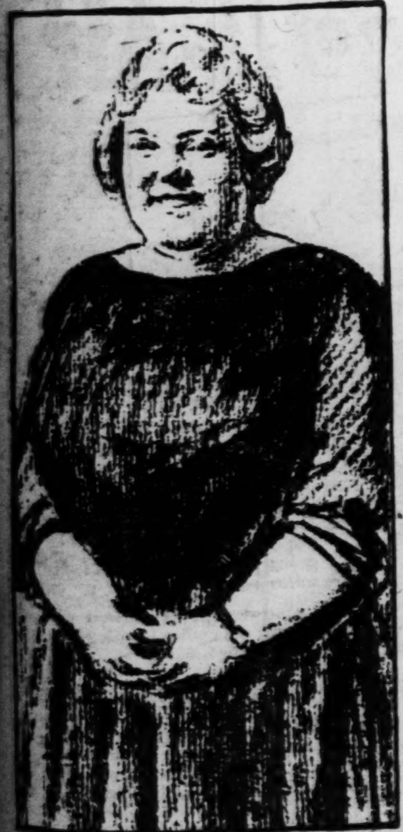


The fond parent. When papa comes home, right away he will be asked to go down the street and tell Harold Speare's papa and mamma that Harold took Spenser's kiddie car and wouldn't give it back for ever so long. And Spenser was just as dear about it! Told Harold he needn't ever give it back.

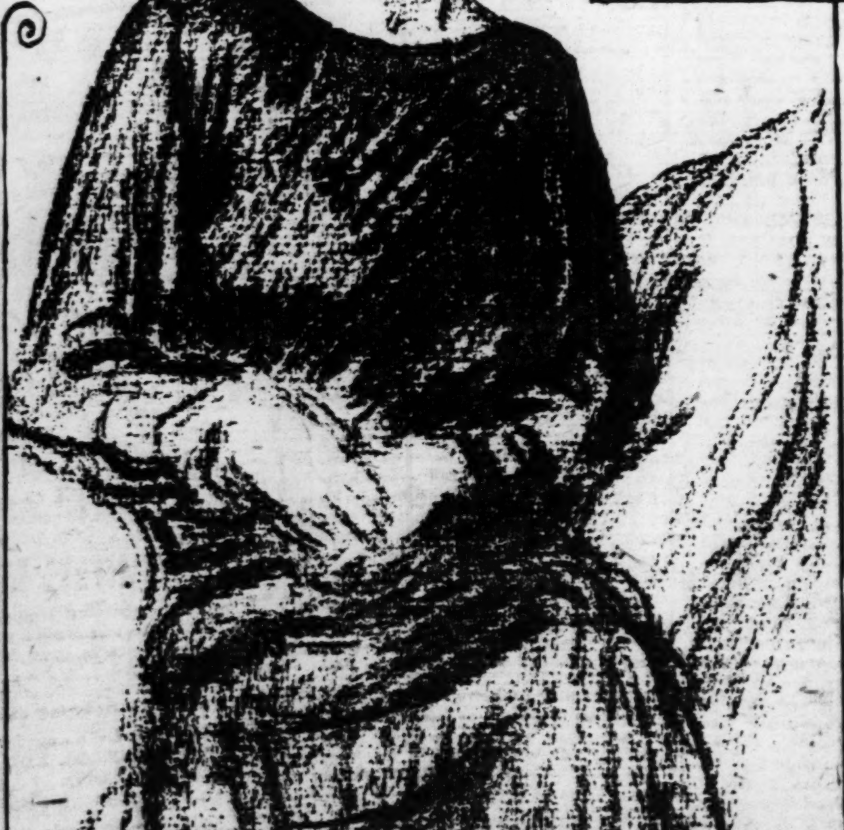
The economical wife. Many's the time Mr. Beemis has been heard to remark that there isn't another Mrs. Beemis in the whole world. There's no waste in Mrs. Beemis's kitchen! (Mrs. Beemis is visiting the icebox to see how much cabinet pudding there is left from Tuesday's meal.)



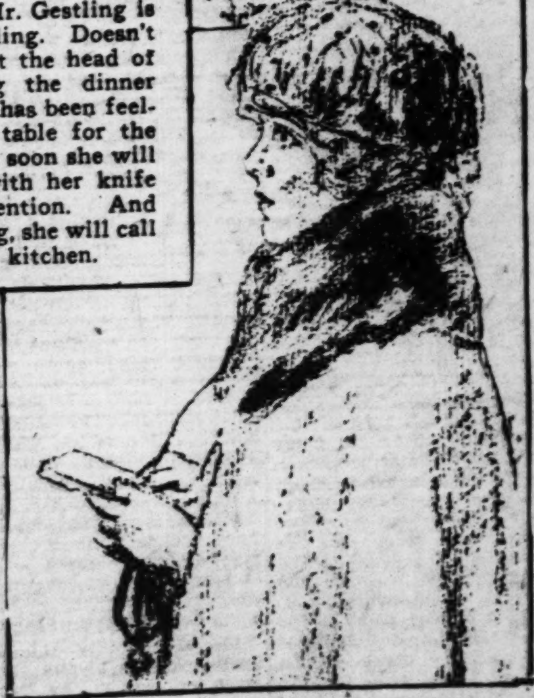
The perfect hostess. Mr. Gestling is so proud of Mrs. Gestling. Doesn't she look nice sitting at the head of the table, entertaining the dinner guests? Mrs. Gestling has been feeling around under the table for the electric buzzer. Pretty soon she will tap the glass goblet with her knife to attract Inger's attention. And then, nothing happening, she will call loudly to Inger in the kitchen.



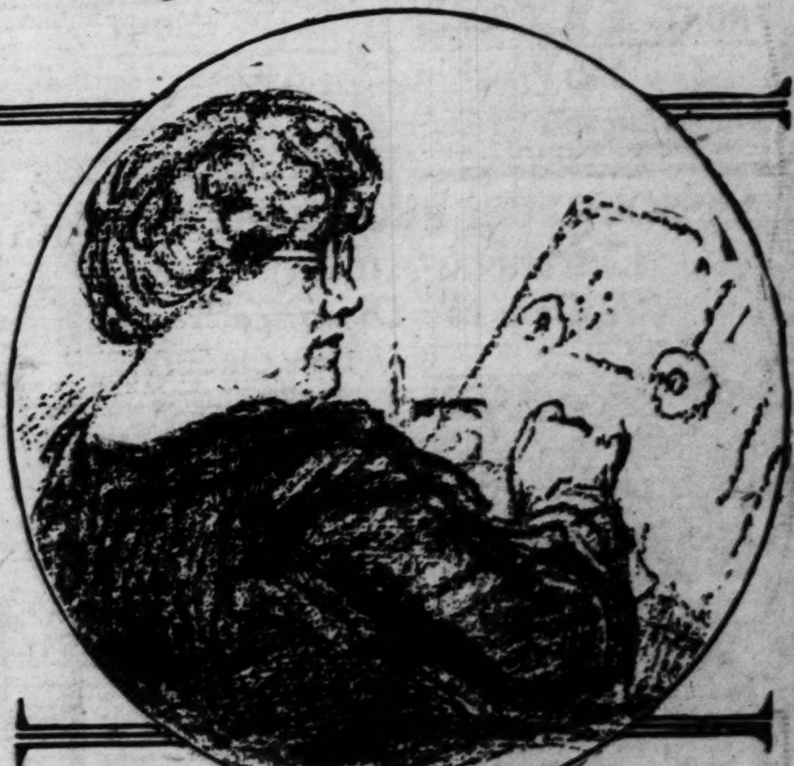
The stylish stout. The stout better half has lost her figure (she was the slimmest thing you ever saw when she graduated from Smith) and most of her looks. She laughs a lot and can eat rolypoly pudding without turning a hair. She is so good-natured that nobody, least of all her husband, minds her increase in weight.



The jealous wife. The jealous better half resents any outside interests—her husband's stenographer—his family, and, above all, his college friends who have an annoying habit of talking over old times in which the jealous wife played no part.



The little bride. The little bride is out marketing, and, my, but won't Herbert be proud of his Elsie, for Elsie is making every penny count.



The home builder. The home builder loves her home. Her waking hours are spent sewing on lampshades and monograming little guest room towels.

This Shows How a Two-Stage Audio-Frequency Amplifier May Be Added to a Crystal or Vacuum Tube Detector Receiving Set

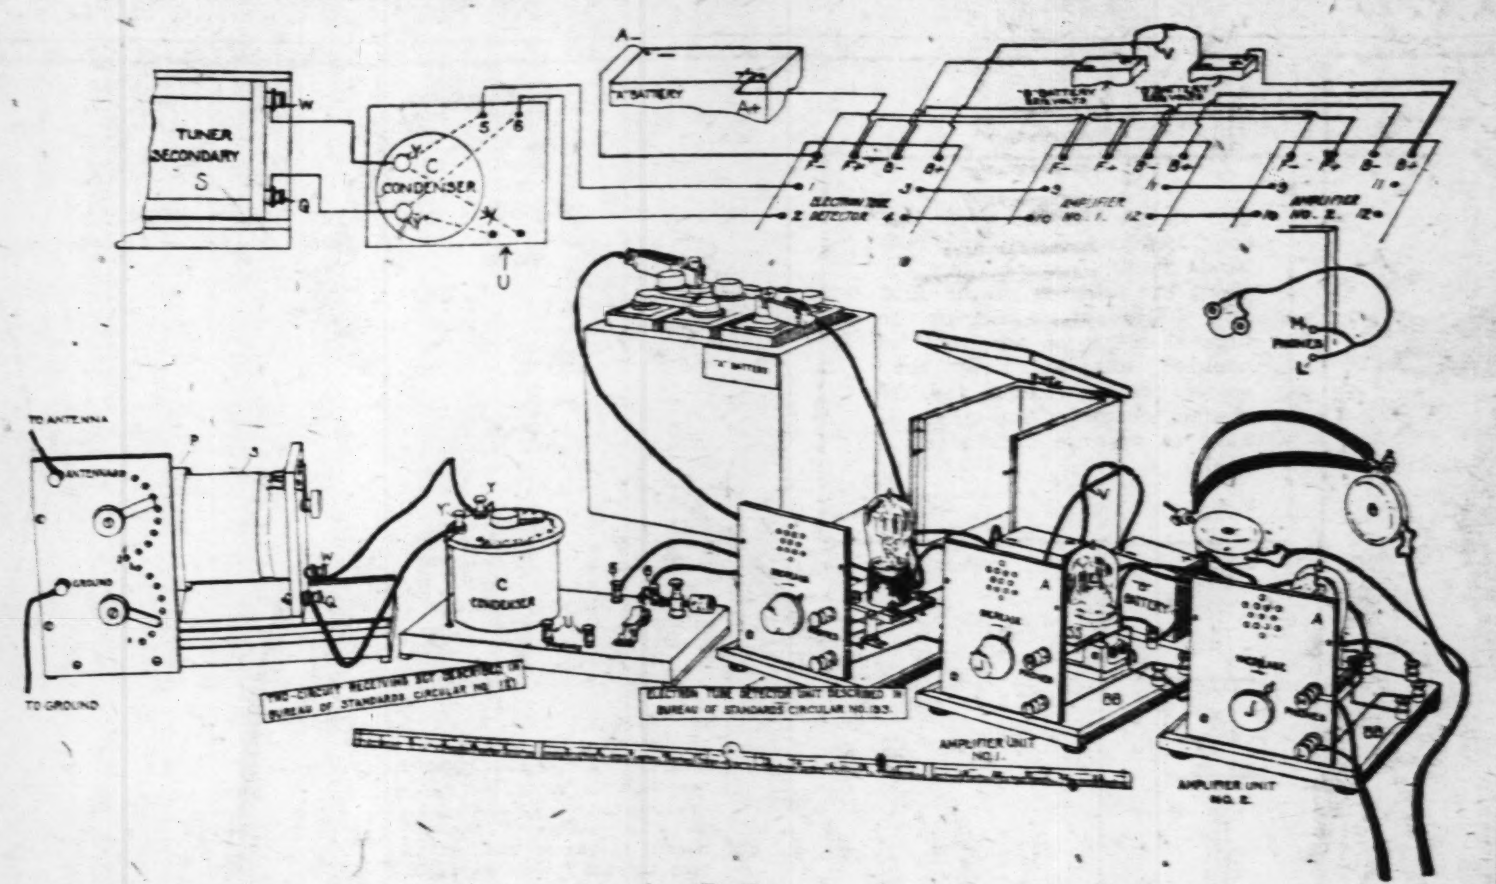

Fig. 3.

HOW TO MAKE AND USE A TWO-STEP AMPLIFIER

Complete Details for Construction and Operation of Two Stages of Audio-Frequency.

Directions for making and operating at home an audio-frequency amplifier unit for simple radio receiving outfits have been compiled by experts of the National Bureau of Standards at the request of the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

The amplifier described in the following official directions can be used with the single-circuit radio receiving set described in Bureau of Standards Circular No. 120, or with any other tuning device. The detector may be either a crystal detector or a vacuum tube detector similar to that described in Bureau of Standards Circular 133. Bureau of Standards Circular No. 120, 121 and 133 can be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents, Washington, D. C., for 5 cents each.

Audio-frequency Amplifier Unit

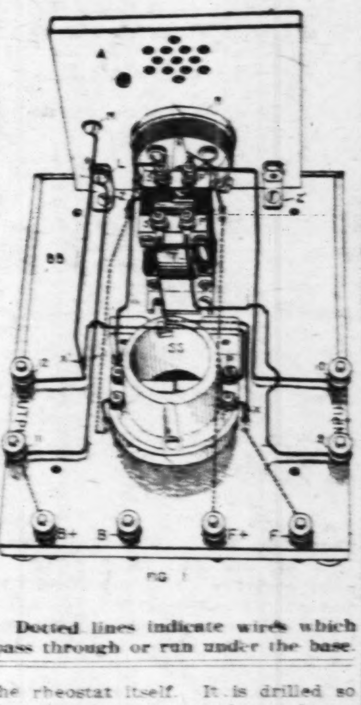
This amplifier unit is composed of a baseboard BB and an upright panel A. On the baseboard BB is mounted an electron tube socket SS, an audio-frequency amplifier transformer T, and eight binding posts. On the upright panel A is mounted a filament rheostat R (the adjusting knob J is shown in Fig. 3) and two telephone receiver binding posts L and M. These directions tell how the various parts are assembled on the baseboard and panel. No description is given of the construction of any of the parts.

Accessories.—Under the heading of accessories may be listed a six-volt storage battery ("A" battery) having an ampere-hour capacity of about 60, used for lighting the electron tube filament, a 45-volt dry battery ("B" battery) for supplying the electron tube plate voltage, binding posts, stiff copper wire (tinned wire is usually preferable) wood boards for the baseboard and upright panel, two brass angle braces for supporting the upright panel, miscellaneous wood screws and suitable stain and varnish. A composition insulating material panel is sometimes substituted for the wood panel and the amplifier unit enclosed in a wood cabinet with a hinged cover.

Description of Parts.

Baseboards (BB, Figs. 1 and 3).—The base BB is in a kind of dry, well seasoned wood about 6¾ inches by 8¼ inches by ½ inch thick. Eight holes are drilled through the base in which the binding posts are fastened. The binding posts are spaced so that they present a neat appearance. The baseboard is arranged so that the three remaining sides and a hinged cover may be added without changing the positions of the binding posts. Under each of the four corners of the baseboard BB rubber or wood feet are fastened in order that the binding-post heads and wiring on the under side of the baseboard will be protected.

Upright Panels (A, Figs. 1 and 3.)—The panel A is any suitable dry, seasoned wood about 4½ inches by 5 inches by ⅜-inch thick. In Fig. 1 a back view of the panel is shown which brings the two holes for the telephone receiver binding posts L and M in the lower left corner. (If the panel is viewed from the front these two holes will be at the lower right corner.) This panel is made to present a good appearance, it being the front panel. Four holes are drilled in the panel A, one for the bolt which fastens the panel to the brace (see Z, Fig. 1), two for the telephone receiver binding posts L and M (Figs. 1 and 3) and one for the shaft of the filament rheostat R (see Fig. 1.). The exact location and diameter of the hole for the rheostat shaft is determined from the rheostat itself. It is drilled so that the rheostat occupies as low a position as possible, allowing room enough to do the necessary wiring.



Dotted lines indicate wires which pass through or run under the base.

Electron tube (E, Fig. 3)—The electron tube is a commercially available tube generally called an amplifier tube or "hard" tube.

Electron tube socket (SS, Figs. 1 and 3)—The electron tube socket is one of various commercially available types.

Audio-frequency amplifier transformer (T, Fig. 1)—The audio-frequency amplifier transformer is one of the various commercially available types.

Binding posts—The binding posts used on the baseboard are 6-32 or 8-32 brass machine screws, each equipped with two nuts and two washers, if regular binding posts are not used. The telephone receiver binding posts, L and M (Figs. 1 and 3) are of the set-screw type to admit tips of the telephone receiver cords.

Filament Rheostat (R, Fig. 1)—The filament rheostat is one of the various commercially available types designed for panel mounting and having a neat appearing knob and pointer. The rheostat has a resistance of about seven ohms and a current-carrying capacity of about 1½ amperes.

Accessories—The accessory batteries are commercial articles. The purchaser of the six-volt storage battery ("A" battery) for lighting the filaments should get full instructions from the dealer for testing and recharging the battery. The 45 V "B" battery usually used for the plate circuit cannot be recharged. The normal life of a dry battery of reliable manufacture is about six months. Storage batteries for use as "B" batteries are available. Their first cost is greater than that of dry Likewise a wire is run from the other rheostat binding post, underneath the baseboard and up through the left hole in the baseboard at the rear of the electron tube socket SS and batteries, but they may be recharged.

Assembly and Wiring.

Wood finish.—It is essential that the wood be protected from moisture. The wood is first dried, and then finished with stain and varnish; a good grade of varnish, preferably insulating varnish, is used. Shellac or other alcohol dissolved resins are not used. This method of wood finishing is found more satisfactory than treating with paraffin as described in Bureau of Standards Circular No. 120. The exact method of drying and finishing wood depends upon the condition of the wood itself. The wood is usually placed in a warm oven for an hour or so to insure more or less complete drying. The use of lamp black or carbon pigment stains is avoided, and the stain and varnish is thoroughly dried before the apparatus is mounted on the wood baseboard and panel.

Baseboard (Fig. 1)—The eight brass machine screws or binding posts are put in the holes already drilled in the baseboard. If machine screws are used the heads are put under the side of the baseboard with a brass washer between the head and the baseboard. A brass washer and two nuts are then fastened to each screw, on the upper side of the baseboard, with the washer next to the baseboard.

The tube socket, SS, and the transformer, T, are next screwed to the baseboard. The exact location of these parts varies according to the particular type used.

The tube socket, SS, is mounted so that the two terminals marked G and P (Fig. 1) are nearest the upright panel. Wood blocks are put under the socket, SS, when necessary, so that the four terminals of the socket do not touch the wood baseboard. This is done by cutting off two round wood blocks just long enough to raise the socket terminals clear of the base, and mounting them so that the screws which hold the socket to the baseboard will pass through holes in the centers of the blocks.

After the socket, SS, and the transformer, T, are mounted, the parts are wired. No. 14 copper wire (preferably covered with spaghetti tubing, is used in wiring. This makes the connection stiff and self-supporting. This wire is ordinarily furnished in rolls and is straightened before being used. This is accomplished by clamping or otherwise fastening one end of the wire solidly and pulling on the other end just hard enough to stretch the wire slightly. All wires are run as directly as possible, consistent with good spacing and neat appearance, and all bends are made at right angles. When a wire is attached to a binding post, a loop or eye is formed on the end of the wire and the wire at the eye flattened. This gives more contact surface. Special lugs are sometimes soldered to the ends of the wires before the connections are made.

A small hole is drilled through the baseboard near each of the tube socket terminals marked F (See Fig. 1). A short piece of wire is fastened to the right socket terminal marked F and is then led through the small hole in the baseboard to the underside of the baseboard. The same wire is led to the under side of the binding-post marked F, and fastened between the machine screw head and washer underneath the baseboard. All wires which are run on the underside of the baseboard or are hidden by parts of the apparatus are shown by dotted lines. A wire is soldered (at X) to the wire leading from the right socket terminal marked F just above the baseboard and led to the secondary terminal, S, of the transformer, T, and soldered or otherwise fastened thereto. This wire is shown as part solid and part dotted. Another wire is soldered to a primary terminal, P, of the transformer and led to the "input" binding post No. 9. "Humps are bends are shown in this and other wires to indicate that the wires cross but do not touch.

A wire is soldered to the other primary terminal P" of the transformer T and goes from there to the other "input" binding post, No. 10. A similar wire reaches from the other secondary terminal S" of the transformer to the electron tube socket terminal marked G. The secondary transformer terminal which connects to the terminal G of the electron tube socket is that terminal which is internally connected to the outside end of the secondary coil of the transformer. This is sometimes determined by inspection. In other cases it is necessary to try out the completed amplifier unit as described under "Operation." If good results are not obtained, the wire leading from G to S" is removed from S" and connected to S', and the wire leading from X to S' is removed from S' and connected to S".

A wire connects the binding post B plus and the "output" binding post No. 11, on the underside of the baseboard. The remainder of the wiring is left until the upright panel is assembled and fastened to the baseboard.

Upright panel (A, Fig. 1)—The filament rheostat R is mounted on the upright panel A so that the two terminals will be in a convenient position for wiring. Two binding posts of the set-screw type, L and M (Figs. 1 and 3), are inserted in their proper holes, and the upright panel mounted in position by bolting it to the two brass angle pieces (Z and Z') shown in Fig. 1. One of the telephone receiver binding posts L serves as a bolt. Two small holes are drilled through the baseboard near the two terminals of the filament rheostat R. A wire is run from the "output" binding post No. 11 (Fig. 1) along the upper side of the baseboard to the back of the telephone receiver binding post marked L. A wire is fastened to the other "output" binding post (No. 12) and led to the rear of the upper telephone receiver binding post M. A wire is fastened to the vacuum tube socket terminal P and led to some convenient point X' on the wire leading from binding post No. 12 to M. The two wires are soldered together at this point.

A wire is run from one of the filament rheostat binding posts through the hole in the baseboard and thence along the under side of the baseboard to the binding post marked F plus and is continued from F plus, still underneath the baseboard, to the binding post marked B minus. This wire is shown in Fig. 1 by a dotted line, connected to the left binding post marked F. This completes the assembling and wiring of the audio-frequency amplifier unit.

Connections.

If the two-circuit tuner and the electron tube detector are used with the audio-frequency amplifier unit, shown in Fig. 3. Two amplifier the several parts are arranged as units are shown making a two-stage amplifier. If only one unit is used the connections are correspondingly simple. If a "hard" or amplifier tube is used in the electron tube detector unit, the connection V from the "B" battery is not used, but instead the wire V is connected to the binding post B plus on amplifier No. 1. Increasing the number of "B" batteries used to supply voltage to the plates of the amplifier tubes will usually increase the intensity or loudness of the amplified radio signals, but at the same time the quality of the tone will be impaired.

The voltage should never be increased to as much as twice the rates plate voltage of the vacuum tube.

If the single-circuit and electron tube detector are used with the audio-frequency amplifier, the arrangement of the parts is also similar to that shown in Fig. 3 except that the single-circuit tuner replaces the two-circuit receiving set. The binding posts, 5 and 6, on the single-circuit tuner are connected to the electron tube detector binding posts Nos. 1 and 2 respectively.

If the electron tube detector is not available, one method of connection is to use the audio-frequency amplifier with the single-circuit or the two-circuit radio receiving set shown in Bureau of Standards Circular No. 133. In this case the telephone receiver binding posts are connected directly to the amplifier "input" binding posts 9 and 10. The connections to the "A" and "B" batteries are the same as shown in Fig. 3 except that the wiring to the electron tube detector is omitted. Great care is taken to see that the "B" or plate battery is not connected to the binding posts marked F plus and F minus. This battery was too high a voltage for the electron tube filament and will burn it out.

The antenna and ground wires are connected as described in Bureau of Standards Circular No. 120 and as shown in Fig. 3.

HOW TO MAKE AND OPERATE A TWO-STAGE RADIO AMPLIFIER

in the socket of the electron tube detector unit. The three filament rheostat knobs are then turned to the right until the filaments of the electron tubes become lighted, the brilliancy depending upon the type of electron tubes used. When one of the telephone receiver terminals is removed from its binding post (either L or M) and again touched to the post, a sharp "click" in the telephone receivers will be an approximate indication that the circuit is in working condition.

When two audio-frequency amplifier units are used a continuous "howl" is sometimes produced in the telephone receivers. In this case the wires leading to the "input" binding posts of one or both of the amplifier units are reversed, that is, binding post 3 is connected to binding post 10, and 4 to 9, and binding post 11 of amplifier No. 1 to binding post 10 of amplifier No. 2 and also 12 to 9.

In case the apparatus fails to operate the trouble may be attributed to a variety of causes. An inspection is first made of the various parts of the receiving equipment to determine if they are properly connected, special care being taken to see that the positive (plus) and negative (minus) terminals of the "A" battery are connected respectively to the binding posts marked F plus and F minus, and that the positive (plus, red) and negative (minus, black) terminals of the "B" battery are connected respectively to the binding posts marked B plus and B minus.

To determine if the various parts of the tuning circuit are in working condition the telephone receivers are removed from the "phone" binding posts on the amplifier unit and connected to the "phone" binding posts on the crystal detector receiving set. Binding posts "U" are to be used only when the crystal detector is used without the amplifiers, and for testing to see if the tuner is working. The wires connecting to binding posts 5 and 6 (Fig. 3) are temporarily removed and the fine coiled wire brought in contact with the crystal. The receiving set is then adjusted as described in Bureau of Standards Circular No. 120 or 121. This furnishes a means of ascertaining if the tuner is in working condition and also the crystal detector, although the latter is, of course, not used when the vacuum tube detector and amplifier units unless the electron tube detector unit is omitted.

The wires are now reconnected to the binding posts 5 and 6 and the marked J (Fig. 3) on the two audio-frequency amplifier units, and also the filament rheostat knob on the electron tube detector unit, are turned to the extreme left or to the "off" position. Two electron tubes marked E ("hard" or amplifier tubes) are inserted in the sockets of the amplifier units (Nos. 1 and 2) and a third electron tube (preferably a "soft" or gas tube) is inserted telephone receivers are connected to the "phone" binding posts on the vacuum tube detector unit. One of the wires which is connected to one of the "output" binding posts of the electron tube detector unit is temporarily removed and tests made to determine if the electron tube detector is in working condition.

The telephone receivers are next connected to the "phone" binding posts on amplifier No. 1, the wire reconnected to the "output" binding post of the electron tube detector unit, and one of the wires disconnected from one of the "output" binding posts (11 or 12) of amplifier No. 1. Tests are then made to determine if amplifier No. 1 is in working condition. While this test is being made, disconnect one of the wires running from the "output" binding posts of amplifier No. 1 to amplifier No. 2.

The telephone receivers are then removed from amplifier No. 1 and attached to amplifier No. 2. The wire is reconnected to the "output" binding post of amplifier No. 1. The connections are now as shown in Fig. 3.

Radio Questions Answered

All queries must be accompanied by the name and address of the sender.

(All queries must be accompanied by the name and address of the sender.)

Q. How many miles is a loose-coupler supposed to reach? (M. W.)

Ans. The range of a loose-coupler is dependent upon its efficiency and the detector used in conjunction with it.

Q. What would be the objection to using two small direct-current generators in place of "A" and "B" batteries in a vacuum tube receiving set? (J. F. C.)

Ans. There would be several objections. First and foremost, there would be a commutator hum. Second, the cost, in comparison with that of batteries (dry or storage), would be very high, and the efficiency of the set would not be improved.

Q. How is the radio ground formed on an airplane? How could a ground be formed on a moving auto? What form of aerial could be most conveniently used on an auto? (M. L.)

Ans.—The framework and metal part of aircraft is used as the "ground," while a trailing wire serves as the antenna. The frame of an automobile may be used as a "ground." We suggest two stages of radio-frequency and two stages of audio-frequency in connection with a loop antenna for use as a portable set to be mounted in an auto.

Q. Where are stations W O C and W L W located, and who owns them? (A. L. B.)

Ans. W O C—Palmer School of Chiropractic, Davenport, Ia. W L W—Crossley Manufacturing Co., Cincinnati, Ohio.

NEW GARDNER CAR HAS MANY IMPROVEMENTS

St. Louis-Made Product Powered by Special Built 5-Bearing 4-Cylinder Motor.

The new 1923 Gardner cars, powered by a greatly improved motor in four body styles, touring, roadster, coupe and sedan, are now being exhibited for the first time in the showrooms of the Mound City Auto Co., distributors for Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois.

The new models which were the first to be turned out by the Gardner Motor Co., Inc., of St. Louis, contain many improvements in chassis construction in addition to the new motor.

The new motor, built exclusively for the Gardner factory, is larger throughout and affords increased power and speed. It is four-cylinder L-head type, with a 3-11 10-inch bore and a five-inch stroke and develops 45 horsepower with a maximum speed of 60 miles per hour.

The new motor has a five-bearing oil-floating crank shaft with individual oil feed to each bearing; all bearings bronze back babitt lined; 2½ inches in diameter; having a total bearing surface of 65 square inches.

Other improvements are specially light-weight pistons with split skirt, larger (12-inch) direct action connecting rods which reduce side thrust, thereby contributing materially to the elimination of vibration. Force feed lubrication through gear driven oil pump; improved timing gear construction; crankshaft gear Bakelite; camshaft gear cast; generator gear steel; which insures quietness of operation; improved specially designed triple hot spot on intake manifold.

Improved carburetor.

Larger clutch (10") Borg Beck, operated with 25 lb. pressure as against 45 lb. pressure on 1922 model.

Emergency brake on transmission; spoon type emergency brake lever release.

Larger and improved service brake.

The entire braking surface of the 1923 model car will be 200 sq. inches.

Heavier rear axle.

Improved front cross member construction, making timing gears and front of motor, readily accessible.

Heavier chassis frame throughout.

Improved antirattle hood catches.

COUPE DE LUXE BODY CO. OBTAINS NEW QUARTERS

The Coupe De Luxe Body Co., manufacturers of the De Luxe four-passenger coupe body for Ford cars, have moved their main sales and showrooms from 3040 Locust street to the large two-story building at 3147 Locust.

The company's new quarters, which is one door east of Compton avenue, was recently remodeled. The building formerly housed the Harry Newman, Inc., and the Auto Buffet.

According to J. F. G. Smith, sales manager for the company, the recent reduction in price of the De Luxe coupe body, which resulted in a large increase in sales, forced the company to obtain larger quarters.

Smith also announced that production at the company's two factories, 1310 South Thirteenth street and 1125 North Broadway, has been increased over 25 per cent.

TEMPTING TRAFFIC INFRACTIONS IS UNFAIR

"It is wrong for local Constables not in uniform to drive about the highways provoking transient motorists into infractions of minor local ordinances so they can collect fines. It is wrong to set speed traps or otherwise tempt the unwary into violations.

"The foremost duty of officers should be the prevention of and not the punishment for infractions. Communities sponsoring or tolerating such methods do so to their own detriment."—"Topics of the Day" Films.

DORRIS ANNOUNCES NEW FOUR-PASSENGER MODEL

The Dorris Motor Car Co., St. Louis, Mo., announces a new 1923 four-passenger Pasadena model.

The Pasadena, which is a 6-80 model, is built on the standard Dorris chassis of 132-inch wheelbase, with the Dorris six-cylinder valve-in-head engine, unit power plant, multiple disc clutch and is Distillator equipped.

The body of the Pasadena is of the sport type, with a high cowl, and is somewhat longer than that of the Dorris four-passenger tourist. A trunk is mounted on an aluminum trunk rack attached to the frame at the rear of the car, together with a special tire carrier designed to carry two tires.

Stock colors for the new model are Holland blue, maroon and gunmetal gray medium. A three-quarter-inch body molding extends over the hood to the radiator shell. Hand-buffed leather is used in the upholstery. It is equipped with a top made of unlined Burbank material, the bows of which are in natural wood and finished with nickel-plated fittings.

The appointments and accessories on the Pasadena are of the very latest. A ventilator placed in the cowl is easily controlled from the dash. The instrument board is of genuine black walnut. The windshield is designed with polished nickel-plated bronze stanchions, and is rust-proof.

Artillery wheels are painted to match the body, and are equipped with the standard size, 33x5 cord tires. The appearance of this model is made more attractive by two special large 12-inch nickel-barrel headlights, a nickel-plated radiator shell and a nickel-plated spring bumper.

MOON MOTOR TO HOLD SALES CONVENTION

Between 75 and 100 Moon distributers will gather in St. Louis for a two-day sales convention, starting tomorrow. Every section of the country will be represented and a large crowd is looked for.

This year has been the most successful in the history of the Moon Motor Car Co. Sales are better than 100 per cent greater than any previous year, and the purpose of the convention is to outline in detail sales and advertising plans for 1923.

Stewart McDonald, president of the company, states that the company plans to build 15,000 cars next year, and, from all appearances, the distributer's organization will experience no trouble in marketing this number.

Elaborate plans have been made by Moon officials to entertain the visitors. The program includes an automobile tour of the city, sales meetings at both the factory and Hotel Statler, where headquarters will be maintained, a dinner at the Riverview Country Club and the Moon banquet, which will be held Tuesday night at the Missouri Athletic Association, will bring the convention to a close.

The Moon Motor Car Co. is one of the St. Louis industrial concerns that has made very rapid progress during the past few years. The company started the building of motor cars way back in 1907.

DURANT'S PRODUCTION HAS REACHED 40,100

According to information received by H. W. Spalding, president of the Spalding Motor Co., Durant and Star car distributers, the various divisional companies of the Durant Motors, Inc., have built and marketed 40,100 cars from Oct. 1, 1921, to Oct. 1, 1922.

The wholesale value of this product was $36,500,000. For the last six months production has averaged 5000 cars a month, exclusive of Star cars, which are now being manufactured in four Durant plants.

These factories are now operating: Durant Motor Co. of New York, at Long Island City, in production since October, 1921; Durant Motor Co. of Michigan, at Lansing, Mich., in production since January, 1922; Durant Motor Co. of Indiana, at Muncie, Ind., in production since February, 1922; Durant Motors of Canada, Ltd., at Leaside, Ontario, in production since March, 1922; Durant Motor Co. of California, at Oakland, Cal., in production since August, 1922.

The plant of the Durant Motor Co. of New Jersey, at Elizabeth, N. J., will be in production within 30 days.

The plant of the Flint Motor Co., at Flint, Mich., now under construction, will be completed ready for operations by March 1, 1923, with half a million square feet of floor space.

PEERLESS MAKES NEW RECORDS IN OCTOBER

All previous records for high production, sales and cash receipts of the Peerless Motor Car Co. during its 21 years of existence, were shattered during October, according to a statement of the month's business issued by R. H. Collins, president and general manager of the company. One thousand cars were produced and shipped from October 1 to 31, inclusive. During October the production department operated at its maximum from the beginning to the end of the month. The number of cars shipped was more than five times as great as the volume during October of last year and more than 36 per cent greater than that of last May, when the present management broke all previous records and set up new production figures.

Intestinal Antiseptic.

"I have used Adlerika (intestinal antiseptic) and find it wonderful for the stomach. It once stopped me from undergoing an operation for appendicitis—I was out West at the time. I do not want to be without Adlerika." (Signed) Mrs. Anita Diaz.

Intestinal Antiseptic

There is now offered to the public a preparation having the DOUBLE action of an intestinal antiseptic and a COMPLETE system cleanser. This preparation, known as Adlerika, acts as follows:

It tends to eliminate or destroy harmful germs and colon bacili in the intestinal canal, thus guarding against appendicitis and other diseases having their start here.

It is the most complete system cleanser ever offered to the public, acting on BOTH upper and lower bowels and removing foul matter which poisoned the system for months and which nothing else can dislodge. It brings out all gases, thus immediately relieving pressure on the heart. It is astonishing the great amount of poisonous matter Adlerika draws from the alimentary canal—matter you never thought was in your system. Try it right after a natural movement and notice how much more foul matter it brings out which was poisoning you. In slight [illegible] such as occasional [illegible] stomach, gas on the [illegible] headache, one spoonful Adlerika AL-WAYS brings relief. A longer treatment, however, is necessary in cases of obstinate constipation and long standing stomach trouble, preferably under direction of your physician.

Reports From Physicians

"I congratulate you on the good effect I had from Adlerika since I prescribed it." (Signed) Dr. L. [illegible]

"I have found nothing in my [illegible] practice to excel Adlerika." [illegible] Dr. James Weaver.

"I use Adlerika in all bowel [illegible] Some require only one dose." [illegible] Dr. F. M. Prettyman.

"After taking Adlerika feel better than for 20 years. Haven't [illegible] to express the AWFUL [illegible] eliminated from my system." [illegible] J. E. Puckett.

Adlerika is a constant surprise to people who have used only ordinary bowel and stomach medicine, on account of its rapid, pleasant and COMPLETE action. It is sold by leading druggists everywhere.

Sold in St. Louis by Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., 7th and Washington, and other leading druggists.

DODGE BROTHERS MOTOR CAR

The evenness of performance so often remarked in Dodge Brothers Motor Cars is due, in no small part, to the thoroughness with which each unit is inspected during the process of manufacture and assembly.

A trained staff of 800 experts is employed in this work alone, and approximately 5285 individual inspections are made on each car.

So exacting and rigid are the standards applied to these inspections that the slightest variation either in workmanship or material is instantly discovered and rejected.

Dodge Brothers are almost over-scrupulous in their constant aim to make each car as sound and perfect as is humanly possible.

JEWETT CLIMBS ALTON HILLS IN HIGH GEAR

Hill climbing and slow speed tests of the Jewett car, similar to those recently held in St. Louis and adjacent territory were successfully held last Sunday afternoon during a steady rain in Alton, Ill., by the Newell Motor Car Co., Paige and Jewett distributers, and several of their St. Louis dealers.

The demonstration consisted of climbing Third, State, Monument and Summit street hills in high gear from a standing start, and a slow speed test in high gear.

Six Jewett stock cars driven by W. T. Sapp, L. E. Newell and Sam Hall of the Newell Motor Car Co.; I. Bromschwig, Brownie Motor Car Co.; Harry Andrea, Mill Motors Co., and Joe Fuerst, Fuerst-Walsh Motor Car Co., competed in the tests.

W. T. Sapp of the Newell Motor Car Co. won four of the five tests, while I. Bromschwig of the Brownie Motor Car Co., who won the other test, ranked second, and Harry Andrea of the Mill Motors Co., ran third.

The tests, winners, time required and speed obtained follows:

Climbing Third street hill from standing start in high gear, won by Sapp; time required, 25 seconds; speed at top, 34 miles per hour.

Climbing Summit street hill in high gear from standing start, won by Bromschwig; time required, 29.8 seconds; speed at top, 21 miles per hour.

Climbing State street hill from standing start in high gear, won by Sapp; time required, 47.2 seconds; speed at top, 48 miles per hour.

Climbing Monument street hill from standing start in high gear, won by Sapp; time required, 27.6 seconds; speed at top, 27 miles per hour.

Throttling down in high gear for 200 feet, most time required to cover distance, won by Sapp; time, 53.6 seconds.

M. J. Murphy of the Automobile Club of Missouri, H. C. Wilhite of the Alton Automobile Club and automobile representatives of the various St. Louis newspapers acted as timers, referees and scorers.

The various contestants, timers, referees, scorers and employes of the Newell Motor Car Co. and their wives, numbering 67 persons, made up a caravan of 18 Paige and Jewett cars which left the Newell Motor Car Co. salesrooms Sunday morning and motored to Alton for the tests.

The entire party prior to the demonstrations were guests of James E. Newell to a dinner at the Mineral Springs Hotel.

FRAMPTON TALKS ON AUTO SELLING METHODS

R. C. Frampton, president of the Hudson-Frampton Motor Car Co., Hudson and Essex distributor, told the members of the Sales Managers' Bureau of the Chamber of Commerce the inside workings of the automobile business at the meeting of that organization at the Chamber of Commerce lunchrooms Monday at noon.

P. H. Brockman, who is a director of the Sales Managers' Bureau, presided at the meeting and introduced Frampton. Frampton's talk went into the details of the method of employing salesmen in the automobile business and the somewhat peculiar methods employed in securing prospects for new automobiles. His talk indicated that merchandising methods in the automobile business were radically different from those in other lines of business, since the salesman has no regular customers, but must find them by whatever means he can. Frampton told of the close margins earned by distributors of automobiles and indicated that the average was about 4 per cent net profit to the distributor after his overhead and commissions had been paid.

Frampton also told of the serious plan which the automobile dealer found in handling used cars. He said that it had come to the point that more than 80 per cent of all sales of new cars included a trade-in of a used car. This put upon the dealer the necessity for making two sales on every transaction, and at times the losses on used cars are considerable particularly immediately after the reduction had been made in the price of new cars, which at once depreciated the resale value of used cars.

MOTORISTS WARNED NOT TO USE GREEN LIGHTS

A notice was sent out last week by Robert E. Lee, secretary of the St. Louis Automobile Dealers' Association, to all members of that association to the effect that the city authorities have advised that green or any other off-colored lights on automobiles are a violation of both State and city laws. "Automobiles are not sea-going vessels," Capt. Lee says.

The law permits only so-called white lights showing to the front and a red light to the rear. Vigorous enforcement of this law is to be made at once. The reason for this is: The Fire Department is using green for rear lights, and it is desired that they be distinctive.

HARRY MOOCK PROMOTED BY HUDSON MOTOR CO.

Harry Moock has been promoted to sales manager of the Hudson Motor Car Co., taking the position left vacant by H. B. Phipps, who has resumed charge of the foreign fields in which he created a remarkable record before the war. J. S. Draper has been made assistant sales manager. He formerly was district manager in the Middle East. Moock joined the Hudson company about a year ago, entering this organization after resigning the general managership of the National Automobile Dealers' Association, where his energy and acquaintance among the dealers created a nation-wide reputation for him.

Give Your Business Getters a Better Business Car

Business use is hard on cars. There is no economy in one too cheap. The small saving in first cost is quickly sunk in repairs and wasted time.

Pay a little more for real economy. And give your salesmen a car they can count on like a train. The Essex Cabriolet gives all weather utility. Its chassis costs more to build than any like-priced car in the world. Motors, axles, frame and transmission are built for steadfast, constant service under all conditions. Essex cars serving upwards of 60,000 and 70,000 miles are still smooth, reliable and economical. You can't get records like that except from a real car. And it's worth the little more you pay.

The Cabriolet is solid, quiet, durable. Your men will like it. They will appreciate greater riding ease, simple handling, greater radius of travel, and above all its positive reliability.

And it is more economical in every detail even than light cars whose only appeal is economy.

AUTOCAR ERECTING NEW BUILDING ON LOCUST ST.

The Autocar Sales and Service Co. of Missouri celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of the parent organization, the Autocar Co., Ardmore, Pa., on Oct. 21, by breaking ground for their new building in St. Louis.

This building, which is located on the southeast corner of Locust and Leffingwell, fronting 155 feet on Locust street, will cover approximately 21,000 square feet of ground area on one floor.

The building will be of brick construction with a coping of Indiana limestone.

The salesroom will be located on the corner, and adjacent to it on Locust street will be the accounting department, while at the east end of the front of the building will be found the parts department. The entrance will be about the center of the building on Locust street, and the entire Locust street front will be of plate glass.

The shop, which will be separated from the offices and salesroom by a hollow tile wall, is covered by a trussed roof, supported by four columns—the only obstructions in the entire shop floor area of 108x155 feet.

Two entrances are provided for trucks on Leffingwell avenue. A separate room will be built in a portion of the shop, equipped with all modern cleaning devices, where a chassis may have all the road oil and dirt entirely removed from it before reaching the overhauling department.

This building, which is one of 39 factory branches owned or leased by the Autocar Co. in the principal cities of the United States, will be devoted exclusively to the sale and service of Autocar motor trucks.

The plant and ground, which represents an investment of approximately $150,000, testifies to the Autocar Co.'s faith in St. Louis and its future possibilities.

It is the hope of the contractors to have this building ready for occupancy about Feb. 1. The company's present quarters are directly across the street from their new home.

J. H. Mack, manager of the local branch, arranged for the purchase of the ground and construction of the new building.

STUDEBAKER TO BUILD 110,000 CARS IN 1922

The Studebaker report for the quarter tells of capacity operations and the sales demand ahead of production. There were 29,924 Studebakers produced and 30,199 sold. Production schedules for the fourth quarter call for 20,000 cars, which will make 110,000 for the year, as against 66,000 in 1921.

The Packard Single-Six represents a revolutionary value among fine cars—such value as would be expected, first of all, from Packard.

The CHALMERS SIX

Studebaker

No motor car is more satisfactory!

Made of the best materials the market affords under most precise standards of workmanship, the Studebaker Big-Six Touring Car is the outstanding value among fine cars.

It is a roomy, seven-passenger car but is not bulky. And it does not carry an ounce of excess weight.

The 60-horsepower motor provides speed, stamina, flexibility and power in abundance.

Comfort is insured by correct design, long semi-elliptic springs, restful nine-inch seat cushions and shock absorbers.

The body lines are distinctive and the equipment includes many motoring refinements, such as the one-piece windshield, tool pocket in left front door and the courtesy light on the driver's side which illuminates the roadway in passing cars at night.

At $1785, it represents a large saving over cars that do not even approach it in intrinsic value. And it is economical to drive and possesses high resale value.

The body, like the chassis, is built in Studebaker plants under conditions that are unexcelled in the industry. The savings resulting are passed along to you in the form of higher quality and lower price.

The Big-Six is a wonderful motor car! It well sustains the 70-year Studebaker reputation for business integrity and honest value.

QUALITY GOES CLEAR THROUGH

DORT SIX

Recently Dort introduced to the motoring public a SIX with new beautiful body lines and a new powerful motor that cut straight through accepted values and set up a new standard for six-cylinder cars. On the same day Dort reduced prices substantially on all four-cylinder cars and announced important changes in design. The result has been startling. The attention of the whole motoring world has been focused on Dort. Everywhere crowds have flocked to Dort show rooms. Dort sales have been exceptionally large. Public opinion has pronounced the Dort the great motor car value of the day.

In St. Louis
It's the Dorris Truck

There are more Dorris Trucks operating in St. Louis than any other make except the Ford. Next in point of numbers is another light, low priced truck.

Here are the figures: Ford, 5,236—Dorris, 278—the other light truck, 258.

All this is shown in a recent Truck Census published in "America at Work" and proves the high regard in which The Dorris is held by users of the higher grades of trucks.

Reliable performance under all conditions—a certain freedom from minor troubles—a durability that spells economy—these and the Factory Service available to owners in this vicinity, appeal strongly to the thoughtful St. Louis business man.

DUESENBERG APPOINTS ST. LOUIS DISTRIBUTOR

The Duesenberg Automobile & Motors Co., Inc., Indianapolis, manufacturers of the Duesenberg straight eight, announced the appointment of the Duesenberg Missouri Motors, Inc., as distributors for St. Louis and adjacent territory.

The new organization, of which Arthur Walsh is general manager, has opened headquarters at 3918 Olive street where the four-passenger sport model is now on display. The new model was driven from the factory to St. Louis last week by Walsh.

The Duesenberg engine has the eight cylinders in a row with a 2⅞-inch bore and a 5-inch stroke, and a displaceemnt of 260 cubic inches. It weighs 800 pounds and develops 114 horsepower.

One of the features of the car is the four-wheel hydraulic brake system.

Displacing entirely all of the rods, levers, joints and inevitable noise of mechanically operated brakes are four ⅜-inch metal tubes, leading to the four wheels. There are only two flexible joints, limited to motion, and protected high in the chassis. Pressure upon the brake pedal, in the usual manner, depresses a small piston in a chamber under the floorboard. Oil pressure, that may be increased up to 500 pounds, operates the simple mechanism within the brake drums which applies the brake shoes. At 30 miles an hour, a standstill in one car length is possible, without sliding tires; at 50 miles in only about six car lengths; and correspondingly at greater speeds. It is manifest that other conditions being equal, four-wheel brakes require the application of only one-half the braking effort needed for two-wheel brakes.

The complete line, which consists of three open and the same number of closed models, range in price from $6500 up.

MERITS MAIN FACTOR IN SALE OF AUTOS

"Sales are depending less and less upon the salesman and more and more upon merits of the product to be sold," asserted John D. Mansfield, general sales manager of the Dort Motor Car Co., who was in St. Louis Friday attending the exhibition of the new Dort six-cylinder cars at the salesrooms of the Wilson Motor Car Co., local Dort distributers.

"This is especially true in the automobile business, for the public has become automobile wise and justly discriminating. Prospective buyers today want to spend less time hearing about a car and more time studying the car itself.

"The manufacturer who has complete confidence in his product does not fear this close inspection by the public. He welcomes it—for under such scrutiny the worthy product wins its reward and that which is unworthy is condemned.

"Manufacturers who think in terms of many years and not in terms of one are pleased that the American public has learned to buy only after minute and intelligent inspection of the product and is relying less and less on the say-so of somebody interested in a sale."

Mansfield, who was guest at a banquet given to Dort dealers by the Wilson Motor Car Co., at the Bevo Mill, Friday noon, outlined to the dealers the various parts of the new Dort six.

BUICK BUILT 17,666 CARS IN OCTOBER

The Buick Motor Co. built during the month of October a total of 17,666 automobiles. In achieving this result, the Buick daily shipment figures of all time were several times broken. On Oct. 12, 775 cars were shipped, 910 went on Oct. 25, 973 on Oct. 26 and 1029 on Oct. 30. All the foregoing records apply to the combined business of the Flint and Detroit plants.

While surpassing the production record of September which was 16,842, a record month up to that time, the figure just achieved is best appreciable by comparison with the Octoer records of previous years. In October, 1920 it was 13,121 and in October, 1921, it was 9113.

OLDSMOBILE SETS NEW PRODUCTION RECORD

As the result of a price reduction late in September all post war production records of the Olds Motor Works of Lansing, Mich., were broken during October, according to an announcement last week by Guy Peasley, general sales manager, in a telegram to Phil H. Brockman of the De Luxe Auto Co., Oldsmobile distributer.

Not only did the company break post war records and those of the boom period of 1920, but October was also the biggest month the company has had in its 25 years of experience, with the single exception of one month in 1918, during the height of the war boom.

APPERSON TO EXHIBIT NEW MODEL AT SHOW

Manufacture of a smaller car as an addition to their line of quality automobiles is planned by Apperson Brothers Automobile Co., according to the announcement made last week by N. H. Van Sicklen, vice president and general manager. Word comes from the factory at Kokomo, Ind., that the new product has been under development for a long period and the first model should be ready for exhibition at the national automobile show at the Coliseum at Chicago in January.

OVERLAND CLOSED CARS NOW 40 PCT. OF TOTAL

Forty per cent of the present total production of the Willys-Overland company in closed-car types, according to F. T. Windle of the Willys-Overland, Inc., factory branch, who has just received from the factory a shipment of a complete line of the new closed cars manufactured at the company's Toledo plant.

TEMTOR CO. PROPERTY SALE WEEK'S FEATURE

Group of Buildings of Defunct Organization in Granite City Brought $1,000,000.

BERRY MOORE.

The sale for $1,000,000 of the group of buildings of the defunct Temtor Corn and Fruit Products Co., in Granite City, to the Union Starch & Refining Co., of Edinburg, Ind., through the Mercantile Trust Co., was the transcendent feature of the week in realty circles, as was forecast in the Post-Dispatch. The concern manufactures glucose.

The Union company now has a factory at Edinburg which will be transferred forthwith to the Granite City plant, embracing 32 acres. The company, which has a working capital of $1,000,000, exclusive of its physical properties, will be a notable and important addition to the St. Louis industrial district, which virtually embraces the East Side cities, including Granite City and East St. Louis.

The Mercantile served as trustee for the holders under $1,500,000 first mortgage bond underwritten by it and several other banks, including the Lafayette-South Side Bank, but otherwise had no connection or interest in the Temtor company. When the Temtor company defaulted in the payment of the interest on these bonds through adverse business conditions the Mercantile Trust Co. redeemed all of these bonds bought by its clients, or gave them other securities. The bonds were also secured in addition by a note for $1,000,000 on the plant of the Best-Clymer Co. in South St. Louis, which was recently purchased for $514,000 by a company composed of the preferred stockholders of the Best-Clymer company, which is in a flourishing condition, according to the stockholders.

The $1,500,000 in bonds also are secured by a first lien on an extensive plant at Penn Yan, New York, which is now being offered for sale by the Mercantile Trust Co. as trustee for the bondholders, as it was also owned by the Temtor company before it was taken over by the Mercantile under foreclosure proceedings, under the provision of the first-mortgage bonds. The transaction is being wound up without loss under the first-mortgage bonds, the security being more than ample for the loan, it is declared.

Another notable purchase was that by the Oreon E. & R. G. Scott company of the southeast corner of Twelfth and Market streets, comprising three-quarters of a block, owned by the Christian Peper estate, for $175,000. The purchase was made under the provisions of a trustee's deed, at the east front door of the courthouse. Scott has no plans for the improvement of the site, which is one of the best corners in the city for a hotel or other building requiring prominence of location.

FLOOR SPACE IN DEMAND AT BETTER HOMES EXPOSITION

Ready Response That Is Being Received Is Gratifying, Declares Orman J. McCawley, President of Real Estate Exchange.

The Better Homes and Building Exposition, to be held at the Coliseum Nov. 20 to 25, under auspices of the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange, will do more to encourage building and a revival of the demand for home owning than any concerted effort ever put forth in this direction in St. Louis. This is the opinion of real estate dealers and others interested in the exposition. The ready response on every side and progress already are gratifying, according to Orman J. McCawley, president, and W. W. Kay, secretary, of the Real Estate Exchange.

Demands for floor space at the Exposition are being received daily at the Exposition headquarters, 218 Title Guaranty Building, indicating a wide interest on the part of exhibitors. From the character of exhibits arranged for and applications on file, it is known that the show will be a complete home exhibition, including everything that can be thought of by merchant, manufacturer, contractor, realty men and others on home building, owning and keeping, from the lot to the tip of the roof, with even the radio outfit above the roof.

Information booths will be maintained at the Exposition to explain the processes by which homes can be planned, built or bought, and to answer questions of visitors. Contracts will be closed "on the spot" and even ground will be sold on which to erect houses. It is expected that thousands of dollars in contracts will be executed at the Exposition, including sales of lots and homes, building contracts, and orders for materials.

Committees that are working for the success of the exposition under the leadership of Orman J. McCawley, general chairman, are: Honorary Past Presidents Real Estate Exchange C. A. Bokern, J. H. In order to accommodate its steady growth the Gustav J. Gruendler Manufacturing Co., manufacturers of the Gruendler patented system of refrigeration, has acquired a 10-year lease through the Giraldin Real Estate Company on the four-story building at 814-816 North Broadway for office and display room purposes.

Three years ago the company was doing little more than a local business. Today, fixtures built under the direct supervision of Gustav J. Gruendler, inventor and first manufacturer of the freezer system of cracked ice and salt, are being shipped to all parts of the country.

PARKWOOD

RESTRICTED! RESTRICTED!!

South St. Louis' Newest and Most Beautiful Subdivision

Loughborough and Morganford Road

YOU CAN'T BEAT the PRICE—LOCATION—ENVIRONMENT

The law of "supply and demand" governs the price of all commodities—including real estate. Our City is 20,000 homes short, and also there are comparatively few desirable lots available.

The far-sighted person will invest his money in well selected lots—that are being improved with high-class improvements, and reap the handsome profit that is sure to come with the Spring building boom.

PARKWOOD'S IMPROVEMENTS—

Include sidewalks, alleys, macadamized streets, city sewers, city water, etc. And the property is graded to city grade.

PARKWOOD'S PRICES—

Are low! This property is selling at prices never before offered investors in this high-class residence section—KING'S HIGHWAY SOUTHWEST, LOUGHBOROUGH AV. and MORGANFORD ROAD.

PARKWOOD'S CONVENIENT LOCATION—

Only two blocks to the Gardenville Public School; Catholic school, three blocks. Both Catholic and Protestant churches within three blocks. Also good retail stores, and a magnificent vaudeville and picture theater.

PARKWOOD'S LOCATION—

Is the most desirable in South Saint Louis, as evidenced by the erection of more than 600 modern residences and bungalows in this immediate vicinity within the past year.

TRANSPORTATION FACILITIES—

Two direct street car service only two blocks from PARKWOOD—and it is only 28 minutes to the heart of the shopping district—by one fare. Also reached by five of St. Louis' most prominent automobile thoroughfares: King's highway south, Gravois avenue, Loughborough avenue and Morganford road.

STREET EXTENSIONS—

The City has made remarkable progress in the extension and widening of streets in this district, including King's highway southwest from Southampton through PARKWOOD to Carondelet Park; the Des Peres drive, south from King's highway southwest, and the widening of Morganford road.

THIS IS YOUR OPPORTUNITY

Discriminating people are investigating all other properties on sale in this section, then investing their money in PARKWOOD for their future home. The desirability of this property is greatly enhanced because it not only has good streets and sidewalks within its own boundaries, but is bounded on all sides by prominent automobile drives.

PARKWOOD WILL SURELY MAKE MONEY FOR YOU! Secure your homesite NOW, and invest your savings in the newest and fastest growing choice residential district on the market!

How to Get There—

On the street cars—take a Cherokee car to Loughborough Av., then walk two blocks east to PARKWOOD PLACE. By automobile—drive out King's highway or Gravois to Loughborough, then two blocks east to PARKWOOD PLACE.

MAYOR'S SON DENIES MAKING ATTEMPT TO ATTACK GIRL

Clarence Kiel Sued for $50,000 by Young Woman Who Was Employed in Restaurant.

Clarence Kiel, youngest son of Mayor Kiel, defendant in a $50,000 damage suit filed Jan. 24, last, by Miss Leona Mazza, 20 years old, of 3232 Olive street, gave a deposition yesterday at the request of Antonio Canzoneri, attorney for Miss Mazza.

In the petition it was alleged Kiel attempted to attack Miss Mazza in Tower Grove Park, in the course of what was declared to be an enforced automobile ride about 2:30 a. m. Jan. 20, last. Kiel, in his deposition, said he took the girl for a ride, after taking Miss Mazza and her uncle, Silvia Mazza, home from the latter's cafe at King's highway and Manchester road, where the girl was employed, but asserted he did not offend her.

AMNESTY PETITIONERS HALTED BY POLICE

About 200 Men and Women Then Stage Demonstration in Front of White House.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
No. 20 Wyatt Bldg.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—Petitioners for general amnesty were turned back at the White House today and refused an opportunity to present an appeal to the President personally, upon which for a time they insisted. They were informed that an application for an appointment next week would be considered, and finally decided to submit a request for a formal audience.

Under the auspices of the Joint Amnesty Committee a demonstration was staged in front of the White House at noon. Headed by a band, about 200 men and women marched up Pennsylvania avenue past the Executive Mansion, but they were halted by the police when they attempted to turn down Executive avenue, between the White House and State, War and Navy Building, which is part of the Government reservation. Lieut. P. J. Carroll of the Park police force declined to let them pass because they did not have a permit to parade on Government property.

Line Up on Sidewalk.

The marchers, carrying banners asking the release of political prisoners, then took stations along Pennsylvania avenue in front of the White House and along Executive avenue at the east side. They were permitted to stand on the sidewalk and no attempt was made to molest them.

The committee which called at the executive offices consisted of the Rev. Mercer Green Johnston of Baltimore, Mrs. Abby Scott Baker of the National Woman's Party, Mrs. William A. McGraw of Detroit, Mrs. Walter Cope, Edmund C. Evans and Franklin Edgerton of Philadelphia. They sent in word to Secretary Christian and Charles Hard, appointment clerk, met them, stating that President Harding could not see them.

"We thought he might be able to spare three minutes, as he spends so much time on the links," said Mrs. Baker.

Appointment Necessary.

Hard explained it would be necessary to ask for an appointment in advanle. The Rev. Mr. Johnston left a petition with Hard and the deputation reluctantly withdrew.

Mrs. Baker said the President recently turned down a request for an audience, but declared the election had manifested the liberal state of the public mind and indicated the general view on amnesty.

The pickets remained at the White House for an hour and withdrew to Lafayette Square, directly opposite, for an open-air amnesty meeting.

SCOTLAND YARD HEAD POISONED BY GIFT CANDY SENT BY POST

Sir William Horwood Believed to Be Improving—Detectives Search London for Perpetrator.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—All night long master detectives from Scotland Yard scoured London for the perpetrators of the outrage on their chief, Sir William Horwood, who was seriously ill today from malicious administration of poison. So far no arrests have been reported. Sir William is not yet out of danger, but hopes for his recovery are entertained because of his great vitality.

A bulletin tonight said Sir William had slept for several hours and had taken nourishment.

Scotland Yard officials announced definitely this morning that the attempt to assassinate Horwood was by means of poisoned chocolates sent through the mails. These officials said they believed this had been only one step in a conspiracy to kill many people of prominence. Accordingly the police have issued a warning to all persons of note not to eat anything sent to them by post.

Some Scotland Yard officials believe the outrage was committed by a lunatic.

PLEA FOR CHECKS AS WEDDING PRESENTS GETS FINE RESPONSE

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—Following the public announcement yesterday of the marriage of Miss Winifred Holt, and her request that her friends give her cash for wedding presents, a flood of checks came to the offices of the "Light House" of the New York Association for the Blind.

The secretary of Miss Holt, who founded the society, said each mail brought checks from friends, some coming from as far west as California. Few were for less than $10 and most were for more than $20. One of the first checks to arrive was from Mrs. Stephen D. Elkins, of Washington, for $200.

Miss Holt, who will be married Nov. 14 to Rufus Graves Mather, a graduate of Williams College, asked that her wedding presents be in the form of checks so that she soon might build in Paris a "Light House" for the blind.

BELGIAN MEDAL PRESENTED TO 5 ST. LOUISANS FOR WAR WORK

Gus A. Buder, Harold Carlisle, Dr. Alex de Menil, Fernand Lemoine and Gus V. R. Mechin Honored.

The "Medaille du Roi Albert des Belges," or "King's Medal," was bestowed on five St. Louisans last night at the Claridge Hotel in appreciation of their efforts in behalf of suffering Belgium during the war. Those decorated were Gus A. Buder, 5137 Longfellow place; Harold Carlisle, 3640 Flad avenue; Dr. Alex. N. de Menil, 4341 Page boulevard; Fernand Lemoine, 5323 Neosho street, and Gus V. R. Mechin, 5088 Raymond avenue.

The presentation was made by Marc Seguin, Belgian Consul, at a banquet of the "Societe Francaise d'Aide Mutuelle de St. Louis." The medal shows on its face King Albert in profile with the title "Albert Roi des Belges." On the back are the words, "En temoignage de reconnaissance Nationale 1914-1918." The decorations are the only ones of the kind to be bestowed on St. Louisans. Dr. de Menil, Mechin and Carlisle organized the "Belgian Relief Fund of Missouri," which was started in 1914 to help Belgium, and continued to give aid throughout the war. Buder managed the "Belgian Babies' Day Committee," which collected nearly $50,000 for Belgian children in one day in 1918. Lemoine is president of the "Belgian Benevolent Society of St. Louis," and was active in Belgian relief work.

The banquet was addressed by James E. Kinkead, State commander of the American Legion, and Jerome Duggan, former chairman of the City Executive Committee of the Legion.

COLISEUM FLOWER SHOW TERMED ONE OF FINEST PRODUCED IN U. S.

Local Exhibit Manager, of Chicago, Praises Display on Visit to Booths.

The flower show at the Coliseum, which closes tonight, is one of the finest in the finished product of the florist's artistry ever produced in the United States, in the opinion of George Asmus, Chicagoan, who manages the annual spring show of international scope in New York, and other annual flower shows throughout the East and North. Asmus, who visited the St. Louis show yesterday, explained that spring exhibitions have the advantage of those at this season in variety of flowers. "But this is something beyond mere bunches of flowers set out in vases to be looked at," he added, pointing to arrangements that made each booth a work of art and not a mere stall for the exhibition of a retailer's wares."

At the close of the show the cut flowers will be distributed among the charitable and benevolent institutions of the city.

Because of the fact that novelties were lacking which might be eligible for the Henry Shaw gold medal, that honor was not bestowed at this year's flower show. The Shaw medal is given once every five years to the grower of the best flower not yet exhibited in the United States.

GIRL, 10, LOSES $30,000 SUIT AGAINST TWO DOCTORS

She Charged They Wrongfully Diagnosed Rash as Smallpox and Exposed Her to Disease.

A jury in Circuit Judge Taylor's court yesterday decided in favor of Dr. M. C. Woodruff, chief diagnostician of the City Health Department, and Dr. Robert Amyx, 1943 North Eleventh street, in a suit against them for $30,000 damages, filed by Catherine McGuire, 10 years old, of 1470 North Union boulevard.

The suit charged the two physicians wrongfully diagnosed a rash on the girl as smallpox and caused her to be sent to Koch Hospital, where she was exposed to smallpox patients and contracted the disease.

Testimony was that Dr. Amyx had informed the Health Department the girl had smallpox and that Dr. Woodruff confirmed the diagnosis and had her sent to Koch Hospital, from which she was discharged as cured after nine days. Two weeks later she returned to the hospital, suffering with smallpox.

Counsel for the plaintiff declared the first diagnosis was wrong, claiming smallpox never recurs. The defendants denied the claim smallpox never recurs.

ALLIES FAIL TO AGREE ON PLAN TO SAVE GERMANY'S FINANCES

French Hold That Fiscal Control Should Precede Other Measures to Aid Country.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Nov. 11.—The Allied Reparation Commission returned to Paris today after two weeks of inquiry in Berlin without having reached a unanimous decision upon the best means of saving Germany from financial collapse.

The British, the Italian, and, it is believed, the Belgian delegates, are of the opinion that the report submitted in Berlin forms the soundest basis for the solution of Germany's financial difficulties.

Louis Barthou, the French representative, however, with the support of his Government, still holds to the view that a rigid control of Germany internal finances should precede any other measures for assisting that country.

KLAN VOTE WINS FOR OREGON SCHOOL BILL

Ku Klux Campaign Puts Over Measure Ousting Parochial Schools in State.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PORTLAND, Ore., Nov. 11.—With one-twentieth of the 1725 precincts in the State yet to hear from, the bill proposed to force all children under 16 years into public schools has a majority of 15,221. The vote stands 112,730 for and 98,114 against the bill. Missing precincts are small.

The measure, heralded by its proponents as the "most American proposal ever put before the electorate," and branded by its opponents as a "measure to sovietize the State," caused more bitterness in the campaign than any measure since the slavery vote taken in the '60s. The bill was sponsored and placed on the ballot by the Scottish Rite Masons and was in furtherance of a resolution passed by the Order several years ago which asked the abolition of parochial schools and the placing of all children under 16 years in the public schools.

Klan Supports Measure.

Due to the entrance of the Ku Klux Klan into Oregon State politics, the measure obtained immediate support from its members. In Oregon the klan has singled out Catholics and Jews as objects for its antagonism, since there are few negroes and the Japanese and Oriental problem is nil. The commercial boycott has also been a weapon of the klan which is organized in Portland and some of the larger towns of the State.

The measure was strongly fought by an association of nonsectarian and private schools, which, in fact, led the fight on the measure backed by the Portland Telegram, the Salem Capitol-Journal and one or two other newspapers. The Portland Oregonian and the Portland News also came out against the bill just before the election.

Due to the fact that Gov. Ben W. Olcott, asking for re-election, had been the target of the klan in the May primaries and had escaped defeat by only 521 votes, the klan swung its endorsement to Walter M. Pierce, Democrat, in October. Pierce indorsed the school bill, thus losing many thousand Democratic votes, but winning a far greater number of Republican klansmen. Pierce refused to campaign on the school bill and confined his speeches to tax reduction promises, which doubtless gave him the bulk of the farmer vote. The school bill and the religious issue of the klan was thus shot through the gubernatorial campaign and cost Olcott his place, although he is a Mason and a shrine member.

The leaders of Masonry in the State indorsed Olcott, but could not stay their membership who were klansmen and bent on putting over the school bill. The Scottish Rite Masons did not swing their full vote to the bill, since there were wide defections of Protestants and of Jews who alone can enter this branch of Masonry.

Klan Put Measure Over.

It is probably true that except for the klan the measure would have been defeated. The parochial schools in Oregon hold only 9000 Catholic, 800 Adventist, 400 Lutheran and 90 Episcopal children, with 280 in nonsectarian institutions. All are under strict State supervision in curriculum and standards. Foreign language instruction is forbidden by law. There were no abuses to point to in these schools.

Catholic population of the State runs about 70,000, out of roughly 800,000 population. Lutherans total about 25,000.

The leaders in the fight against the bill were mainly Protestants and in most cases Masons. Unitarians, Presbyterians and Methodists were the main enemies of the bill. Two hundred of the best lawyers in Oregon asserted in a signed statement that the bill is unconstitutional and the measure, which is to go into effect in September, 1926, will be carried to the United States Supreme Court for final decision.

The bitterness engendered by the fight promises to last for years. Oregon, first in the war drives and Liberty Loan campaigns and enlistments, is today a State of factions of rancorous religious discussion.

$3000 MORTGAGE ON HOME OF WORLD WAR HERO BURNED

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—While several thousand persons who packed the Palace Theater tonight looked on, Supreme Court Justice McCook burned a copy of the $3000 mortgage on the Kentucky home of Sergt. Samuel Woodfill, designated by Gen. John J. Pershing as the outstanding hero of the World War.

The mortgage had been lifted by popular subscription which totaled more than $10,000. After paying off the mortgage a $5000 insurance policy and a trust fund for the remainder of the amount were created.

POLICE SEIZE BIG RUM CACHE

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—Twelve policemen, who lay hidden with drawn revolvers behind the historic Blackwell mansion at Astoria, Long Island, for several hours today captured 11 men who drove up in motor trucks and began loading them with whisky and wine from a huge cache.

More than 1500 cases of liquor valued at $100,000 were found in the house which is only a stone's throw from the home of First Deputy Police Commissioner Leach of New York.

This photograph, taken at her apartment in New York City, shows Marion Talley, the 15-year-old daughter of a railroad telegraph operator of Kansas City, who recently had her voice judged by Otto Kahn, chairman of the Board of Directors of the Metropolitan Opera Co., and Director Giulio Gatti-Casazza, and amazed the opera conductors by her wonderful lyric soprano voice. The girl was advised by the conductors not to appear in public, but to study under a good teacher for about three years. Then she may realize her ambitions by appearing on the Metropolitan stage.

ADDRESSES MOTHERS ON INFANTS' FEEDING

Physician Urges More Attention to Diet by Them During Nursing Period.

More attention to diet by mothers during the nursing period of their infants, and providing of balanced rations for babies after the nursing period, was urged by Dr. Edward W. Saunders in a lecture on "The Practice of Infants' Feeding," Wednesday, before the Stix, Baer & Fuller Mothers' Club.

Dr. Saunders said not enough attention is given to the matter of vitamines, in considering the diet of infants. Much thought has been given to the number of calories in food, but not enough to the percentage of vitamines, he said.

"The mother's milk must furnish all the life principles as long as the infant is at the breast alone, and the mother can properly nourish the child only by wise selection of her own diet, both before and after birth of the child," he said.

Three Classes of Vitamines.

He explained that there are three classes of vitamines, all important factors in a balanced diet, which are derived as follows:

Class A—Contained in butter, yolk of eggs, cream and green vegetables.

Class B—Contained in all grain foods, such as wheat, barley, rice and oats products, in yellow cornmeal and the leguminous foods, such as peas and beans.

Class C—Contained in juice of oranges and tomatoes.

Caution in the selection of these foods was urged by the speaker, who said low grade butter and low standard milk do not contain the proper food values. Cod liver oil, he said, has been pronounced 250 times the strength of the best butter, in certain food values, and that marked development is noticeable in children given cod liver oil. He said real cod liver oil must be obtained from reputable druggists, declaring some of the so-called cod liver oil in reality is shark's liver oil, containing no vitamines.

Avoid Too Many Sweets.

Too many sweets fed to babies and children cause rickets, soft bones, soft cartilage and weak constitutions, he added.

Many of the patent baby foods on the market contain a depreciable quantity of vitamines, Dr. Saunders asserted, although they contain a sufficient number of calories.

The campaign in the city to raise milk standards has eliminated many of the ills of infants, he said. "Formerly the vast majority of infant cases brought to physicians' offices resulted from a failure in the proper preservation of milk, but since an interest has been taken in the babies of the poor, and in the standard of milk sold here, there are few such cases in the city," he said.

Dr. Hugo Ehrenfest will lecture to the club at the same place, Dec. 13, on "Care of the Expectant Mother."

DRIVER CONTINUES ON WAY AFTER AUTO INJURES MAN

Motor Cycle Rider in Serious Condition; Four Other Persons Hurt in Motor Accidents.

Fred Green, 28 years old, a laborer living at 1109 North Compton avenue, was seriously injured at 9:30 o'clock last night when the motor cycle he was riding south on South Grand boulevard, near Carondelet Park, was struck by an automobile being driven in the opposite direction. The driver of the car did not stop.

Green was picked up by a passing automobile driver and given emergency treatment by a physician. He then was sent to the city hospital. His injuries are a probable fracture of the skull, fracture of the right arm, lacerations and contusions of the face and injuries to both eyes.

Edward J. Sutterfield, 32 years old, a salesman, of 3720 North Twenty-first street, suffered internal injuries at 3:15 p. m. yesterday when struck by a truck owned by the Mullanphy Bedding Co., of 1016 North Tenth street, and driven by Frank DeWees, 19, of 2516 North Garrison avenue. Sutterfield was struck at Seventh and Elm streets. DeWees was arrested on charges of felonious wounding and careless driving.

James Hasson, 10, of 946 Hickory street, suffered concussion of the brain and contusions of the right leg at noon when struck by an automobile driven by George Washington of 1244 South Sixth street, at Tenth and Hickory.

Norman Duessel, 26, of 1533 North Bacon street, suffered possible internal injuries at 12:15 p. m. when the truck he was driving collided with a Fourth street car at Eleventh and Pine.

While playing in the street at Ninth and Lucas, Chester Biawski, 8, of 1308 North High street, was struck by a machine driven by William J. Kleffman of 2227 Washington boulevard, and suffered abrasions of the head and body.

UNITED EFFORT IS CALLED FOR TO ASSURE DOCTORS' BUILDING

St. Louis Medical Society Members Hear Plans for Concerted Action for $250,000 Proposal.

United effort by members of the St. Louis Medical Society to assure construction of the proposed $250,000 building for the organization on Lindell boulevard, near Moolah Temple, was urged by several speakers at an Armistice day banquet held last night at the Elks' Club, 3619 Lindell boulevard.

Dr. John A. Witherspoon, a member of the faculty of Vanderbilt University, Nashville, Tenn., a former president of the American Medical Association, spoke on "Ideals and Achievements of Medical Organization."

Closer co-operation was necessary, he said, for advancement of the profession. One of the chief problems, he said, is the dwindling number of physicians in rural districts, as opposed to the increase in the number practicing in cities.

"If I were to build a monument to the medical profession I would erect it in honor of the country doctor," he said.

Dr. Robert F. Schlueter asked for concerted effort in working for the society's new building. "The need is for more co-operation, more unanimity and fewer soreheads," he said.

Dr. Hugo Rothstein, 84 years old, of 3309 South Thirteenth street, was introduced by Dr. W. W. Graves, the toastmaster, as the oldest practicing physician in St. Louis.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

The Post-Dispatch reserves the right to reject any query. Personal and telephone calls, or answers by mail, cannot be given attention, except letters on medical questions of undoubted sincerity, when accompanied by stamped addressed envelope.

THANKFUL.—We do not answer matrimonial questions.

F. A. D.—A building on Fifteenth and Olive streets bears a bronze inscription stating that it was the old Public High School.

TRULY.—Inquire in the shops for the size of the marble slab you wish. Dog fanciers can give you the information desired regarding this breed of dog.

B. G. A.—The organization of the United Daughters of the Confederacy admits to membership the direct female relatives and lineal female descendants of those who served honorably in the Confederate service, or who in some other direct way aided the Confederacy. For further information write Mrs. Beauregard, Jefferson Memorial, St. Louis, Mo.

F. G.—The first sewing machine of official record was made by Thomas Saint, the patent being granted in England on July 17, 1790. The first sewing machine put into operation was made by Barthlemy Thimonnier and was patented in France in 1830. This machine was so much of a success that in 1840 it is said that 80 of them used for making French army clothing were destroyed by a mob as had been the Jaccard loom and other labor saving devices years before. In 1848 Thimonnier made another attempt to introduce his machine in France, but was again defeated by the mob. On Sept. 3, 1850, he secured a patent in the United States but his machine had no important features that were of any value as compared with the sewing machines of that date. Elias Howe Jr. stands as one of the greatest inventors of the sewing machine in the United States.

READER.—Peaches are propagated from seed, which is usually stratified with moist sand in the fall, and left exposed to the freezing and thawing of winter, which softens and cracks the pits. In the spring the pits are planted 6 to 8 inches apart in rows wide enough to admit of horse cultivation, and the following August or September the seedlings are budded with improved varieties, since the peach does not, except in a few instances, reproduce true to seed. Peaches thrive best on light, sandy, gravelly, or shaly soils. The life of a commercial orchard is seldom more than seven to nine years. The trees come into bearing about the third year after setting in the orchard. (2) Vine culture varies greatly in different countries. Success seems to depend chiefly upon sunny exposure, congenial soil, control of diseases, intelligent manuring and cultivation. New varieties are grown from seed, but the ordinary mode of propagation is by cuttings. The cuttings are made during the dormant period, preferably in the autumn, from ripe wood of the past season's growth, and usually carrying two or three buds. These are heeled in or buried until the following spring, when they are set in nursery rows; one year later the young plants are ready for planting in the vineyard. The second year the trellises or supports are partially constructed, and new growth tied up out of the way of cultivation. The third year the trellises are completed, some bearing wood left, and each vine may be allowed to bear a few clusters of fruit.

LEGAL INFORMATION.

(By a Member of the St. Louis Bar Association.)

HYDE.—Write to the Clerk of the Probate Court of the county in which the estate is being administered, for this information.

HOWARD.—The man can have this term reduced by good behavior by 5 months out of each year, or in this case 70 months, leaving 8 years and 2 months to serve.

M. W.—1. No, a separation of 10 or more years does not give either party a right to remarry. A divorce must first be obtained. 2. The courts sometimes convict persons on circumstantial evidence.

MRS. C.—Our advice is to consult a lawyer. You are certainly entitled to some sort of a settlement from the man. You could probably have him prosecuted under the Mann Act, if you wished.

MRS. F. R.—The man can be compelled to support his child, whether there has been a divorce or not. The Free Legal Aid Bureau is in the Municipal Courts Building, Fourteenth and Market streets. You might also write to the Prosecuting Attorney at the same address.

C. W. A.—You can sue the man for damages. Possibly, you can also have the deeds of trust set aside, but this would depend upon the circumstances, such as whether the builder had acted fraudulently, whether the deeds had been transfered, etc. You should consult a lawyer.

G. A. E.—1. The woman obtaining a divorce from her husband will have to appear in court, no matter how long they have been separated. 2. Anyone is entitled to use the General Delivery Service, but the authorities endeavor to prevent the use of it for improper or illegal purposes.

R. H. B.—Under these circumstances the State cannot take the property. The lawyer's fee will depend on what agreement you made with them—if you made no agreement they are entitled to a reasonable fee. We recommend that you consult a good lawyer in St. Louis, in whom you have confidence and follow his advice.

SUBSCRIBER.—The landlord can serve a notice of an increase in rent to be effective at any future rent day, but the tenant does not have to pay the increase unless he agrees to do so. If the tenant refuses to pay the increase the landlord can, if he wishes, give him notice to vacate one month from the next following rent day. If a tendant wishes to vacate he must give one month's written notice.

MEDICAL QUESTIONS

Health and sanitation questions of public interest only will be considered. Diagnoses or treatment of individual cases will not be given

J. N.—Consult the Christian Orphan's Home, 2951 North Euclid avenue, St. Ann's Orphan Asylum, Union and Page, or Bethesda Home, Vista near Grand, in regard to placing the child in an orphan home.

SICK.—Cancer of the stomach is as a rule first indicated by symptoms of indigestion, by pain and the finding of a tumor. Vomiting of blood may occur later. It would not cause nose bleed.

A. B.—Tablets for obesity are as a rule called by different trade names. As a rule they all contain thyroid or Poke berry or both. Drugs for the purpose of reducing flesh should not be taken excepting under a physician's direction.

ECZEMA.—There is no specific cure for eczema. Causative features must be considered, constitutional and local. Locally the rule of treatment is stimulating to sluggish surfaces and soothing applications to acutely inflammatory surfaces.

GRATEFUL SUBSCRIBER.—1. Peroxide applications may be tried. They will do no harm and will bleach the hair on the face. Permanent removal is best accomplished by destroying each hair root with the electric needle. 2. Yeast taken regularly has resulted in an increase in body weight in some people.

MANY THANKS.—1. The pains most likely are caused by some abnormal condition in the ear. 2. Hay fever would not cause one to sneeze in this way. The hay fever attacks are more constant. 3. The heart would be the most likely cause for the shortness of breath, but there might also be some lung condition present.

IN THE DARK.—A well-pitted vaccine mark the result of a vaccination performed within 10 years is an absolute guarantee against the contraction of the disease, smallpox. The School Board does not compel a child having a well-pitted vaccine mark to be revaccinated, this being required of children having no marks, poor (unpitted) or old marks. The School Board can refuse attendance to a child unvaccinated and refusing vaccination. We do not believe the British Government or a number of cities in this country have abolished vaccination. The only city we recall having at one time abolished it was Cleveland, O., and shortly after it was again resumed, upon the advent of an outbreak of smallpox in that city. We do not believe the United States Army revaccinated those men who were successfully vaccinated in the Philippines, if such a thing was done it was unnecessary. Smallpox is practically unknown in the United States army due to consistent vaccination. There is not a vast difference among medical men as to the virtue of vaccination. The great mass know its merits, a few men can be found to dispute any self-evident fact.

Around the grave where you were laid.

Upon the face I loved so dear;
We'll meet our Jesus face to face
And nevermore shall part, as here.

A flag with field of white and stars of blue
And border red, we raised for our boy true.
He was our all, our life, our hope, our joy.
Our years will lonesome be without our boy;
And that the passing stranger might be told,
We changed his star of blue for one of gold.

You are gone but not forgotten;
Nor shall you ever be.
As long as life and memory last
We shall remember thee.
If we had seen you at the last
And held your dying hand,
And heard the last sighs from your heart
We would not feel so bad.
We did not know the pain you had;
We did not see you die;
We only know you went away
And never said good-by.
It is one year since you left us
And we miss you more and more;
Our hearts are filled with sadness,
For you we'll see no more.

Upon our father's grave;
The one we loved so dearly
And tried so hard to save.
And when we lost our father
We lost our dearest pal.
We love you and we miss you
And forever shall;
So rest in peace, dear father,
You're safe in heaven's bower.
The day when we shall meet you
Grows nearer every hour.
Sadly missed by
WIFE AND CHILDREN.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of our dear mother, Margaratha Morey, who departed this life one year ago, Nov. 13, 1921:
Days of sadness oft come o'er us,
When our tears in silence flow,
As we think of you, dear mother,
Since you left one year ago.
Gone to meet your God and Maker,
There you wait for us to come.
It will be a short time only
When we also shall be home.
In our fancy we can see you,
Like a star your light does shine,
That will lead us as we travel
Down the path of life's decline.
Oh, 'twill be a glorious greeting
When we meet on yonder shore;
Sadness will be turned to gladness,
Then from you we part no more.
Sadly missed by her DAUGHTER.

ARE YOU A PRODUCER?

We want a high-powered district sales manager with the ability to organize territory and produce results.

An intensive sales campaign is being carried on. We want a man to work in Illinois who is an experienced organizer and result producer.

We manufacture a full line of Full-Automatic Electric Light and Power Plants; were established in 1914, and have paid dividends every year since inception of the company.

The Matthews Full-Automatic Plant needs less manual attention than any other plant on the market, and the price is low enough to be within the reach of every farmer. Potentional owners are ulimited.

The man we want should be able to finance himself during the period of initial development of territory.

Men with the necessary qualifications will be interviewed in their own locality. Write or wire M. C. Congray.

FOREST PARK "WILDS" TO BE FILM SETTING

Making of Pioneer Scenes in "Spirit of St. Louis" Will Start This Week.

The "wilderness" of western Forest Park will serve as the early St. Louis setting for some of the pioneer scenes in the "Spirit of St. Louis" film, the making of which will start this week.

The "sets," to be prepared by a film director to be sent from Chicago, will include the Chouteau house and log cabins of the earliest settlement, the later stockade and blockhouse built for protection against Indians, an Indian village, and a St. Louis street in the period before the Civil War. In the filming of the picture, every effort will be made to exclude automobiles.

Manuel Lisa, early St. Louis fur trader, will be one of the most picturesque figures in the cast. One of his achievements was the preventing of an Indian expedition against the settlement which was threatened in the days of the war of 1812. This was made possible by Lisa's acquaintance with the Indians as a fur trader, and it is held to have saved the settlement from possible extinction.

The Manuel Lisa part of the film story has been made from a narrative written by Miss Stella M. Drumm, librarian of the Missouri Historical Society. Miss Drumm's story gives prominence to "Aunt Manuel," wife of Manuel Lisa, who is pictured as a pretty, red-cheeked woman, the admiration of the Indians. The savages, it is related, would lie on their stomachs at the edge of the tepee occupied by the Lisas, to peer at Madame Lisa. On one occasion, the story goes, she had to eat a bit of roast dog, to keep in the good graces of her Indian hosts.

In paying for the furs bought, the story relates, the white traders found it best to make the distribution of cloth, knives and trinkets through the agency of "Aunt Manuel," as the Indians preferred to be paid by the "white squaw."

ADMITS SHE SHIFTED RINGS IN OTHER CITIES

Girl, 22, Says She Also Forged Checks in Nashville and Kansas City.

Miss Lillian R. Meadors, 22 years old, of Gainesboro, Tenn., arrested Friday at the J. Bolland Jewelry Co., where she switched a 10-cent ring for one valued at $535, admitted last night that she had switched rings successfully in Kansas City and had passed worthless checks there and in Nashville, Tenn.

Miss Meadors, an attractive blonde, in fashionable attire, which she admits she bought with the proceeds of those transactions, says she is the daughter of Benjamin Meadors, proprietor of a warehouse at Gainesboro. Two years ago, according to her story, she was teaching music at Baxter, Tenn., and one week-end went to a nearby summer resort, where she was introduced to a traveling salesman from Chattanooga. He was married, but she did not know it then.

Last June she went to Kansas City with $300 which the man had given her, and entered a maternity hospital, she declares. After her baby was born the man sent her another $150, but when she was ready to leave the hospital she had no money. She paid her hospital bill with a check for $175, signing her father's name, according to her story. After making provision for the baby's care, she went to Nashville, expecting to meet the man there, but he did not appear, and after two weeks she found herself in need of clothing and money. She bought a suit, waist and hat, and paid for them with a check for $175, and at another store paid for underwear with a check for $40, receiving change. At a third store she cashed a check for $10, all drawn, she says, on a bank in Kansas City, where she had no funds.

Hoping a letter from the man might be awaiting her in Kansas City, she returned there. Finding her money exhausted there, she bought a cheap ring and switched it for one priced at $400, which she pawned for $135, and at another store switched a cheap ring for one priced at $135 and pawned it for $35, Miss Meadows admits. She paid her bills and came to St. Louis, arriving here with $15. After registering at Hotel Statler she bought a dress, this left her with only 50 cents.

At the Bolland store, after she had switched the rings, a clerk noticed the substitution and detained her while he called a detective. She first dropped the $535 diamond ring in her glove, but later concealed it in her hair, from which she produced it after being arrested.

After making her confession last night, she said she would write to her father and to the Chattanooga man, asking them to come to her assistance.

QUITS TITLE TO BE AMERICAN

German Baron Leaves Fatherland to Become a "Plain Farmer."

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—A noble immigrant came to America yesterday and checked his title at the gate with the announcement that from now on he was going to be "just a plain American farmer." He was Baron Herwarth von Bittenfeld, who had lived at Washington, D. C., from 1910 to 1914, while his father served as German military attache during the Hohenzollern dynasty.

It was because of the kindness of Americans to him during the war that the young baron decided to renounce his title and quit the fatherland, he said. He had been a captain in the German Army until, in September, 1918, he was captured by the Americans and taken to a prison camp. It happened that former Secretary of War Baker came along on an inspection tour, recognized the baron and arranged for his transfer to Germany. That act and other kindnesses from the "enemy" fixed America as his future home, said the baron.

IN JAIL FOR FAILURE TO PAY ALIMONY TO DIVORCED WIFE

Man Sentenced to Six Months in Belleville for Not Remitting $60 a Month to Support Woman and Daughter.

Robert E. Hazel, 48 years old, formerly employed as baggagemaster at Relay Station, East St. Louis, was sentenced yesterday to service of six months in the county jail at Belleville by Judge Borders in the East St. Louis City Court. He was convicted of contempt of court for failing to pay his divorced wife, Emma Hazel, alimony, as ordered. Mrs. Hazel obtained a divorce last February and the decree carried an order that Hazel should contribute $60 a month toward her support and that of their daughter.

Hazel, it was alleged, departed from East St. Louis, and returned a few days ago. A Deputy Sheriff arrested him yesterday. He was arraigned before Judge Borders, but declined to make any statement. After witnesses had testified that Hazel had neglected to pay the alimony, Judge Borders inquired if Hazel had any statement to make, and his attorney answered that he had not. Hazel was taken to jail yesterday afternoon.

VIVISECTION TERMED HIGHLY IMMORAL BY ENGLISH SURGEON

Dr. W. R. Hadwen Also Attacks Disease Germ Theory in Lecture at Women's Club.

Vivisection is a highly immoral practice, which, in its entire history, has been of no value in the amelioration or cure of disease, Dr. Walter R. Hadwen of Gloucester, England, writer and antivivisectionist, declared last night in a lecture on "Animal Experimentation," before the Missouri Anti-Vivisection Society at the St. Louis Women's Club, 4600 Lindell boulevard.

Vivisection is "wicked, cruel, unscientific and contrary to the ethics of Christianity and civilization," he declared. "The vivisectionists cannot reason from animal to man, for the animals, physiologically and anatomically, differ from man," said Dr. Hadwen. "Even after certain results are obtained in experimentation on animals, it proves nothing as to human beings."

Vivisection had misled the medical professional into false conclusions, he said, in analyzing the disease germ theory, which, he asserted, "is absolutely false." He declared there was no proof there was such a thing as a disease germ.

Dr. Hadwen is a graduate of the medical school of St. Andrews University, a member of the Royal College of Surgeons of England and president of the British Union for the Abolition of Vivisection. He came here from Denver yesterday and will depart tomorrow for Washington. He was entertained yesterday at the home of Miss Mary Mitchell, 3703 West Pine boulevard.

The Missouri Anti-Vivisection Society was organized recently by about 35 St. Louisans, with Mrs. J. Alex Goodwin, head of the Women's Chamber of Commerce, as president.

WRITER OF LETTER THOUGHT TO KNOW WHERE MISSING MAN IS

Brother of Wealthy Carlisle (Ark.) Dairyman Here Seeking Sender of Queer Missive.

A. H. Jorns, a railroad clerk of Galveston, Tex., is in St. Louis attempting to learn the identity of the writer of a mysterious letter received by police at Carlisle, Ark., a week ago, soon after his brother, A. C. Jorns, a wealthy dairyman, disappeared from his home at Carlisle.

Jorns said yesterday that he believed the writer would be able to tell where his brother was. The letter was dated Nov. 4 and signed "Mrs. Clara LeSure." No address was given. It asked authorities at Carlisle to inform her if anything was wrong at a dairy farm near the one operated by the missing man.

The letter intimated someone from the vicinity of Carlisle had talked with the writer. On the back of the letter was the signature "A. C. Jorns," in what A. H. Jorns declares was his brother's writing. Carlisle authorities to address their reply to General Delivery. For two days no one has called for mail addressed to Mrs. Clara LaSure.

Jorns disappeared from Little Rock, 30 miles from Carlisle, Oct. 30, after spending the day in Little Rock on business.

SUPPOSED FORMER 'BLUE DEVIL' OF FRANCE KILLED IN CHICAGO

Falls From Rear of Elevated Train as Whistles Sound in Observance of Armistice Day Anniversary.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Nov. 11.—With head bared as the city's whistle sounded in observance of Armistice anniversary, an unidentified man believed to have been a former "Blue Devil" of France, fell to his death from the rear of an elevated train today. The only identification clew was a name found on a card in the pocket.

It read:

"Monsieur Thophile Lessun, No. 1573 Rue La Belle boulevard, St. Denis."

On the opposite side was inscribed:

"The day we never forget, Nov. 11, 1918."

HELP SENT TO STEAMER AFIRE 75 MILES OFF CAPE HATTERAS

By the Associated Press.

NORFOLK, Va., Nov. 11.—Assistance was sent today to a steamer afire 75 miles off Cape Hatteras, wireless messages stating that the blaze, which started in No. 3 hold, was spreading and the crew was in jeopardy. As received here the messages indicated that the steamer was the Munsomo, but investigation developed that that vessel was in port at Baltimore, and steamship officials expressed the belief that the craft was the Mundale, a craft of 2071 tons register, which plies between New York and Cuba.

STEPDAUGHTER, 16, SHOT BY MAN WHO THEN WOUNDS SELF

Joseph Mickell, East St. Louis Laborer, Fires at Her After She Goes to Party Against His Will.

ALSO SENDS BULLET AT ANOTHER GIRL

This Shot Goes Wild—Stepdaughter Wounded in Hip and Man in Stomach—His Condition Serious.

Joseph Mickell, 33 years old, of 3641 McCasland avenue, East St. Louis, a laborer, last night went to a party being given by young persons and shot his stepdaughter, Isabel Menrick, 16, through the hip, after she went to the affair against his will. After firing once at a second girl, the bullet missing her, he went home and shot himself in the stomach. He is in a serious condition at St. Mary's Hospital, where the wounded girl also was taken.

The party was in the home of Robert H. Robinette, 3645 McCasland avenue, a few doors from the Mickell home. The occasion was the birthday and return home from the Marine Corps of Roy Robinette.

Isabel had been invited and so informed her stepfather, but he told her not to go and she thereupon ran out of the house and into the Robinette home. Mickel called to her that she would be sorry for disobeying him when she returned home.

About 8:45 p. m. Mickell opened the door of the Robinette parlor, where the young persons were chatting and laughing, and called to Isabel to come to him. Before she could respond he fired three shots. The first bullet struck her and the other two went into the ceiling.

Mickell ran and was followed by Miss Luella Robinette, 16, at whom he fired one shot, which missed. A few minutes later he shot himself.

Mickell has been before the Humane Society of East St. Louis for cruelty to his family. He has been married six years and has two children by Isabel's mother.

DRIVER KILLED WHEN PINNED UNDER TRUCK AFTER COLLISION

William Bunham, Jerseyville, Ill., Suffers Broken Neck—Machine Overturned in Ditch.

William Bunham, 38 years old, of Jerseyville, Ill., was killed at 10 a. m. yesterday, when his oil truck and another truck loaded with sand and gravel were in collision at Jefferson and Spruce streets, Jerseyville. The oil truck skidded and turned over in a ditch, pinning Bunham underneath it. His neck was broken and skull crushed.

J. L. Pfenenger, who was riding with Bunham and jumped to safety, said Bunham was going east on Spruce street, and that the other truck, driven by Morris Temple, caught the rear wheel of the oil truck.

Bunham is survived by a wife and seven children. He is reported to have carried $75,000 life insurance.

The accident occurred near where Miss Anna Norris, to whom he was to be married, was killed Oct. 15, when an automobile in which she and her fiance were riding struck a horse and buggy.

Two more St. Louisans, Ray Reynard and Harry Ruhlman, are charged with robbing the Illinois State Bank at East Alton of $1910 on Feb. 15 last, and their case also is on the docket.

STATE BUREAU TO ENFORCE LAWS PLANNED BY DRYS

Head of Missouri Anti-Saloon League Tells of Plans to "Put Teeth" in Present Liquor Statute.

BILL READY FOR NEXT LEGISLATURE

Dr. Shupp Says St. Louis Wets Have Little Cause for Rejoicing Over Results of Tuesday's Election.

An amendment to the Missouri State prohibition enforcement law which will establish a State prohibition enforcement department, operating under direction of the Attorney-General and with a force of secret service agents in the field to assist county and city authorities, will be offered at the coming session of the State Legislature, Dr. W. C. Shupp, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of Missouri, announced yesterday.

In addition there will be five or six amendments tending to strengthen the law offered by a committee which was appointed by the prosecuting attorneys of the State during a law enforcement conference in Jefferson City last January, Dr. Shupp said.

Plan of Dry Leaders.

"Our plan is to have the State prohibition enforcement law grow a real set of teeth to replace the false set which it has possessed for the last year or two," Dr. Shupp said. It was his first public statement since the election, and in it he declares that the "wets," especially the St. Louis "wets," have little cause for rejoicing in the results of Tuesday's elections.

"In Ohio, which I consider to be the most representative American State, the issue was clearly drawn, the result being that the prohibition forces won by almost a 200,000 majority," he said. "California comes along with its dry vote by a satisfactory majority. The Illinois vote is not representative. Neither the Anti-Saloon League nor the W. C. T. U. took the slightest part in that campaign.

"It was the boast of the wet forces in Missouri that they would elect nine Congressmen. The only trouble with that boast is that it was made before the election. They actually elected only four Congressmen in the entire State and three of that four are from St. Louis. They elected five Congressmen in Missouri two years ago.

"The overwhelming Democratic landslide prevented the defeat of Jim Reed. Probably 100,000 persons out in the State would have voted against Reed but for the prevalence of reports that this was a Democratic year and their desire to be with a winner. Had they voted their honest convictions the result would have been very different in Missouri so far as the senatorial race was concerned.

Situation in National House.

"In the national House of Representatives the wets gained 40 votes, according to their boast two days after the election. But that gain has now dwindled down to nine. They have about 136 Congressmen but they need about 245 to do any business.

"In the Senate the drys gained from three to five, depending upon the attitude of several men of whom we are not sure. Out of the 96 Senators the drys will have 76.

"In Missouri the drys have had a bare majority in the State Senate the last two sessions. That was increased most decisively and they will now have 26 out of the 34. Of the eight wet State Senators six are from St. Louis and one from Kansas City. The Missouri House of Representatives is so dry we haven't bothered counting it.

Prospects for Beer Slim.

"It looks to me as though St. Louis' hope for beer is about the same as hoping to find gold at the end of the rainbow. The folks who wanted the beer may just as well make up their mind they are going to have water."

Dr. Shupp expects there will be objection to a State enforcement department on the ground of expense. He is prepared, he said, to show by records from other states which have similar departments, that the cost will be more than made up by additional fines collected. He said that in Ohio there was an appropriation of $100,000 for a similar department, and that the fines resulting from its activities the first year totaled $600,000.

AMUNDSEN DESCRIBES HIS EXPERIENCES PREPARATORY TO NORTH POLE FLIGHT; NEAR DEATH WHEN TRAPPED IN STORM

Explorer Goes into Winter Quarters When Fog and Mist on Land and Sea Force Postponement of Airplane Project Until Next Summer.

Following is the first extensive cablegram from Roald Amundsen, polar explorer, who is leading an expedition to attempt to cross the North Pole, since his departure for the Arctic regions last June. It is published simultaneously by the Post-Dispatch and London Times by a special arrangement made before the expedition sailed. Other dispatches will be presented from time to time under this arrangement, being sent by Amundsen by wireless to Spitzbergen and thence by cable to London and America.

The last previous direct communication from Amundsen was in a dispatch sent July 31, announcing that his plan to fly across the North Pole had been found impracticable so late in the season and that it had been necessary to postpone this project to June or early July, 1923. He refers to this message in this article, declaring that it would be madness to attempt such a flight—some 1500 miles—so late in the season, because of the fog and mist that enveloped the land and water continuously.

By ROALD AMUNDSEN.
(Special Cable to the London Times and the Post-Dispatch.)
(Copyright, 1922, by Roald Amundsen.)

WAINWRIGHT, Alaska, Aug. 1, 1922 (via cable from London).—We left Nome, Wednesday, June 28. The town gave us a hearty cheer on our departure, which, in spite of the Arctic surroundings, was of quite a tropical effect.

Nome is not what it used to be when I visited it the first time, in 1906. At that time you might pick up gold from the streets. Now the people have to work hard.

Twenty-four hours later we dropped our anchors just outside Kenesko, at East Cape, in Siberia. On our arrival ice covered the sea for a distance of about three miles from the shore. We moored to the ice and awaited the march of events. We did not have long to wait.

A team of dogs came rushing out over the ice and within a short time our friend, Charlie Corpendale, was on board. It was indeed he, the friend of all in the expedition and of the natives. For 20 years he has lived in this God-forsaken place and been trading with the natives, and this trade has been carried on in such a way as to procure for him their highest esteem and confidence.

Best of Outfits.

The whole outfit I had ordered from him last year was ready and it was an outfit, indeed. Never had an expedition a similar one. We are fitted out with the very best to be had in this special field.

On June 30 we had a storm with snow showers—a fine end, indeed, of a month of flowers. At 11 p. m. the vessel Herman, Capt. Pederson, came in to seek shelter. I am very glad again to meet this man, who last year so kindly brought me from this place to Nome.

My diary for July 1 contains the following: "Storms from the north, mixed with snow. Temperature about zero. Time very soon for setting potatoes."

Our wireless functions excellently. We hear Stavanger radio clearly and distinctly every day at fixed hours. Meteorological bulletins from Spitzenberg have arrived very regularly. They, no doubt, would have been very useful to us if we had been able to reach Point Narrow in due time. Thanks to the detailed and exact communications of Lieut. Thellessen, Norwegian superintendent of service, we are in possession of all details as to a landing place in King's Bay. Our telegraph arrangements across have not so far proved particularly successful, but I hope things will come round, bye and bye.

Bay Blocked By Ice.

We left Kennesko July 4, steering for Cape Serdso Kamen, where we had our winter quarters in 1920-21. Untrammeled by ice, we arrived at m., but found the little bay blocked by ice. To await the drifting of the ice might have detained us for days, and accordingly we made up our minds to proceed at once.

Three or four natives who accompanied us southward last year were landed at Kengesko. With grief in our hearts we took leave of our kind friends. The fourth of them, Kabot, remained with us and became a member of the expedition.

We subsequently made for Cape Nasherberg, in Kotzebu Sound, Alaska, where I hoped fine lobsters could be had, as all the coast here is famous for the quality of its lobsters.

The first place at which we arrived was Deering, the morning of July 5. In the environs of Deering there is some gold digging still going on, though on an inferior scale. Our stay here was longer than we anticipated, owing to reports which reached us that ice still was blocking Point Hope, some 100 miles farther north.

Natives Incredulous.

During our stay Lieuts. Omdal and Dakl put in order our little Curtiss Oriole, for I intended by means of this machine to make a closer investigation of ice conditions. It was touching to witness the courtesy and energy of the natives in assisting us. I think I never saw anything like it. Day and night they worked to procure us a suitable flying field and finally they succeeded.

Deering, therefore, well deserves to possess such a place. The population cheered loudly when Lieut. Omdal, flying elegantly, showed the natives that their white brother now was competing successfully with the birds.

POLAR EXPLORER WHO TELLS OF EXPERIENCES

ROALD AMUNDSEN.

How amusing it was to observe the natives. They were in doubt to the very last and laughed and shook their heads. How could it be possible that such a big thing as this, which required the combined forces of several men to move, should be able to fly? Oh, no, they were not so stupid as to be made to believe such a thing.

Suddenly the apparatus dashed off along the hill in the midst of a shower of dust and gravel. You should have seen the natives as their smiles died away, to be replaced by expressions of astonishment. It could rush along the hill, indeed.

Then the incredible thing happened, the wheels left the ground, the horizon became visible under them, and, before the natives were able to recover their power of reasoning, the machine was soaring high above their heads.

They Never Will Forget It.

The intense silence of these few seconds was broken by cries of enthusiasm. The white population threw their caps high into the air and whistled and shouted. The natives were more reserved in their outbursts, but certain it was that the flight turned out to be a perfect success to the airman and that his feat will go down to posterity in this place.

One day we were informed that the schooner C. S. Holmes, of Seattle, was discharging a cargo of general goods at Kotzebu, 40 miles from our place, and was bound for Point Barrow. The idea struck me: "Ought you not to avail yourself of this opportunity to bring our heavy airplane on board this vessel and thereby spare the Maud a long and troublesome trip up to Point Barrow?"

It did not require much time for us to act. In the evening the Maud left Deering and two days later she returned, after having transferred the airplane to the Holmes. It was arranged with Capt. Backland of the Holmes that we should meet at Point Hope on July 26.

Accordingly, we left Deering the afternoon of July 23, steering for Point Hope, but next morning, at 8 o'clock, we encountered a heavy storm from the south and had to lay to. At 9:30 a. m. July 25 the storm suddenly fell light and at 5 p. m. we found ourselves at Point Hope.

But no Holmes was there. We therefore proceeded in a northerly direction, thinking she possibly was ahead of us. At 5:30 the following afternoon we met the Herman, near Cape Beaufort. She had found the ice farther east compact and heavy and had been unable to force it. This was also our experience. The Holmes she had no seen. Accordingly, the Holmes must be farther south. Back again.

Obtain More Dogs.

At 1 p. m. the following day we anchored alongside the Holmes, which was moored at Point Hope and was discharging her cargo. It blew at the time rather heavily from the southeast. After a visit on board the Holmes we went ashore and purchased seven good sledge dogs, which, together with the nine dogs we already had, supplied us with a team of 16 good dogs.

I subsequently dispatched a telegram via Nome, by Stavanger radio, giving our position.

We had our luggage on board the Holmes July 28. Immediately after dinner we took leave of our comrades. You would have thought it was an everyday occurrence. "Good-by—so long—we will meet again very soon."

Maybe it was not quite so calm below the surface when I bade farewell to those men—the most reliable men with whom I ever have met. The names of Wistina, Sverdriga and Oloskin will live in my heart to my very last day. I left them with a good conscience. A better vessel they could not get. The new crews all proved themselves to be first-class men and the outfit was also excellent.

Poor Kakoh. He was not quite able to control himself. When I came out in the gallery he was standing there quite pale. Tears came to his eyes.

At 4:30 p. m. the Maud departed, steering northward. She passed close by us, her flags being lowered Omdal had supplied himself with singal flags and sent his last greetings from the cabin roof of the Holmes.

Natives Regard Trial Trip of Machine as Miracle—"Just Like an Everyday Occurrence When We Said Good-bye to Our Friends."

Thought It Was the End.

In my diary, under July 29, is the following:

"A close shore, say the Americans, and so it was indeed last night. At 9 o'clock the wind suddenly veered round from the southeast to the northwest, sweeping down upon the shore, and before we had time to heave up anchor and get away the gale became so heavy that we had no other choice than to remain and try to rough it."

We had 12 meters to the bottom. It became a jolly good dance. Very soon we had five anchors out. The storm increased and the sea rose heavily with foaming and roaring billows. Pooh!

Suddenly we lost one of our anchors, subsequently another one, and immediately after that a third went the same way. We rapidly were carried away in the direction where the surf was roaring against the shore.

It was a cozy situation, indeed. None of us had the slightest hope of getting out of this mess, but all were calm and performed their duties. Lund was constantly filming and more realistic pictures of a vessel on the point of being wrecked hardly could have been taken. He was engaged everywhere. At the last he was standing with his apparatus on the main hatch.

"Ready for what?" I asked.

"I want to get the masts when they go overboard," he replied.

The man was, indeed, equal to the task. But the masts did not go overboard and Lund was cheated of his crowning efforts.

Pity the Poor Cook.

We were hardly six meters from shore when the heavy attacks of the storm subsided a little and our two remaining anchors got a hold on the bottom. It was 5 a. m.

The storm subsequently decreased into a gale and remained so throughout the day. Our poor old cook could not think of anything, but it must be considered as an excuse for him that he is 71 years old.

The following forenoon the wind was so slack that we were able to heave our anchors and move to a safer place, farther out, by means of sails, for the Holmes, which is a four-masted schooner, has no motor power.

We heaved up our anchors Tuesday, Aug. 1, and steered northward in a fresh southeasterly gale, with rain. Besides the ordinary crew of the Holmes, seven altogether and all Scandinavians, we got six young Eskimos on board, so that we were a fine company, indeed.

Today is Aug. 14 and yet we are not advanced farther than to Icy Cape. Weather and ice conditions have been quite contrary. I have made up my mind to leave the Holmes at Wainwright and pass the winter there.

To fly now would be sheer madness. Rain and fog and storm are alternating daily. Lund and Omdal have built a house of materials on board here, and everything is ready to be put in order on land. Here we are to be supplied with things we are in need of for the winter. If we are in want of more we have only to drive a couple of miles to Point Barrow.

Sight the Yacht Bear.

The following Friday evening we got a glimpse of the yacht Bear (United States revenue boat), which is here on inspection, but we lost her again in the storm and fog. It was annoying, for she had mail for us.

We are now tossing and rolling here in the midst of a calm and mist.

"It's a long way to Tipperary." In these surroundings you have to be supplied with patience, else life will become quite intolerable. I imagined that I had a fair amount of this quality, but after having spent three weeks on board a sailing vessel I find I have not yet passed my examination in this special field and got my patience degree.

We finally arrived at Wainwright Aug. 18. The Bear was 12 hours ahead of us. Three other vessels, all bound for Point Barrow, have drifted by here, blocked by ice.

Will they get out of it or are they drifting toward the great unknown land?

Wainwright is a little Eskimo village with a school and trading post and approximately 200 inhabitants. It is about four miles to the north of the closed bay which, on the map, bears the name of Wainwright Islet.

It was 5 a. m. when we arrived here and two hours later we were ashore and looking for a place for our houses. We made up our minds for the northern side of the bay. Here we have hard fine ice and an excellent starting place.

At 10 p. m. the first parcel of house materials was landed—three big boats of hide. Meantime, our first mate, Anderson, had arranged the necessary implements to lift the three-ton case containing the airplane trunk.

Postscript, Aug. 21.—Everything is now ashore and the building of our house completed. Everything looks favorable and I entertain hope of a fair result.

BRITISH WRITER REGRETS MAKING ATTACK ON U. S.

John Fortescue, Barred From Speaking at West Point Declares Views on America Have Changed.

SAYS STATEMENTS WERE MADE HASTILY

President of Royal Historical Society of Great Britain Altered Opinions as Result of World War.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—John Fortescue, president of the Royal Historical Society of Great Britain, whose invitation to make an Armistice day address at West Point was revoked yesterday by Secretary Weeks because of remarks derogatory to America made in a book written by Mr. Fortescue, today expressed his regret that he had ever written the passages attacking America.

He declared the remarks made in lectures at Oxford in 1910 and later published as "British Statesmen of the Great War: 1793-1814," had been hasty and had been uttered when two alleged unsportsmanlike acts by America had been fresh in his mind. His attitude toward America and the Americans, he added, had since changed. He had, he said the greatest admiration and respect for America, since he learned to know them during the great war.

The two unsportsmanlike acts, Fortescue explained, took place in 1908 or thereabouts. In a footrace between an American and another competitor in England Fortescue said the American had won the race unfairly and had been disqualified. At the same time, he said, the British Foreign Office had discovered that a person in the American State Department had altered a document to favor America's contentions in the Behring Straits dispute then under discussion.

Fortescue said he would return to England with Mrs. Fortescue on Nov. 28 without delivering any lectures. He said he was not on a lecture tour, but that he had been invited to address several public bodies.

Passage in Fortescue's Book Under Fire.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—Brigadier-General Stayden, commandant of the Military Academy at West Point, has been directed by Secretary Weeks to recall an invitation given to John Fortescue, president of the Royal Historical Society, to address the cadets on Armistice day. A formal statement issued yesterday by the War Secretary said the reason for his action was found in statements contained in a recent book written by Fortescue entitled "British Statesmen of the Great War." The Secretary quoted this passage:

"Americans esteem a good bargain, even if gained by dishonorable means, to mark the highest form of ability. The United States cannot engage in any form of competition with us from athletics to diplomacy without using foul play. They must win, if not by fair skill, then by prearranged trickery or violence; if not by open negotiations, then by garbled maps and forged documents. There is the fact. It may be unpleasant, but it cannot be denied."

"An author entertaining these sentiments," Mr. Weeks said, "is not considered to be a proper person to address the students of a Government academy."

Fortescue is understood to be visiting the United States for the purpose of delivering a series of lectures in this country.

London Newspaper Says Great Joke Is Developing From Weeks' Action.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—Some of the London newspapers give prominent display to accounts of the withdrawal by the American Secretary of War of an invitation for the Hon. John William Fortescue to address the West Point cadets on Armistice day.

Under the caption, "The Comedy of the Ban," the Evening Standard devotes more than a column to an editorially worded story in which it points out that Fortescue's book passages which were taken exception to by Secretary Weeks were written in 1911 and concerned the revolutionary war and not the great European conflict.

Calls It "World Joke."

"Is Mr. Weeks under an entire misapprehension," the newspaper asks, "or does he desire to hark back to 1911 for the opinions of a banned lecturer?"

The Standard says that as a result of the ban "a world joke is developing."

It adds: "The criticism of the Americans that have so offended the susceptibilities of Mr. Weeks were written years before America entered the European war and years before any of us contemplated any war.

"Now, more than 10 years later, an American Secretary of War, apparently under the delusion that the recent events are referred to, makes that the basis of his attack. It may be that someone has been playing a joke on Weeks, but the people who recall another action a little more than two months ago supply another reason. They contend that his action must be the result of hypersensitiveness that isn't without its ludicrous side.

Reference to Kipling Interview.

"It was the same Mr. Weeks who issued a 'formal statement' in which he condemned Mr. Rudyard Kipling for expressing the views that he was supposed to hold concerning the actions of America in the recent war. When Kipling repudiated the interview it was of course seen at once that Weeks had made a fuss over nothing."

The Evening News prominently displays the story under the heading, "Joke of Great War Book," contending that Weeks undoubtedly is laboring under the delusion that the book concerns the World War, as the press cables received here quote him as referring to Fortescue's "recent book."

POLICE CRUSADE AGAINST CARNIVAL GAMBLING OPENED

Detective Squad Puts Lid on Games of Chance Operating at Six Neighborhood Fairs.

COMPLAINTS MADE BY NEARBY MERCHANTS

Tradesmen Declare Customers in Some Instances Fail to Pay Bills That They Might Gamble.

A campaign to eliminate games of chance at neighborhood carnivals was instituted last night when Detective Sergeant Glassco, with a squad of men, visited six carnivals and ordered immediate suspension of the "gambling" features.

Action was taken after complaints to the Police Department were made by merchants in the vicinity of the carnivals. The reports stated that groceries and other household necessities were being disposed of at the carnivals. This, the merchants said, harmed their busines. They claim their customers, in some instances, have neglected to pay bills in order to have money with which to take a chance at the carnivals.

The Six Visited.

The six carnivals visited were located as follows: Compton avenue and Cherokee street, Broadway and Victor street, Twelfth and Hickory streets, Twentieth and Destrehan streets, Twenty-second street and Washington avenue and Broadway and Chouteau avenue.

The carnival at Broadway and Victor closed entirely when the games of chance were stopped. The other five advised Sergeant Glassco that they would endeavor to operate without the "gambling" features, if possible.

Informations Possible.

Sergeant Glassco said that he has the assurance of Circuit Attorney Sidener that informations charging the illegal setting up of a gambling device will be issued against persons failing to observe the police request for suspension.

It is claimed by police officers that the carnivals are attracting an undesirable element to the city. Usually, policemen report, the carnivals are operated under the name of some local organization which permits the use of its name for a share of the receipts.

VOCATIONAL APPLICATIONS MUST BE MADE BY DEC. 16

All applications of former service men for vocational training under the vocational rehabilitation act, approved June 16, 1921, must be filed on or before Dec. 16, Grover C. Davis, manager of the St. Louis subdivision of the United States Veterans' Bureau, said yesterday.

The act provides that all applications for vocational training must be filed within 18 months from the date of its approval. Davis suggests that former service men who are entitled to assistance under the act communicate with the bureau, Chouteau Trust Building, Chouteau and Vandeventer avenues.

DOG BLOCKS WET RAID; SHOT

Agents Then Find Contraband; Successful in 10 of 19 Raids.

General prohibition enforcement agents, headed by Robert P. Samardick and assisted by Fred Tate, representing Attorney General Barrett, yesterday made 19 raids on saloons in the city and county, seized small quantities of beer and liquor at 10 of the places, and made arrests in each case where beer or liquor was found. They had search warrants.

At the saloon of Tony Tueskowski, 1711 Biddle street, no beer or liquor was found in the saloon and when the raiders started to search a shed they observed a sign, "Beware! Bad dog." A bull terrier, tied inside the shed, began to growl. Tueskowski was given five minutes to get his dog out and when he refused, Samardick shot the animal. Three cases of homemade beer were found in the shed and Tueskowski was arrested.

SYMPHONY CONCERT BROADCAST BY K S D

Special Armistice Day Program of Addresses and Songs Also Sent Out.

Station K S D successfully broadcast the concert of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, which was given at the Odeon last evening, and although no reports from distant points as to the reception of this broadcasting was received it is believed the "invisible audience" heard the entire program with the greatest ease and pleasure.

Prior to beginning the broadcasting of the Symphony concert, Station K S D gave a special program for Armistice day. James L. Feiser, vice chairman of the American Red Cross, who came on from Washington to take part in this program, Gov. Hyde and State Commander James E. Kinkaid of the American Legion, were the speakers. Feiser told of the work of the American Red Cross since the war and made a plea for its continued support by the people of the United States, and both he and Gov. Hyde urged everyone to renew membership in the Red Cross during the National Roll Call period which began yesterday. Kinkaid's topic was the relation between the American Legion and the Red Cross.

A very effective feature of the program was sounding the bugle calls by Trumpeter John Klein of the 128th F. A. and singing old war songs by the popular St. Louis soprano, Marie Gardner. Preceding the program the President's proclamation for the Red Cross Roll Call was read.

Von Phul was a son of Henry Von Phul, a leading figure in early commercial St. Louis, and was a member of the staff of Gen. Frost of St. Louis in the Civil War.

A brother, Philip Von Phul, and a sister, Mrs. William Cook, and a number of other relatives live here. He was a bachelor.

"DEAD" MAN COMING TO EXPLAIN HIS CLAIM

Father Had William L. Tonkins Declared Legally Deceased—Mixup Over Estate.

William A. Tonkins of Picher, Ok., who was declared legally dead May 31 in proceedings brought by his father, George Tonkins, and who wrote last week to Probate Judge Hodgdon at Clayton, enclosing his affidavit to show that he wasn't dead, plans to come to St. Louis in two weeks in an attempt to disentangle his claim to his grandfather's estate.

The property, comprising [illegible] acres on the Meramec River, above Fenton, valued now at $30,000 to $40,000, and 6¼ acres at Gravois and Denny roads, near Sunset Inn, is with the exceptoin of a part of the 6¼ acres, sold to outsiders, in the hands of his uncle, H. S. Tonkins and his cousin, Warren Tonkins, who is proprietor of a roadhouse on the remainder of the Denny and Gravois property. Warren Tonkins, who discovered accidentally when in Joplin two weeks ago on business that his "dead" cousin was operating a garage across the State line, in Pilcher, yesterday explained the entanglement.

Divided Among 5 Children.

The estate, he said, originally was divided between the five children of his grandfather. A series of transfers left the Meramec farm in the hands of his father, an aunt and an uncle, William R. Tonkins, and he and his father finally bought complete title to it.

George Tonkins, who is now [illegible] years old, in 1904 sold his interest in the estate, without specifying what property the interest covered, to his son, William L. Tonkins, who is 41. The son gave a note for $500 in payment. Warren believes that his cousin sold the 1¼ acres that became his property at Denny and Gravois.

On July 1 of last year George Tonkins, who lives at Flat River, took action in the Probate Court at Clayton to have his son declared legally dead, saying that he had not seen him since December, 1913. The law provide sthat a person who disapears for seven years and does not respond to publication of such action is held to be legally dead, and his estate may be turned over to an administrator.

The father's purpose was to collect on the note given to him by his son, on which, he declared, his son had made no payments. He claimed that there still remained an interest to the Meramec farm, included in that he conveyed to his son for the note, which, with accrued interest, amounted to more than $1000, and asked that it be allowed him.

Claim Allowed by Administrator.

The claim has been allowed by Public Administrator Terry, but so recently that the existence of title to a part of the farm has not been investigated. The title of Warren Tonkins and his father to the entire farm has been looked into by a title company and declared clear. Warren said that his mother, when the estate was changing from hand to hand, also had bought an "interest" only to find that it was non-existent. He expressed his willingness to buy his cousin's interest.

Joseph McAtee, attorney for George Tonkins, told the reporter the only thing for his client to do was to ask for an attachment of the alleged interest.

HOPES DISCOVERY WILL LEAD TO COMPLETE DIABETES CURE

Rochester Doctor Says Finding of Method of Administration Will Bring Desired Result.

By the Associated Press.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Nov. 11.—A discovery which it is hoped will pave the way to a cure of diabetes is announced by Dr. John R. Murlin, director of department of vital economies at the University of Rochester. The discovery was described by Dr. Murlin before the Rochester Medical Society last night as follows:

"We claim the credit for having proved, first, that pancreatic extract can restore the lost power to oxidize sugar to animals rendered diabetic by removal of pancreas. This we have confirmed many times the past summer and this we maintain is the crux of the whole problem. The best method of preparation for administration to human classes probably has not been achieved. We must find a way to give it by mouth, as thyroid extract is given, and then the terror of diabetes will have disappeared. One of the major causes of death will have been completely removed."

BARRACKS FUGITIVE CAUGHT

Youth Charged With Robbery Captured by University City Patrolmen.

Juel Aston, 18 years old, one of five prisoners who escaped from the guardhouse at Jefferson Barracks Friday night, was captured by University City patrolmen at 9 o'clock last night, after a chase among box cars on the Rock Island Railroad tracks east of Pennsylvania avenue.

Aston was seen by the officers with another man, standing near one of the freight cars. When accosted, the two men ran, and one escaped. Aston later said the one who got away was Edward A. Jordan, another of the escaped soldiers, and who, he said, was serving a two-year sentence for desertion. Aston was being held on a charge of grand larceny and first-degree robbery. He was charged with holding up men in training at the citizens' training camp at Jefferson Barracks last August.

How to Test for Wood Alcohol

FIFTH IN A SERIES OF ARTICLES ON WHAT YOU CAN LEARN IN A SCIENTIFIC LABORATORY.

This deadly chemical is alcohol in name only—Persons without training should have test made by laboratory experts—Pellets and powders sold as wood alcohol detectors are of no value—The resorcinal test and the tell-tale red ring which reveals the poisonous content in liquor :: ::

By DR. E. E. FREE
Fellow, American Association for the Advancement of Science.

THERE is probably no police department in the United States which has not had to deal, since prohibition, with scores of cases of poisoning by wood alcohol. In some cities every holiday brings its fatalities. The scientific detective is asked continually, "What is wood alcohol?" "How can I test for it?" Here are the answers.

Few people understand what wood alcohol is. It is imagined to be a variety of ordinary alcohol, not very different from the alcohol of drinkable spirits. This idea is totally—and fatally—wrong. Wood alcohol and ordinary alcohol are entirely different chemical substances. It is merely an accident due to the scientific system used in naming different chemicals that causes both of these substances to be called alcohol. They really have no more in common than pillow slips and cowslips.

Ordinary alcohol, the alcohol of wine, beer or whisky, is called by chemists ethyl alcohol. Each molecule of it contains one atom of oxygen, two atoms of carbon and six atoms of hydrogen. It is always this alcohol, ethyl alcohol, which is produced by yeast. "Grain" alcohol is ethyl alcohol made when yeast works on malted grain. "Potato" alcohol is made in the same way when yeast works on cooked potatoes. Both of these and all of the yeast-formed kinds of alcohol are the same thing chemically. They are ethyl alcohol, the kind of alcohol which is drinkable; or, if you prefer, the kind which is drinkable without necessarily involving the Coroner.

Wood alcohol is something very different. It is another chemical thing altogether. It has very different properties. Among them is the fact that it is very poisonous; not merely intoxicating but actually deadly, as cyanide or bichloride is deadly.

The chemists call wood alcohol methyl alcohol. The molecule is smaller and simpler than the molecule in ethyl alcohol; it contains the same one atom of oxygen, but only one carbon atom and four hydrogen ones, instead of the two carbons and six hydrogens of its less deadly namesake. It is not made by yeast at all or by any kind of fermentation. It is made by roasting wood in a very hot retort until the wood is entirely disintegrated. Wood alcohol is one of the products of the break-down of wood.

Chemists have still other substances which they call alcohol, a whole series of them. Propyl alcohol, for instance, has three carbon atoms and eight hydrogen ones to one atom of oxygen; butyl alcohol has four carbons and 10 hydrogens, amyl alcohol has five carbons and 12 hydrogens, and so on. These alcohols are used in many industries. Others are known, still more complicated ones. Some of them are not liquids at all but are waxy solids which look like parafine.

Few of these, however, will be encountered by the scientific detective. His problems will concern the methyl, or wood, alcohol and the cases in which it gets confused, more or less fatally, with the drinkable, or ethyl, one. He needs to know not only that they are different and which is which, but also how to tell them apart. In particular he needs to know how to test for the deadly methyl one.

The use of methyl alcohol, or, as I shall call it from now on, wood alcohol, in concocting drinks is probably never intentional. Leaving compunctions out of account, the most unscrupulous bootlegger would hesitate before inviting the investigation certain to follow a case of poisoning. The trouble lies in the similarity of name. To an ignorant bootlegger alcohol is alcohol. He never notices the "wood" part. And while wood alcohol and ordinary ethyl alcohol, when reasonably pure, are distinguishable by anyone either by taste or smell, the product of the basement whisky factory is so doctored with red pepper, tobacco juice and less reputable flavors that not even an experienced chemist can derive from its smell or its taste anything except a strong desire not to drink any. If the scientific detective needs to know whether or not wood alcohol is present in some alleged whisky he must use some chemical test.

And now, before I raise unduly the hopes of my antiprohibition readers, let me say that none of the chemical tests known to me is to be recommended for social purposes. No genius has yet devised any convenient pellet which, when dropped into a glass of your host's bad hooch will fire a gun or ring a bell or otherwise sound any alarm. Some desperate soul, thirsty but cautious, has suggested the companionship of a trained guinea pig who may be induced to partake a little in advance and whose increased hilarity or premature demise will indicate to his master whatever action is appropriate. But this has difficulties, too.

I don't know, to be quite plain about it, any way that you can test bootleg booze for wood alcohol easily and quickly, or without going through a more or less complicated laboratory procedure. As for the various quick tests, tablets and chemicals in vials, etc., which are on the market, I, for one, prefer not to depend on them.

But these devices for avoiding social hazards are not of much professional interest to the scientific detective. He comes in, usually, after the party instead of before. He arrives between the doctor and the undertaker and his job is to find out why the undertaker had to be sent for. Does or does not the undrunk remnant of liquor contain the clew?

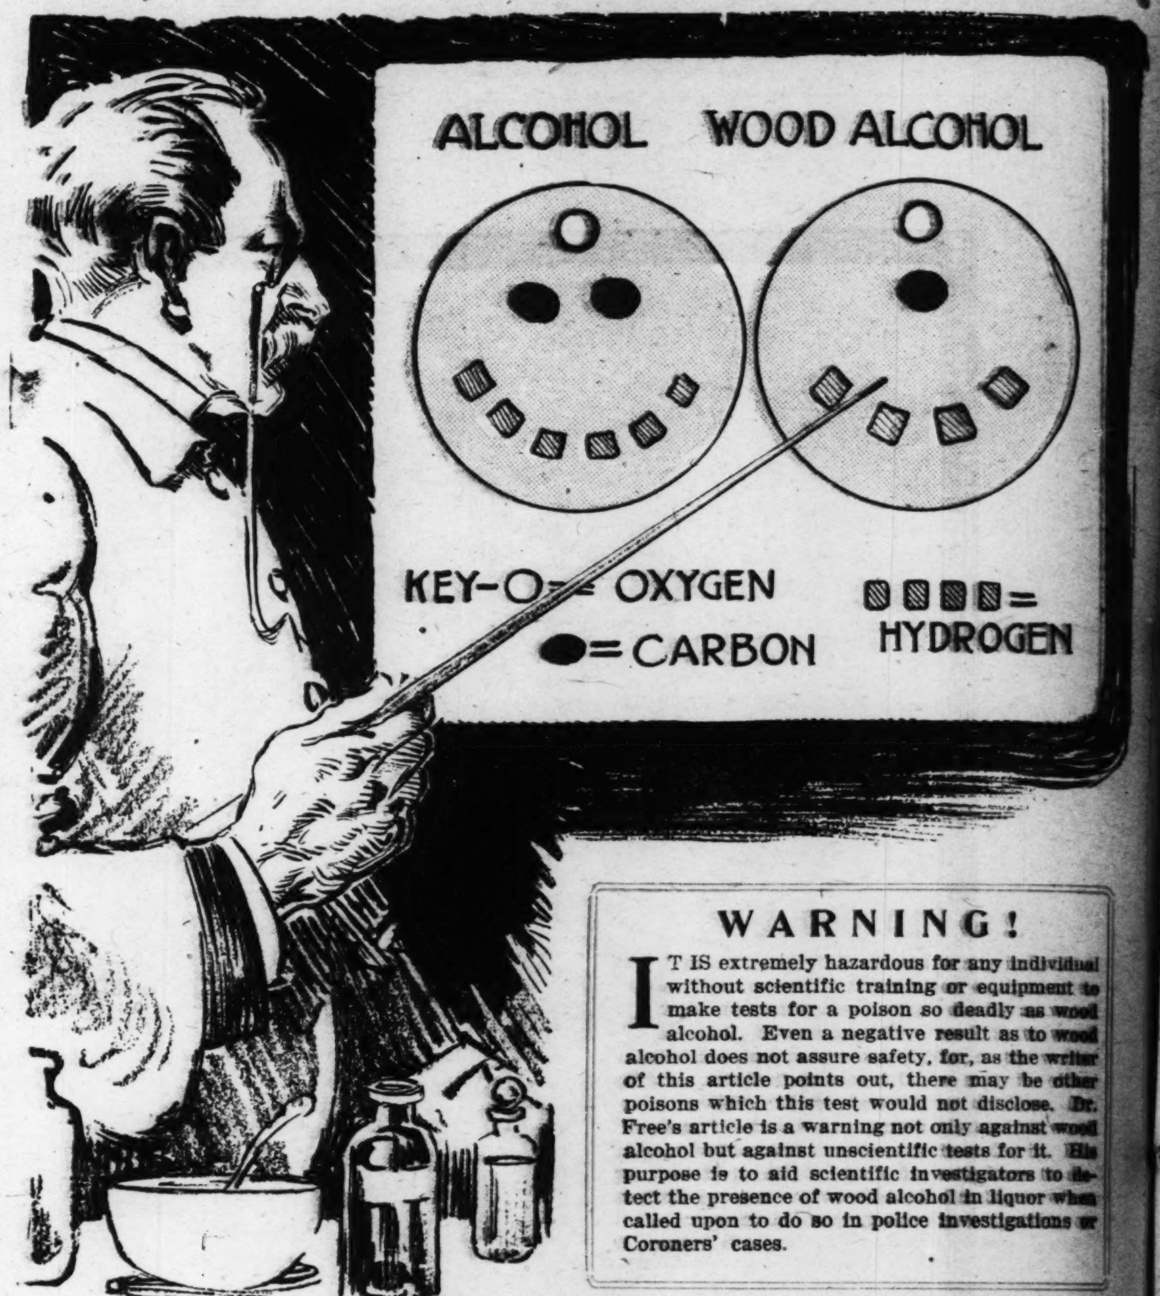
As in most other cases of chemical detective work, final decision must rest with an experienced chemist, working in a completely equipped laboratory. The first care of the man who is on the ground must be to secure and preserve a sample for the chemist. But chemical analyses take time. Sometimes the detective needs to know quickly, even if not very surely, whether the stuff is wood alcohol or not.

For this we use a test called the resorcinol test. The only chemicals needed are a one-half per cent solution of resorcinol in water, which any chemical supply house can furnish you, and some concentrated sulphuric acid, such as is used in making battery acid for automobiles.

First, try some of the suspected spirits with a match. If it catches fire dilute it with twice as much water. Now bend a piece of ordinary copper wire into a spiral and heat one end of the spiral in the flame of a candle or gas jet until it is red hot. Dip this hot end into some of the diluted spirits in a small glass. Reheat the wire and dip it in again. Repeat this heating and dipping six or seven times.

If wood alcohol is present in the sample the contact with the hot copper will decompose some of it into formaldehyde. Now you must test the sample for this formaldehyde, using the solution of resorcinol. Add a few drops of this solution to the sample and stir it. Then put a little of the concentrated sulphuric acid in the bottom of a wine glass and carefully pour in some of the sample (containing the resorcinol solution) so that it floats on top of the heavier sulphuric acid, just as the layers of liqueurs used to float on each other in the pre-Volstead pousse cafe. If there was any considerable proportion of wood alcohol in the original spirits, a brilliant red ring will appear around the wine glass at the point where the layers of acid and of spirits are in contact. If this red ring does not appear, and if you feel sure from previous trials with the test that you really know how to use it correctly, you may assume that wood alcohol in the liquor is not responsible for the deaths.

As I explained above, this result should be confirmed by careful laboratory tests. Your failure to see the red ring does not necessarily mean that the liquor is above suspicion. There might be some other poison in it. Take a sample anyway. But this resorcinol test may give you a line on the case quickly, help you to decide what clews to follow up or what suspects to hold.



WARNING!

IT IS extremely hazardous for any individual without scientific training or equipment to make tests for a poison so deadly as wood alcohol. Even a negative result as to wood alcohol does not assure safety, for, as the writer of this article points out, there may be other poisons which this test would not disclose. Dr. Free's article is a warning not only against wood alcohol but against unscientific tests for it. His purpose is to aid scientific investigators to detect the presence of wood alcohol in liquor when called upon to do so in police investigations or Coroners' cases.

"You Can Keep Your $100,000. Love is Everything."

SO wired elder daughter of Bohumir Kryl, famous bandmaster, signing "Mrs. Paul Taylor White"—Breaking agreement of six years ago to remain unmarried until 30 and receive fortune for undivided devotion to art, Josephine Kryl, violinist, weds young musician—Now he cooks and she washes the dishes, but they're happy—Father still has Marie, pianiste, pretty, and 22, who entered similar agreement.

"LOVE is everything," says Mrs. Paul Taylor White. She said it the other day by wire. The telegram came from Boston to Chicago. When it reached its destination, the handsome home of Bohumir Kryl on South Spaulding avenue, there was music in the air that was by no means a concord of sweet sounds. The famous bandmaster and cornet virtuoso tore open the yellow envelope, read the contents and tossed the message to the floor. Marie Kryl, beautiful daughter of the musician—his younger daughter—picked it up and read it:

"Dear Papa: You can keep your $100,000. Love is everything. MRS. PAUL TAYLOR WHITE."

For three days Papa Kryl had been worrying. Three days earlier his elder daughter, Josephine, had disappeared. She had left home carrying a small handbag, stating that she was going to her dentist. Incidentally, she might do a little shopping while downtown. When she failed to return after a reasonable absence, the household called up the dentist.

"No; Miss Kryl has not been at my office today," said the dentist.

Other inquiries were made, but very quietly. The family disliked such notoriety as attends the sudden disappearance of a charming and accomplished daughter. Josephine was 24, had traveled extensively, having studied the violin under the illustrious Ysaye, and no doubt she knew how to take care of herself.

Marie Kryl, younger sister of Mrs. White, who will get $100,000 if she does not marry until she is 30.

Mrs. Paul Taylor White, who sacrificed $100,000 to marry a violin instructor.

Nevertheless, Bandmaster Kryl worried some. He was expecting every hour to hear from his daughter. Surely she had written, or she would wire. And, as it turned out, she wired. Save for the figures in that telegram, which count more than a single word for charge purposes, it was a 10-word message. Mrs. Paul Taylor White was trying to economize. Even an extra word or two in a telegram is to be eliminated if possible when one has given all for love. "When the gods arrive," sang Emerson, who also used to inhabit Boston, "the half-gods go." "Give all for love," sang also the bard and philosopher, whose advice Miss Josephine Kryl had taken, in toto.

Mr. Kryl sat down in the first chair he saw after he read that message. Miss Marie did not appear to be half so much upset as did her father. In fact, she smiled. Her father did not smile—not for a considerable period. He possesses the artistic temperament; and when that temperament is of the musician variety, and is possessed by one whose whole being is devoted to music as an art, to whom everything that is not music is nothing, the possessor is not supposed to smile when he gets a piece of news which turns his world topsy-turvy.

Letters followed the telegram, explaining matters to the satisfaction of everybody except Mr. Kryl. Mrs. Paul Taylor White is quite happy in Boston. When her father is able to readjust himself to conditions—if he can—he, too, will be happy. In fact, his friends aver that he is accepting the situation with as much grace as can be expected under the peculiar circumstances. He is said to have no particular objection to young Mr. White as a son-in-law. The trouble is that he was not willing to accept any man as a son-in-law, either for Josephine or for Marie. According to his theory, music and matrimony do not go well together. He had conceived for his two beautiful daughters an undivided allegiance to music. What he had failed to do was to appraise at true force and value the capers of Cupid.

Six years ago the noted bandmaster, who in earlier days was a cornetist under John Philip Sousa and outgrew his master in technique, had an important interview with his daughters. Josephine then was 18, Marie 16. The girls had been brought up in almost nunlike seclusion. From early childhood they had been dedicated, by their father, to careers in music. Josephine had cultivated the violin, Marie the piano. Both had appeared in local concerts and recitals, with more than honorable mention. Their talents were unmistakable. Perhaps genius lay slumbering, to awaken and make the world ring with the fame of the Kryls feminine. The daughters would carry on. When the father was old and his career was of the past, they would continue the family tradition. They had been educated with that ideal always in view.

"Art," said Mr. Kryl to his daughters, "is everything in life, and music is the greatest of the arts. Josephine, you are a violinist, and already a very good one. Marie, you are a pianiste, and one of promise. In your hands I place my ambitions, my fondest hopes. I shall spare no expense to make you the great artists you wish to become. You shall be placed under the greatest masters to study."

The girls expressed delight and gratitude. That was their grand desire.

"But," continued the father, "marriage is fatal to art. You must live for art alone. If you should become interested in men, your playing would suffer. It will be worth while to devote yourselves wholeheartedly to art and have no fancies as to matrimony.

"And now," said Papa Kryl, "I am going to make you a proposition and request of you a promise. I will give each of you, at the age of 30, provided you are not married, the sum of $100,000. Do you agree?"

The daughters agreed. They promised him that they would be wedded only to art, that no man should intrigue their interests and divide their allegiance, and at 30 they would claim the financial reward.

Josephine was sent to study under Ysaye and came back far advanced in the technique of the violin. About two years ago she made her debut at a recital in Chicago. There was present a large audience of her friends and of those who straightway became her friends when they heard her play. The applause was highly gratifying, both to Josephine and her father.

"Ah!" he cried, in delight; "you have done it—you have done it! You will do great things in the years to come! I am proud of you!"

Marie also went abroad. Famed masters of the pianoforte on the European Continent instructed her. She came back a pianiste of performance as well as promise. Her father expressed high satisfaction with her improvement. She appeared from time to time in public, always with enviable success.

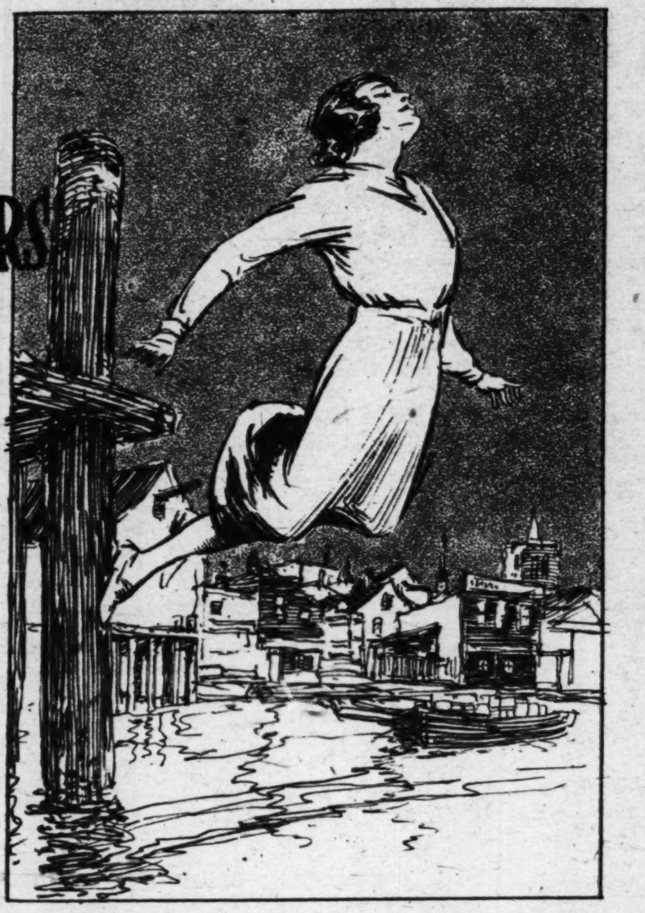
THE VICAR AND THE MISSING GIRL

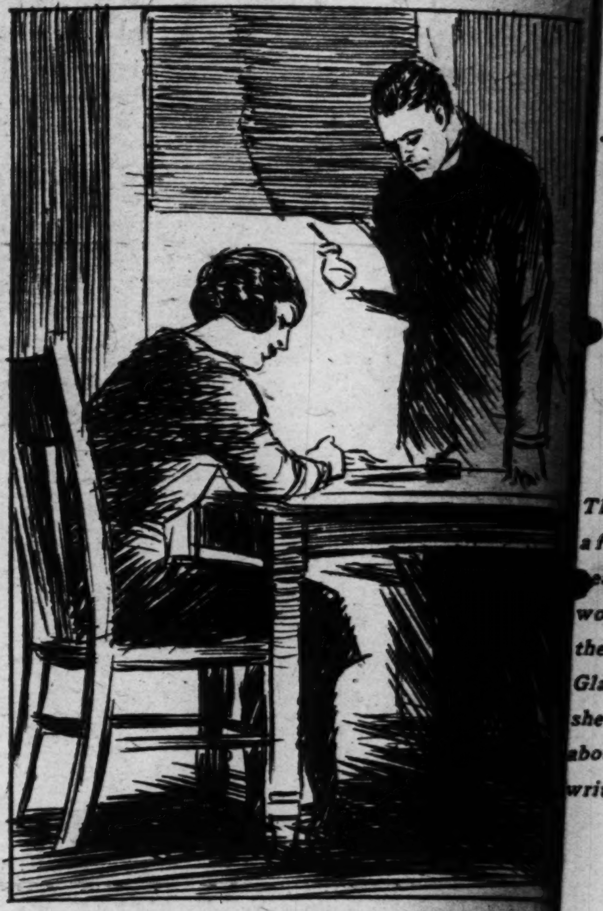
THE NEIGHBORS SAY:

That the young woman has drowned herself, in some rural river. The father charges the vicar with being "solely" responsible" for the disappearance.



THE VICAR SAYS:

That she had a talent for writing, and was collaborating with him in secret on two novels.



Although Gladys Pryce, 25, was last seen by her family in January, they have believed that she is living—Parish gossip revealed, and accusations against the Rev. E. C. E. Wheeler, when nightwatchmen report having talked in the following October with girl answering description of Gladys — Letters home, when young woman vanished, indicated she was going to throw herself into the river :: ::

WHERE is Miss Gladys Pryce? Is she living, as her parents believe, or did she drown herself nine months ago in the River Ouse? In either event, is the Rev. E. C. E. Wheeler responsible for her disappearance, as her father has declared emphatically and tried to prove? Has the girl, as her mother suggests, entered a convent under an assumed name? Was she—or is she?—as the Rev. Mr. Wheeler has said repeatedly, "one of the whites, purest gentlewomen," or did she lead "a double life" with him? Was she assaulted by a strange man, as the preacher avers she told him in confidence, and did she end her life five months afterward because of her condition?

Or, is Gladys Pryce tramping about England and gathering material for a book describing her wanderings? Had she—or has she?—quite unknown to her parents, a talent for writing, and had she written short stories and articles of merit? Did she really collaborate with the married minister in writing two unpublished novels, one dealing with the Church of England's attitude toward spiritualism, the other with the Church's attitude toward divorce?

All England seeks answers to these questions.

England, like America, has her mystery of the minister and the woman church worker. Though by no means so sordid as the Hall-Mills matter in New Jersey, the story that comes from across the water has certain features that make it unique amongst human tragedies. Particularly to persons who affect keenness in the more or less new science of psychoanalysis does the English affair appeal. Observed from any angle, it supplies a study in moods and motives not common to everyday life.

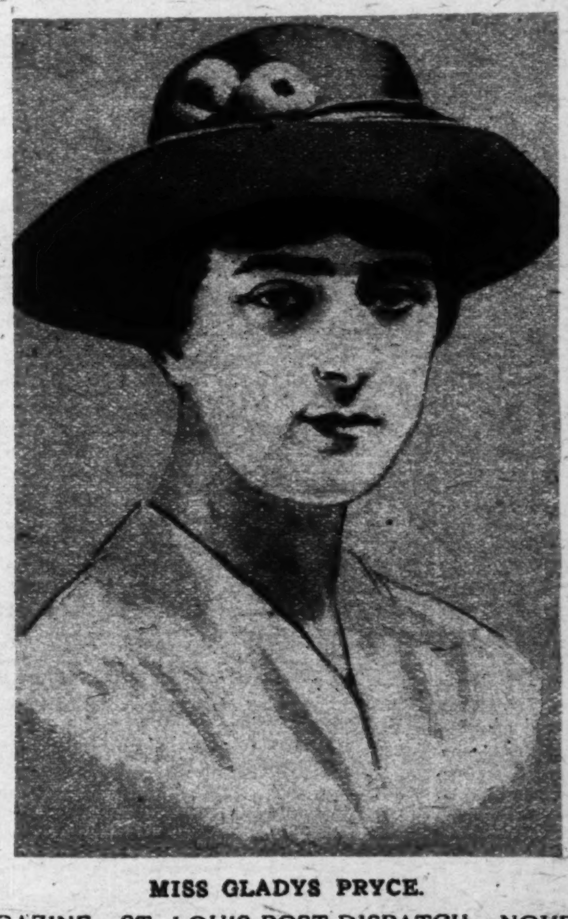
Let us begin with a recent chapter in this nine-months tragedy, then work back toward the beginning. On a night in October two watchmen employed at a great cement works near Gravesend, on the Thames River, 30 miles below London, had an unusual experience. The watchmen are by name Elijah Porter and W. A. Saward, men of excellent reputation for reliability in their community.

"When I was on a round of inspection," said Saward, "about 1 a. m., I noticed a young woman coming toward me through the fog. When she came up she asked if I knew of a watchman's hut where she might go in and rest. 'I am tired to death,' she said, and she looked it. It was a cold night. She talked like an educated woman. I decided to let her enter the little lodge where Porter and I have headquarters for our work."

Here Porter takes up the story: "Saward brought her into the lodge and I made her a cup of tea. Her dress was shabby, but she spoke like a lady and was very self-possessed. She was wearing a black velvet hat turned up all around, a pepper-and-salt short coat, with a dark gray jumper, with red fancy work about the neck. Her skirt was a faded blue and her shoes a kind of suede canvas, very much run down at the heels. Her shoes were so bad that she asked us for a knife so that she could trim them down. As she looked so hard up I pressed a few coppers on her, and Saward gave her a shilling; but it was as much as we could do to get her to take the money.

"She told us that she had been on the road for more than seven months; had tramped to Yorkshire, then to Dover, to Gravesend, and was then on her way to London to get help from her friends. After we had given her a book to read she said: 'It's funny, but I am writing a book myself, about my travels. I have already written one book with somebody else, about divorce.' In a little handbag she carried some papers. She showed us an envelope of one of the letters, which was addressed to 'Miss Gladys Loraine (or Moraine), Postoffice, Gravesend, Kent.'

"The girl mentioned she had received money sent to her at different postoffices while she had been on tramp, after she had pawned all her jewelry, which included a pearl necklace. By putting some chairs together we made her a sort of bed, and, after letting down her hair, she lay down for a couple of hours, and left the lodge at [illegible] a. m.



MISS GLADYS PRYCE.

"The next day we saw a photograph of the missing Miss Pryce, and both Saward and I are quite sure it is that of the young woman we helped. Saward has since seen Miss Pryce's uncle, and the police are making inquiries."

The story told by Saward and Porter reawakened throughout England the public's interest in the unsolved mystery of the disappearance of Gladys Pryce on Jan. 30, last. Newspapers in both London and the provincial cities reopened their columns to the mystery. London was dragnetted by detectives, both official and private, for the parents of the missing girl had offered a handsome reward for information as to her whereabouts. They and all other relatives have maintained all along that Gladys Pryce is living. The general public seems to have accepted the theory that the young woman had drowned herself, for some reason not made known, in a river of rural England.

Publication of the night watchmen's story had the effect of bringing to light some amazing chapters in the mystery, not hitherto made public. These developments involved the name of the Rev. E. C. E. Wheeler, vicar of St. Barnabas Church, at Woodford, in the County of Essex, a married man with a grown daughter and other children. They made it plain that for the better part of a year there has been moving through the parish of St. Barnabas an undercurrent of scandal whereby insinuations of misconduct on the part of the vicar have passed from mouth to mouth. The most direct of these was an utterance by E. J. Pryce, father of the missing girl, at a meeting in the parish hall called by the Rev. Mr. Wheeler in an effort to stem the tide of gossip against his good name.

"I ask Mr. Pryce to say what he charges me with," the vicar challenged at the meeting.

"I charge you with being solely responsible for the disappearance of my daughter," Mr. Pryce replied.

The record of that unique gathering, held not many weeks after Gladys Pryce disappeared, had been kept from the public. A stenographer had taken down all that was said by the vicar in his own defense and by members of the Pryce family and other parishioners. Transcripts had been made. Both the accused minister and the father of the girl had vouched for the accuracy of the transcript.

In the advertisement in which Mr. Pryce offered a reward for information as to his daughter's whereabouts the girl was described as follows:

"Age 25; height about 5 feet 5 inches; dark brown hair, large gray eyes, strongly marked brows; rather serious face. When she left home the young woman was wearing a rust-color coat-dress, trimmed with same color silk braid, a long, dark-brown velour cloth coat, with large collar, and a dark brown velour hat trimmed with brown silk ribbon. She also wore black woolen stockings, black laced shoes and doe-skin gloves."

Gladys Pryce lived with her parents in a residential district known as the Broadway, Woodford Green, Essex, and was a daily commuter to and from London, where she held a responsible post as clerk in a business establishment. She took the train for London as usual on Monday morning, Jan. 30. Three letters written by her on Sunday night were posted that day in London. One was to her parents, which she inclosed in a second letter to the family doctor, asking him to "break the news gently" to her people. Both of these letters indicated that she was going to St. Germans, a little village on the River Ouse, and that she intended to throw herself into the stream.

ENGLAND'S BAFFLING MYSTERY

The third letter, with a parcel of books, was sent to the Rev. Mr. Wheeler. In this letter she is said to have written, "I am going to the river." Persons living at St. Germans reported that they saw a young woman answering the description of Miss Pryce in that village and on the towpath along the river shortly after her disappearance from London. The most thorough search, including a dragging of the river bed, failed to find any trace of her body.

Gladys Pryce had been a regular attendant at St. Barnabas Church for years. Until after her disappearance it appears that nobody had noticed that the middle-aged vicar had taken any especial interest in her. After she mailed the letters and was lost to view, the Rev. Mr. Wheeler began to evince a remarkable interest in the matter. He went to St. Germans and made inquiries. He took to the newspapers a photograph of the girl which her parents never had seen.

"I approached certain of the daily newspapers," said the vicar at the meeting of church officers of the parish which he called in the parish hall, "concerning the disappearance of Miss Pryce, because I felt that more should be done to give publicity which might lead to her being found. I wrote to the Bishop of Chelmsford that I intended to make these further efforts. The result was a letter to me from her father, who wrote: 'The advertisements must cease, otherwise it will be the worse for you. We know it is only a blind.'"

At this meeting Mr. Pryce made a detailed statement, the gist of which he said he already had laid before the Bishop. He stated that a week after his daughter's disappearance the vicar had called at his office in London and, in his absence, interviewed his brother, William Pryce. "He was questioned," said the father, "as to the reason why he had occasion so frequently to telephone and write to my daughter at her office address in the city. He would not admit he ever telephoned to her, but had occasionally written to her there, as he knew her parents disliked him. He was also asked to explain a letter he had written on the Monday, Jan. 30, before he knew of my daughter's disappearance, and which had been redirected, unknown to him, and forwarded to me." The letter from the vicar to the girl, dated "Monday," read:

"Dear My Child: I did not see you as I hoped tonight, and I expect you did not go to music lesson. Would you mind wiring one word, 'Right,' at the dinner hour tomorrow, and I shall know all is well? Forgive me being somewhat stupidly inquisitive as to your welfare. It will be quite right to wire, as I am expecting to hear in re preacher. Ever yours, ——. In great haste. No need to sign telegram."

The letter was unsigned. "The only explanation he gave me," said Mr. Pryce, "was that on the Sunday evening after church he noticed she had a flushed face and appeared to be in trouble, and he felt anxious about her, so much so that he cycled along the road intending to meet her coming from her music lesson. My brother told him that that explanation was too paltry to be accepted. As to the request of using one word, it was so that his wife, who was in a nervous condition, should not understand if she opened the telegram in his absence."

Mr. Pryce stated that the vicar had refused to show the letter Gladys had written to him, saying that it contained personal matters. A formal demand then was made for its production and the Vicar replied that the letter had been destroyed. He had admitted only that the girl wrote: "I am going to the river."

Mr. Pryce, continuing his statement, said that inquiries at the girl's place of employment disclosed that she had been receiving letters there two or three times a week in the same handwriting and also had been called on the telephone about twice a week by the same man; that she had been seen in London walking with a clergyman, who had been seen waiting for her outside the office and also accompanying her to the city in the morning, and that the clergyman answered to the description of Mr. Wheeler.

"Inquiry agents have interviewed Mr. Wheeler at the vicarage," said Mr. Pryce, "but nothing fresh could be elicited from him, except that he was certain that there was no man in the case.

"In August, 1920, my wife, daughter and I went to Bournemouth for our holidays, and after spending a fortnight there my wife and I returned home, leaving my daughter to remain another week by herself in the boarding house we stayed at. No sooner had we left than Mr. Wheeler appeared at Bournemouth and was seen by one of the proprietresses of the boarding house, and also by other visitors staying in the house, with my daughter on several occasions in the neighborhood. They were also met on one occasion by Mr. Harry Smith of Woodford, who stopped and spoke to Mr. Wheeler, who mumbled something about his niece, not exactly an introduction, but leading Mr. Smith to infer that the young lady he was with was Mr. Wheeler's niece. Mr. Smith has since identified her from a photograph as being my daughter. It is significant that Mr. Wheeler has given four distinct reasons for his visit to Bournemouth."

The fourth reason Mr. Pryce set forth as follows: "And now he tells me that he was there in consequence of some secret work he was engaged upon in collaboration with my daughter, which he had promised her he would not tell anyone about."

Mr. Pryce said that Mr. Wheeler had volunteered the statement that in August, 1921, he saw Gladys Pryce at a place called Hunstanton, whither he went for "a short holiday by myself" when Mrs. Wheeler and their children were living temporarily at a place near by. "On the Monday afternoon, on going out, I met Gladys Pryce in the street, and again saw her once or twice during my stay at Hunstanton," the vicar's alleged statement read.

Now follows a significant part of the statement reputed to the vicar as quoted in Mr. Pryce's presentation of the case at the parish hall meeting:

"Toward the end of November (1921) I saw her in church at Woodford (St. Barnabas), and she appeared to be in trouble. We went into an inner room there. She then told me that after I left Hunstan-

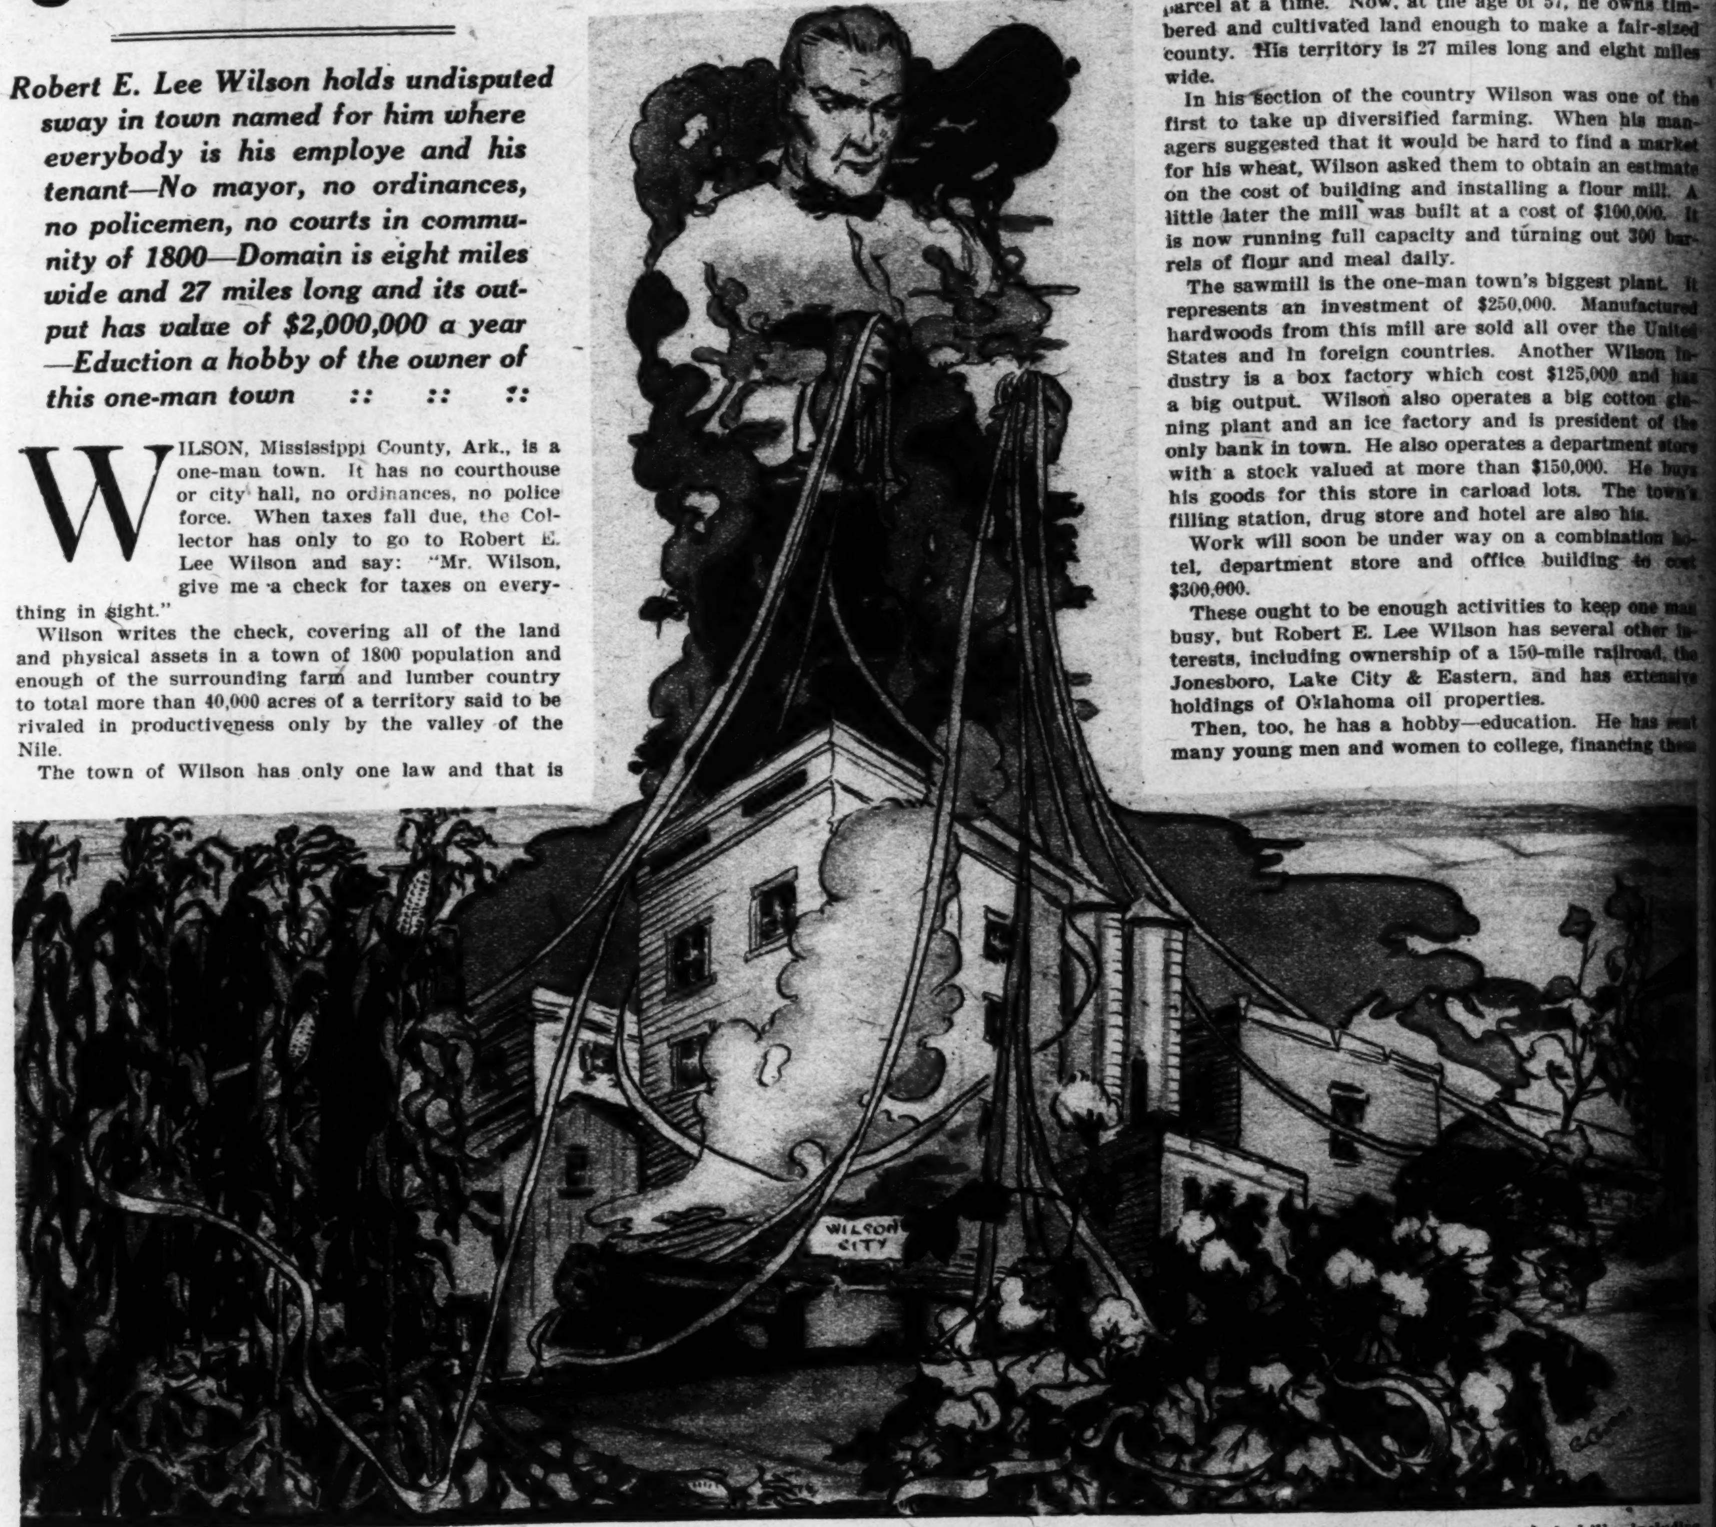
Just Like a Feudal Baron of Old: Arkansas Town

Robert E. Lee Wilson holds undisputed sway in town named for him where everybody is his employe and his tenant—No mayor, no ordinances, no policemen, no courts in community of 1800—Domain is eight miles wide and 27 miles long and its output has value of $2,000,000 a year—Eduction a hobby of the owner of this one-man town :: :: ::



WILSON, Mississippi County, Ark., is a one-man town. It has no courthouse or city hall, no ordinances, no police force. When taxes fall due, the Collector has only to go to Robert E. Lee Wilson and say: "Mr. Wilson, give me a check for taxes on everything in sight."

Wilson writes the check, covering all of the land and physical assets in a town of 1800 population and enough of the surrounding farm and lumber country to total more than 40,000 acres of a territory said to be rivaled in productiveness only by the valley of the Nile.

The town of Wilson has only one law and that is unwritten. It is that everybody must work. There are no idle men in the town and vagrants are not tolerated. There can be no undesirable citizens because Wilson, who owns all the houses, will not rent homes to undesirables.

Everybody in Wilson is a renter. Even the one man who owns and runs the town writes a check, payable to himself, every month for $45. That is the highest rent paid, and only two other citizens pay that much. Other tenants pay $12.50 to $27.50 a month, with a few exceptions, where the rentals are $30 to $40.

Every home in Wilson, whether it be a three-room cottage or a mansion, is equipped with electric lights, tub and shower baths, hot and cold water, telephone, hedge, flower garden, truck patch and chicken yard.

Wilson has industries that represent a total investment of $1,000,000. These produce annually nearly $2,000,000 worth of manufactured hardwood lumber, ginned cotton, flour meal and mixed feed. The raw material for these products comes from a 40,000-acre tract of cultivated and timbered land, all owned by Wilson. The principal agricultural products are cotton, corn, wheat and alfalfa. Wilson's 18 cotton plantations, with a total area of 8000 acres, will produce this year 6600 bales of cotton.

Corn was harvested from 6000 acres, wheat from 1200 acres and alfalfa from 800 acres. The farm is so big that Wilson employs his own agricultural expert and a general plantation manager who his supervision over 18 zone managers.

There is no season of idleness in the town. When the harvest is over the farmhands are put to clearing land or working in the logging and timber industry.

Wilson is now reputed to have a fortune of more than $10,000,000. He began operations with a small sawmill on the site of the town which bears his name. With the profits from the sawmill he bought up land a parcel at a time. Now, at the age of 57, he owns timbered and cultivated land enough to make a fair-sized county. His territory is 27 miles long and eight miles wide.

In his section of the country Wilson was one of the first to take up diversified farming. When his managers suggested that it would be hard to find a market for his wheat, Wilson asked them to obtain an estimate on the cost of building and installing a flour mill. A little later the mill was built at a cost of $100,000. It is now running full capacity and turning out 300 barrels of flour and meal daily.

The sawmill is the one-man town's biggest plant. It represents an investment of $250,000. Manufactured hardwoods from this mill are sold all over the United States and in foreign countries. Another Wilson industry is a box factory which cost $125,000 and has a big output. Wilson also operates a big cotton ginning plant and an ice factory and is president of the only bank in town. He also operates a department store with a stock valued at more than $150,000. He buys his goods for this store in carload lots. The town's filling station, drug store and hotel are also his.

Work will soon be under way on a combination hotel, department store and office building to cost $300,000.

These ought to be enough activities to keep one man busy, but Robert E. Lee Wilson has several other interests, including ownership of a 150-mile railroad, the Jonesboro, Lake City & Eastern, and has extensive holdings of Oklahoma oil properties.

Then, too, he has a hobby—education. He has sent many young men and women to college, financing them all the way through. He paid all their bills, including clothing, board, books, tuition and spending money. When one of his adopted wards is turned out of college an itemized statement of the expenditures is presented to him by Wilson. In most cases the graduates are employed by Wilson in his various industries and permitted to pay back the funds advanced in small installments.

The town of Wilson today has a combination high and grammar school which is rated as one of the best of its kind. The original cost of the building was $175,000. Wilson started the fund with a $75,000 cash gift and then organized a school district to include all of his property. This is taxed to maintain the school, Wilson, of course, being the only taxpayer, as no one else in the district owns any real estate. Not only did Wilson give the site for the school, but he also set aside 100 surrounding acres of land for school use. There is an annual school deficit of $10,000, but that is easily wiped out. Wilson writes a check.

The three-story school building has 24 rooms and has all the conveniences of the modern city school, including electric lights, gas, hot and cold water, a gymnasium, an auditorium and a cafeteria where warm meals are served at cost. Five conveyances carry the pupils to and from the school. Many of them travel in a specially constructed motor car over the tracks of Wilson's railroad.

The faculty of the school is trained in country life service. Boys are taught agriculture, farm mechanics and shop work. For the girls there are special courses in domestic science, cooking and sewing. The high school offers a full four-year course. There is a playground which compares with those in large cities and on the campus are baseball diamonds and a football field and a covered grandstand.

Artesian wells supply the waterworks system and the water is furnished at meter rates, making the average cost 75 cents to $1.50 a month.

Though the town has expanded as far as it can with its present industries, Wilson has further ambitious plans. He is considering the construction of a cotton mill. When this project becomes a reality the demand for labor may double the town's population.

Of the 1800 inhabitants of Wilson, 1000 are negroes. The white residents live on one side of the Frisco right of way and the negroes on the other. The negroes have their church and school and a hotel which accommodates 150 guests. They have their gardens and their chickens and many advantages not usually enjoyed by negroes in Southern towns.

There is little lawlessness in Wilson. While the town has no peace officers, a Deputy Sheriff of Mississippi County has headquarters there. The procedure with undesirables is very simple. The town is not incorporated, but is the private property of Robert E. Lee Wilson. As long as a man behaves himself and shows a willingness to work he is welcome. If he is a lawbreaker or a vagrant he becomes at once an undesirable trespasser. He is ordered off Mr. Wilson's property and the order has the full co-operation of public opinion and the Sheriff. The offender simply has to move on. As owner of the town Wilson is conceded the right to decide whether any given individual is fit to live there.

The annual aggregate payroll of the Wilson industries is about $290,000, exclusive of bonuses to managers, superintendents and foremen.

The revenues from the properties last year were as follows: Cotton, ginned, $750,000; box shooks, manufactured, $400,000; hardwood lumber, $450,000; flour, meal and mixed feed, $150,000; ice, $25,000.

About 30 carloads of hogs were shipped from the plantation last winter. This winter's shipments will be larger. The town produces a sufficient quantity of chickens, turkeys and eggs for home consumption.

The farming operations have grown so extensive that Wilson recently employed Loy E. Rast, an agricultural expert, who is breeding and developing pedigreed strains of seed for the Wilson plantations.

Hundreds of acres of the property will produce more than a bale of cotton to an acre this season. These fields have all been gone over and searched for high-yielding, prolific plants, to be used as parent strains of new varieties which eventually will be developed.

About 1000 individual plants have been picked and the cotton put in separate bags. Most of the selected plants matured more than 100 bolls each this year. Seeds from these plants will be planted in separate rows next year.

A large level field of 100 acres has been set aside as an experiment station and breeding plot. Sixteen acres were used for this purpose last year. It was interesting to look over the different rows planted from the seed of individual stalks. Though the plants seemed equally desirable when picked, they show great variation in ability to transmit their good qualities. Some rows show exceptionally high yield, while others are worthless. One stalk this fall produced 129 bolls, of which 125 had five locks to each boll. Through this process of elimination the best grades for planting will be obtained.

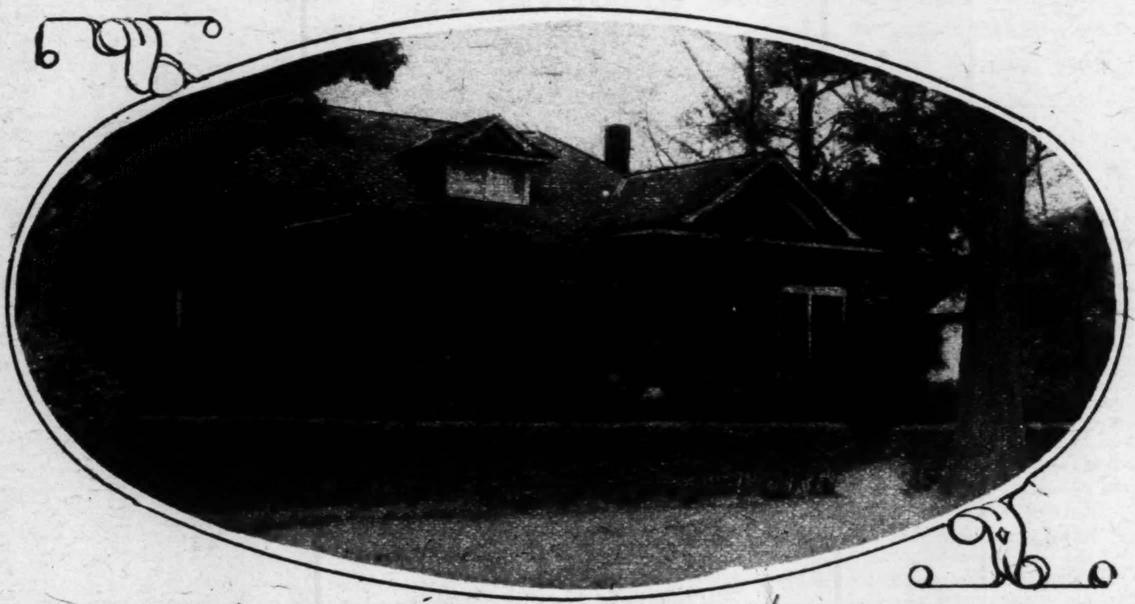
In all his years of experience, Mr. Rast said, he never had found such wonderful opportunities for cotton breeding as afforded by the Lee Wilson plantations. The thousands of acres planted each year are from pure, pedigreed seed on uniform soil, together with climatic conditions such as to force early development and produce seed at least 10 days earlier than when planted farther south, according to Mr. Rast. That is why the Wilson land forms an ideal location for the production of planting seed of a superior quality. Wilson has plans for the largest scientific plant-breeding establishment in the South.

Wilson's every industry and each of his 18 plantations is operated upon a systematic business basis. A submanager will start out at the beginning of the year. He will buy his implements, food, feedstuffs and supplies from a Wilson store. He will borrow money and pay interest on it to a Wilson bank. He will pay rental, like the average tenant, and this rental goes into the till of the Wilson organization. He buys electric current from a Wilson industry. His ice comes from a Wilson factory. He buys lumber from a Wilson mill. He gets his flour and meal from a Wilson plant. He pays the average profit and interest charged elsewhere.

He keeps an independent set of books. At the close of the season he settles up with all the Wilson concerns to which he is indebted. He pays each a profit, and each pays him a profit for what it buys off his plantation. His books go to the executive offices at Wilson, where a corps of expert accountants keep at their finger tips every detail of Wilson's varied industries.

To rightly inspect the Wilson properties would require about a week. J. H. Crain, the general manager, says that if he hurries he can ride over the properties in two days, but ordinarily he visits each unit and goes over it once each week.

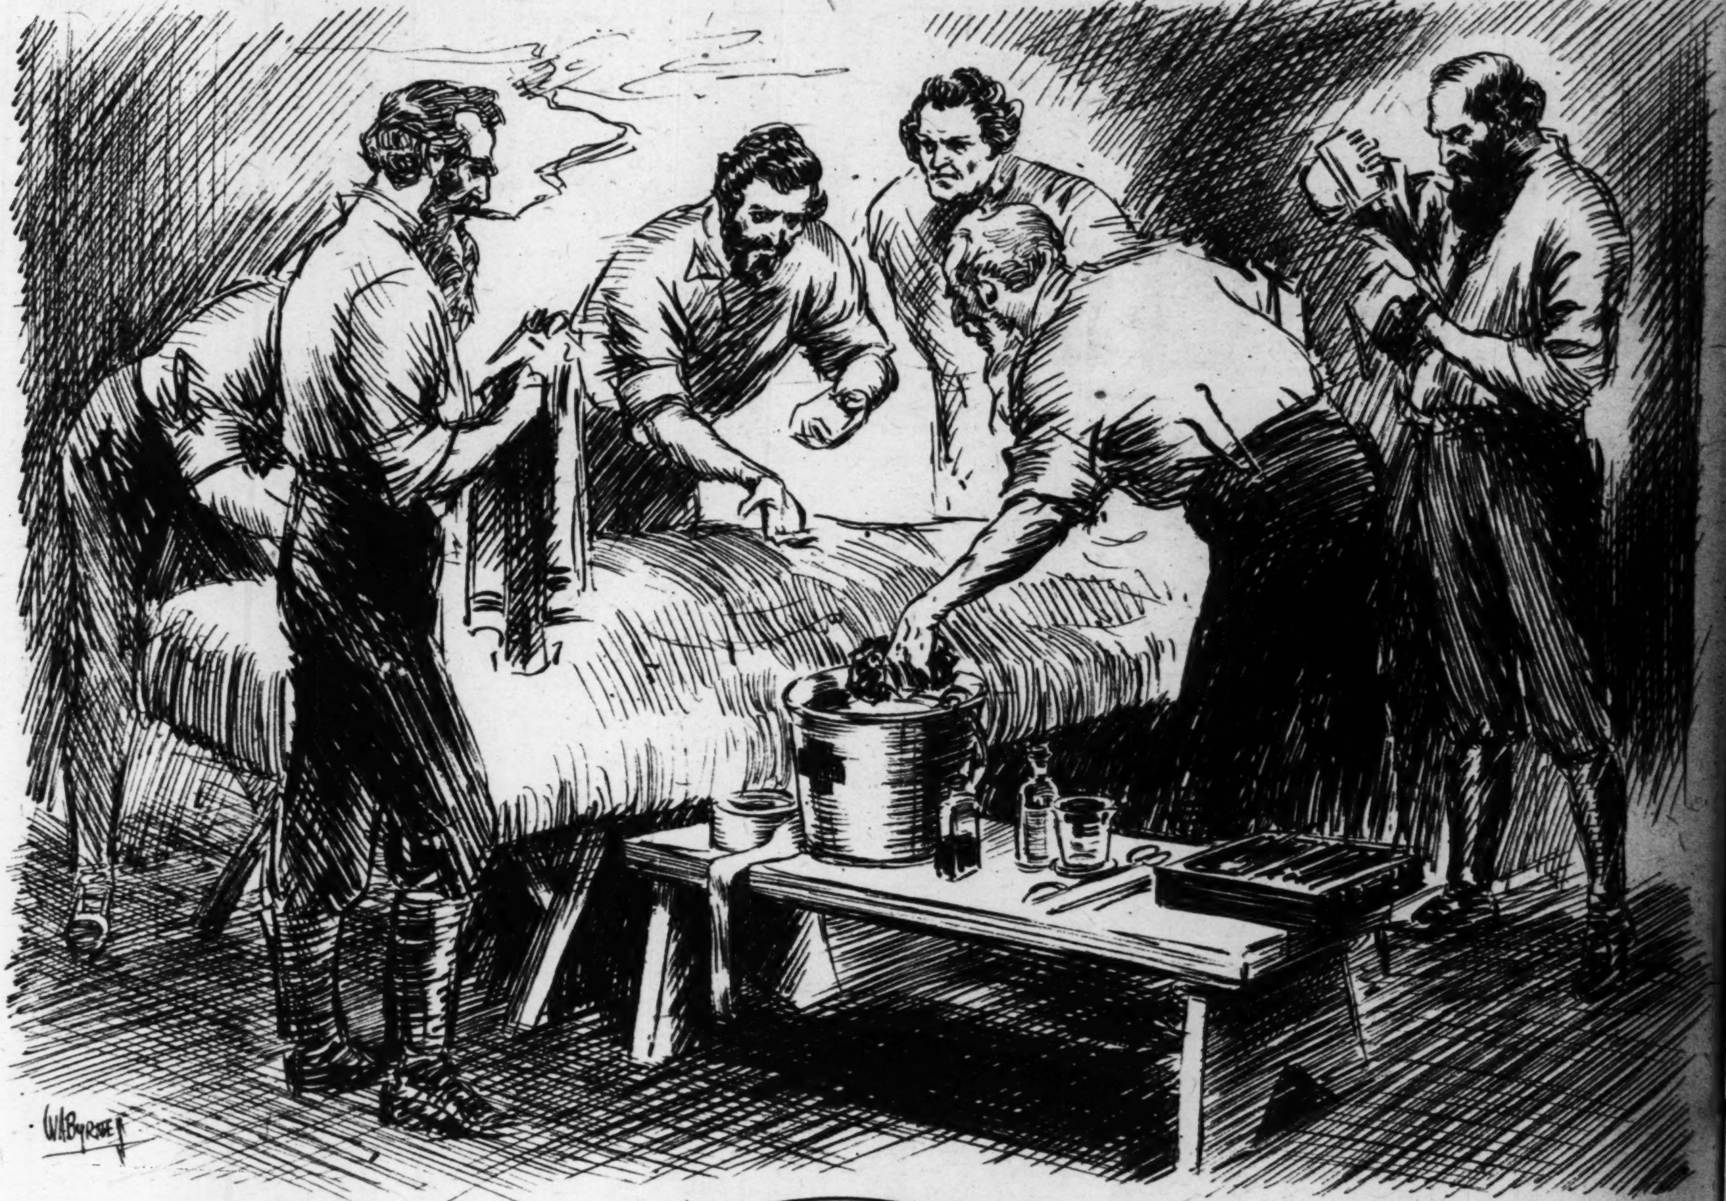
The executive offices of the Wilson industries are on the main street of the town. They are presided over by Wilson's only son, who also is his only partner. The elder Wilson spends about two days a week there. Much of his time is devoted to looking after his interests elsewhere and to visiting his branch offices, one of the most important of which is in St. Louis.



THE HOME OF THE MAN WHO OWNS AND RUNS THE TOWN.

For some time fast trains on the Frisco between Memphis and St. Louis failed to stop at Wilson. Few passengers wanted to board the fast train at Wilson, but Mr. Wilson suffered from the inconvenience. His railroad crosses the Frisco track. One morning as the fast Frisco hove in sight from St. Louis, one of Mr. Wilson's trains had "stalled" across the Frisco rails. The fast train had to stop. A railroad official was on the train. He was too wise to question the coincidence of that "stalled" train with the boarding of the train by Mr. Wilson himself. What he did do was to send a wire to the Frisco executives. Now all trains, passenger or freight, fast or slow, stop at Wilson.

WHAT SIXTY YEARS OF SCIENTIFIC PRO



In Civil War days a surgical operation was a fearsome thing when wounds were swabbed with a sponge repeatedly dipped in the same bucket of water and instruments were not sterilized.

Amputation was once resorted to for injuries now considered relatively slight—The victim of appendicitis was left to die—Sterilization of surgical instruments was unknown and insanitary methods of operating caused many deaths—Hospitals were regarded with horror and trained nurses were unknown :: ::

DR. W. W. KEEN.

A VIVID picture of medical and surgical conditions 60 years ago and of the remarkable progress in curative and remedial science since that time was sketched in a recent lecture to the American College of Surgeons by Dr. W. W. Keen, emeritus professor of surgery in the Jefferson Medical College of Philadelphia.

Dr. Keen, recipient of the Henry J. Bigelow medal for his services to American science, is one of the most noted American surgeons. He entered on the practice of his profession in the early '60's, when choloform was the only known anesthetic, when science took no account of bacteria, when the sterilization of instruments before an operation was unknown, when injuries now considered minor had no remedy but amputation, when diphtheria was almost always fatal and the removal of the appendix was unknown.

Present-day conditions as to disinfection and sterilization of surgical instruments show a striking contrast with a period no longer removed than that of the Civil War, when surgery was practiced under conditions which now would be considered barbarous. This is no disparagement to the surgeons of those days. They followed the accepted practice. As they did not know of the danger of germ infection from external objects they took no precautions against it.

The scene at a surgical operation in those days was vastly different from the present-day setting.

It was no uncommon sight to see a bucket of water sitting beside the patient's cot. The surgeon or his assistant would dip a sponge in the water, swab out the wound and drop the sponge back in the bucket. It was used again in this way until the water in the bucket was reddened by blood from the sponge.

Surgeons of that time wore no masks or gloves and preliminary disinfection of the wound and the surgeon's instruments was not dreamed of. After an operation on one patient the knife was used on another after only a perfunctory washing, or possibly only after being dipped into the bucket of water.

In his review of conditions, past and present, Dr. Keen said:

"As late as the '80's and even into the '90's, there were, in most hospitals, no trained nurses. Hospitals were then avoided as if leprous, instead of being our best refuge. The wards were full of fear and not seldom of despair, instead of, as now, of hope and alert expectation of recovery. Even the surgeons themselves were none too well trained.

"Similarly, the medical use of the thermometer was practically unknown. We judged of fever by placing the hand on the arm or neck. But we never intimated it in degrees—only in adjectives, as 'none,' 'slight,' 'considerable,' 'high' or 'very high.' I doubt if there were half a dozen thermometers in the army of the Potomac. Mitchell Morehouse and I had to import those we used in Turner's Lane Hospital in 1863-64. Imagine the mother of half a dozen children today without a thermometer as a guide to whether the doctor should be called! Of the blood, our knowledge was most primitive.

"We had no knowledge of test meals. The stomach tube was practically used only in cases of poisoning. Here I must stress the chief advance in scientific and practical surgery ever made—the development of bacteriology and its application to surgery by the antiseptic method of Lister.

"Originally, the antiseptic ritual was complicated, now it is very simple. At first, germs in the atmosphere were believed to be our chief enemies. Now we know that they exist on every material object. In fact, deadly germs are ubiquitous. Everything needs to be disinfected before the operator, assistants or nurses dare touch it or allow it to touch the wounded surface. All of this knowledge has been achieved since 1867.

"Bacteriology and the antiseptic method marched steadily onward and finally won all the world by the late '70's and early '80's, saving a few fossil doctors and the ignorant antivivisectionists. Asepsis was a natural development. The scientific basis of both antisepsis and asepsis is identical, the only difference is the means by which to attain the same end.

"Until the '80's or '90's we had not vaccines against the various disease-producing germs. Smallpox was the only enemy we could combat by vaccination. We had no serums. We knew not how to prevent tetanus, diphtheria, malaria, yellow fever and other diseases of which we have now the whiphand.

"Surgical tuberculosis could not be definitely diagnosed in bones, joints, or in what we called 'scrofula,' because we knew not the real cause of tuberculosis until 1882.

"Our then so-called sanitation was ineffective because our real enemies—bacteria—were unknown. Now sanitation is our principal reliance because its sound basis is bacteriology.

"The operative surgery of my surgical youth consisted briefly of: (1) Amputations, most of which we can now avoid; (2) ligation of arteries, especially for aneurism and secondary hemorrhage; (3) occasional excision of joints—not seldom fatal; (4) removal of external tumors, such as cancer of the breast; (5) ovariotomy. But this was not done until the tumor was so large as to imperil life.

"Surgeons who removed ovarian tumors were persecuted. As a student I heard them called murderers in the Jeuerson clinic because 'two out of three of their patients died.' It ought to have been worded, 'One out of every three recovered,' for every recovery was a rescued life. Now, thanks to McDowell, the Atlees, Pasteur and Lister, and many others, the mortality is less than one in a hundred.

"Even the cause of appendicitis—then called 'perityphlitis,' 'local peritonitis' or 'abscess in the right iliac fossa'—was not known till Fitz's epochal paper in 1886 revealed the appendix as the real criminal.

"Before 1895, treacheotomy for diphtheria, then called 'membranous croup,' was a frequent tragedy. In 1895 the blessed antitoxin was discovered and, presto! as if by magic, tracheotomy for diphtheria became infrequent, and for years past, one may say, has been unknown! Never can I forget, when I was 12 years old, the death of a darling younger brother, who was allowed to be choked to death before our eyes by this now almost vanquished monster.

"For preventing hemorrhage we had only the Spanish windlass and Petit's tourniquet—no Esmarch's bandage, and elastic tubes. Our instruments, from germ-gathering, velvet-lined cases, were laid out on a table—and not disinfected. We had no artery forceps, hence, primary hemorrhage was profuse. We had no modern retractors; the hypodermic syringes and the aspirator were not in general use. These came into common use toward the end of the Civil War.

"So far in this rapid review I have told you what we dared not do and could not do in the past. Let me now swiftly recount by glorious contrast some of the things that we now can do, what, in fact, is almost a daily routine in every great hospital.

"After a single battle in the Russian campaign, Larrey, Napoleon's great surgeon, performed not less than 200 amputations. Today of 200 similar cases, sometimes even with wounds involving joints—a great additional danger—we can conserve the majority of these useful limbs without amputation.

"In the head, the new surgery trephines without hesitation, for trephining per se now involves very slight danger. Tumors of the brain are removed, abscesses opened, the ventricles are punctured with impunity or distended with air for diagnostic purposes. Foreign bodies are removed and the Gasserian ganglion, and even the hypophysis and the pineal gland are no longer beyond the surgeon's reach. Spinal tumors are now exactly located, and are constantly removed. Now, the heart is sutured for stab and gunshot wounds, with a recovery of over 50 per cent. Foreign bodies, revealed by the uncanny X-rays, have been removed even from its interior.

"The esophagus is attacked for cancer, the stomach is opened with impunity, and as for the intestines we have yet to find any condition or injury which prevents our interference. Hernia is now a curable condition, with no appreciable mortality. Strangulated hernia and intestinal obstruction, if quickly operated on, have now only a small mortality. Gallstones and even the entire gall bladder are removed every day or two. The spleen is anchored, sutured or even removed at will. The pancreas is no longer inaccessible; the kidney is sutured in place, drawn outside the body for inspection, decapsulation or incision if, as the X-ray will have informed us, there are stones in its interior. A portion of the diseased kidney can be removed, or even one entire kidney, if hopelessly damaged by disease or accident. Stones in the ureter are readily removed. We successfully transplant skin, bones, joints and even half-joints—a much more difficult procedure. We are gradually throttling disease at its very birth, and preventing its onslaught upon the health of the world.

"Vaccination (May 14, 1796), anesthesia (Oct. 16, 1846) and antisepsis are the three greatest blessings in the realm of medicine conferred on man since the Christian era began. Pasteur's work was fundamental. Lister's genius applied Pasteur's discoveries to surgery. This brought the greatest revolution surgery has ever witnessed. The germ theory of disease is no longer a theory, but an abundantly proved fact. Those who hold that the tubercle bacillus, the typhoid bacillus, the diphtheria bacillus, and other germs, do not cause the diseases named, have minds that are simply impermeable to any arguments addressed to reason or common sense.

"In December, 1847, Sir James Y. Simpson of Edinburgh first used chloroform. In 1884 local anesthesia by cocaine was introduced by Koller. The number of local anesthetics is now large, and the end is not yet. In 1909-1910 Melze and Auer introduced insufflation anesthesia, a great improvement in special cases.

"Nitrous oxide, a long-established anesthetic for such brief operations as drawing a tooth or opening an abscess, later was combined with oxygen, and, largely through the efforts of Crile, the further combination of these two with novocaine or other local anesthetic, has been a most important advance, greatly reducing shock and mortality. Once there were no ward classes. Students only looked on at operations. The microscopes of that day were far behind those of today in mechanical construction. The whole teaching faculty consisted of seven professors and one demonstrator (anatomy). Save the dissecting room, not one laboratory existed. Now at Jefferson we have 18 laboratories. The very first laboratory of research in the United States was established in 1884 by Mr. Carnegie, in connection with the Bellevue Hospital Medical School. The Blue Cross has recently published a list of 86 such laboratories, all doing fine work for science, for animals and for mankind. In 1888, Gowers' and Horsley's paper, describing the first localization and subsequent removal of a tumor of the spinal cord, was a momentous forward step. Drainage for empyema, in 1854, was a wonderful boon."

Chats With Pope Pius XI Whi

PIUS XI is under the impression that his portrait has been painted too often. And the results in some cases have not been satisfactory to him. This in part accounts for his delay in granting sittings to an American artist, Arnolfo Muller-Ury, who went to Rome in September charged with a double commission and apparently with every arrangement made beforehand.

But this artist, by birth an Italian Swiss, happened, unfortunately, to be the fifth in the series of painters of the Pope.

Mr. Muller-Ury was kept waiting 10 days before the Pope gave him an appointment. When reminded of the artist by household officials the Pope would say: "Yes, yes; I know; I will see."

"The delay worried me," the artist related when he returned, "because I knew it would be necessary to compress within a few weeks work that should occupy six months. But all turned out happily. I reached Rome on Sept. 1, waited until Sept. 11, and left Rome with my two precious canvases on Oct. 11. But I had painted, painted, painted every daylight moment of the interim.

"It did not take long to experience a feeling of ease in the presence of this dignified but amiable and democratic personage, after he had shown some interest in his portrait, which he did on the second day of our sittings. And the Pope explained the reason of this early indifference.

"'I feel,' said his holiness, 'that I am too young a Pope to have so many likenesses of me given to the world.'

"Never austere, talking easily on every sort of subject, but always with thoughtful reserve and with deference to the opinions of others, my great sitter impressed me as being not only admirable but amazing.

"Filled with enthusiasm, I longed to be able to give him to posterity in a picture as real as that of Pope Julius in the Pitti, painted by Raphael, one of the few portraits of the world. I smile at myself for this grandiose ambition, knowing as I do my own quality and that my masters are not Raphael and his school, but rather Velasquez, Titian and Franz Hals. But it does a painter no harm to feel a great admiration for his subject.

"The Pope sent for me one morning to come to his library, where he wished the sittings to be given. At once we had a little difference of opinion. There were three great windows in this room, with cross lights which promised [illegible], while in the adjoining reception room, commonly called the throne room, there was only one great window. I wished to paint him there.

"The Pope yielded at once and said: 'You shall choose also the robes in which you wish to paint me. Matters are now in your hands.'

"As I aspired to paint him as the august Pope and again in a less formal way, I begged him to wear for the first picture what was customary in his reception of Ambassadors. In this picture you see him therefore in white, with a white biretta and a shoulder cape of violet-toned velvet. On his right hand, holding an encyclical, is the sapphire papal ring. The left arm falls easily by his side. A tapestry forms the background of this picture. The Pope is seen in three-quarters and the canvas measures 40x50 inches. This picture is destined to go to the Catholic University at Washington.

"The second picture is a canvas 24x27 and shows the Pope attired less formally, as when he received 20,000 pilgrims from various parts of Italy. He wore a hat as he entered the hall where they assembled but immediately took it off. A feature of this second canvas is the cross he wore. This portrait is the property of the Archbishop of New York. It was preferred by the Pope to the other because in it he seems more simple. He said to me more than once:

"'I do not prescribe, but I would wish to be presented to my fellow men as a man.'

"And, in truth, it is as a man that Pius XI impressed me. In his wide charity there could be nothing too small for him to observe and have a fellow feeling for. With a wonderful intellect trained in every kind of knowledge and with an unwonted imagination he is nevertheless a simple and modest person, with kindliness in the smile which often lurks on his lips. It is but the suspicion of a smile, however.

"The Pope directed that a studio be prepared for me in a room of my [illegible] and well lighted, and opposite the loggia where Raphael's famous cartoons are. In addition he offered to send there his ring and cross and such of his vestments as I needed in my painting, an offer that I gladly accepted. In this improvised studio I spent every day until the finish of my work from 7 in the morning to 7 at night.

"The Pope gave sittings in the morning from 8:30 to 9:15 and sometimes less. We were alone, but never later than 9:15 and too often sooner than that, his Secretary of State came for him and interrupted the sitting.

"The Pope spoke Italian to me always, and as it is my native language, although in 30 years in America I have grown rather rusty in it, facility soon returned. Although he is a great linguist, speaking French, German, Spanish and many dialects of tongues, he only understands English and does not speak it to any extent.

"The Pope at first talked little, and I was so absorbed in my task that I made no attempt to converse, nor indeed should I have done so without his lead. But at our four afternoon sittings, when his mind was doubtless freer from weighty matters than at the beginning of a day, he talked a great deal and on almost every subject.

"On two occasions he made the remark that he wished to be known as a Pope easily accessible by anyone who asked an audience, and without discrimination of creed and nationality. I cannot remember what incident in the day's news caused him to say this or another fine sentiment. As he never referred to politics it could not have been inspired by other than a general longing. He said:

"'I wish all men to feel that I am their brother, Jew or Mohammedan. The unrest of the world comes from the forgetfulness of this relationship, this brotherhood which will one day be universally acknowledged.'

"The Pope asked me many questions about America, and especially about our great and ever-growing New York. He said to me, with a smile:

"'I feel about your vast country as I imagine one inland bred may feel about the ocean. Perhaps if I should see America I might say with him about the ocean: "Is this the mighty ocean? Is there no more?" But let him embark on it and lose sight of land, then he realizes its immensity.'

"It was of art and books, however, that he chiefly talked, and when we came to the end of the sittings and he had asked me to paint a portrait for himself, he desired to be shown with a book in his hand. Said he:

"'It is the natural way to paint me, for I have lived with books all my life, first in the great library of Milan and second as Cardinal Ratti, librarian of the Vatican. Never in my life have I been happier than among those old volumes of the early Latinists, poring over some crabbed text, fingering incunabula. Paint me, then, if you will be so good, as in the act of reading from a book by one of my faithful old friends.'"

Of course, the artist promised to make the picture, which is still to be painted. Mr. Muller-Ury asked permission to photograph the Pope's hand. The Pope granted the request and the artist at once produced his camera. A wonderful hand it is, the artist said.

The Pope is a powerful man, broad in the shoulders and at least 5 feet 9 inches in height. He is too stout and confesses the defect himself, but attributes it to too little exercise. His voice is sweet,

New Light on the Origin of Life

By DR. EDWIN E. SLOSSON.

Where did the first animals or plants get their food in a world of mineral matter? has been a puzzling question—Laboratory facts now indicate possibility that the action of sunlight on the sea might produce enough sustenance for primitive cell to grow, multiply and develop into higher forms :: :: ::

WAS the first living being a plant or animal? How could either originate out of nonexisting matter?

These are questions that hitherto have baffled scientists. They could trace back, more or less satisfactorily, the lines of development of plants and animals to the simplest and most primitive forms of life, but there they ran up against an insurmountable wall, on the near side of which was the world of living organisms and on the far side the world of inert mineral and inorganic matter.

We all know that nonliving matter can be converted into living matter, for we do that ourselves whenever we eat or breathe. We all know that green plants have the power of building up sugar and starch and wood (the so-called carbohydrates) out of the water of the soil and carbon dioxide of the air, for we can see them do it any sunny day.

But it is life only that can bring into the living organism this inorganic material. Water and carbon dioxide, which is plain "soda water," does not spontaneously change over into sugar or start to grow into a plant. It requires green colored granules of the leaves, called chlorophyll, to effect this transformation.

But chlorophyll is a very complicated chemical compound. It is formed only by green plants as they develop in the sun's rays from white sprouts. So the plant must exist before chlorophyll is formed. But on the other hand a plant could not exist unless it got its energy from the sugar and other stuff stored up previously by some chlorophyll-bearing plant. Even the simplest green plant cannot live and grow on its nutritive salts in the sunshine unless it has a bit of plant stuff to feed on as a starter.

We might surmise, as a way out of the dilemma, that animal life came first on the earth and in decaying supplied the primitive plants with the necessary organic foodstuff. But here we are blocked because animals are parasites of plants. They live on the sugars and so forth that the green leaves have stored up by means of sunshine.

So this was the perplexing situation. Plants can feed on animals or other plants. Animals can feed on plants or other animals. But where could the first animals or plants get their food when there was nothing but mineral matter in the world? It was worse than the old question, which came first, the hen or the egg?

Of late we are beginning to get light on the problem. The wall between the living and the nonliving is crumbling down. Certain sugars and proteins, such as the plant forms that we eat, can now be made in the laboratory out of inorganic material. Artificial cells have been constructed that grow and crawl and feed themselves and stick out feelers and subdivide very much like living cells. It has been found that ultra-violet rays, that is, light of such short waves that it cannot be seen, can convert water and carbon dioxide into sugar as chlorophyll does.

These short waves are not contained in the sunshine that reaches the earth today, but it is found that ordinary rays may act the same way in the presence of certain substances such as iron rust in water. These same energetic rays are able to incorporate the nitrogen of mineral salts into compounds like the protein of the living cell. So here we see the possibility that the action of the sunlight on the sea in primordial periods—or even in the present—might produce sufficient food to give a single cell a start in life and enable it to grow and multiply and develop into other and higher forms.

But how this primal cell got to going in this way the biologists are only beginning to surmise. Dr. E. J. Allen at the recent Hull meeting of the British Association for the Advancement of Science ventures the theory that the first organism was of the animal sort and spherical shape, but that it gradually grew a tail or whip that enabled it to rise to the sunny surface of the sea whenever it sank below, and that it there acquired the chorophyll by which it could make its own food out of the air and water. This is far from knowing what did happen in those early days, but it is a great advance to be able even to speculate as to how it might have happened, since not many years ago it seemed that it could not happen at all.

The Vicar and the Missing Girl Parishioner

ton, either on Thursday or Friday, someone attempted to molest her. She said she felt lonely after I had left, and went for a walk past the golf links on to the sand dunes, where a strange man, whom she did not describe, followed and molested her. Nothing more was said about it, so I concluded that nothing serious had happened, until the Sunday, Jan. 29, before she disappeared.

"Then she came to me, and we went into the inner room at the church, and I drew from her that she was quite sure she was in trouble. I wanted to see her on the Monday to tell her that if she did not tell her parents I should tell them. My only regret is that I did not do so on the Sunday. On the following Tuesday I got the letter from her inclosed in a parcel of her books. I went straight to her doctor and told him in confidence the whole thing, and as it was in confidence he, naturally, would not tell the parents. On the same Tuesday I went from the river on to Hunstanton, thinking she might have gone there, and saw the police there, and gave a description of her, and also inquired at the house where she had stayed whether she had been there. The landlady had not seen her. * * * It is true that I used to telephone her in the city frequently, concerning church matters, and also to 'cheer her up.' I never on any occasion met her in London except at a church at Holborn during the dinner hour."

Mr. Pryce, after reading some further correspondence, said he would let the meeting form its own conclusions. The Rev. Mr. Wheeler then arose, beginning his defense by saying:

"I take it that it is usual to start with the assumption that a man is innocent until he is proved guilty. These gentlemen start with the assumption that I am guilty, and they have built up everything on that assumption. It is all very well for Mr. Pryce to say there has been no charge made against me. Mrs. Pryce has been making these charges in and out of the houses throughout the parish.

"With regard to the statement drawn up in a solicitor's office, which has been read, and which I am supposed to have made, there has been nothing in my handwriting except that one letter I wrote to Miss Pryce. No statement they have got has been written by me. Some of these statements are perfectly true and some are a tissue of lies. I am going to take them bit by bit. I want you to remember that when I went to see the Messrs. Pryce at their office I went, from start to finish, in the honest endeavor to help them find Miss Pryce, and by so doing brought down this avalanche. They said: 'We don't want your help.' But they took advantage of it. They sent down a private inquiry agent and a representative of the Society for the Prevention of the White Slave Traffic."

The vicar explained his presence in Bournemouth simultaneously with that of Miss Pryce by saying he went there to visit his uncle, and stated that when he met in that town Harry Smith of Woodford he supposed that Smith knew Miss Pryce, who waited for him across the street when the vicar crossed over to greet Smith, who was accompanied by his wife and baby. He told Smith, he explained, that he was there visiting his uncle and nieces, stating that instead of nieces he meant cousins. As to the visit to Hunstanton, he said he went there because his wife urged him to go.

"It has been intimated," said the clergyman, "that Miss Pryce has been living a double life, and I am going to prove to you tonight that that is a lie. There is nothing in Miss Pryce's life that would not bear the light of day. She is one of the whitest, purest gentlewomen I have ever had the honor of knowing. * * *

"Miss Pryce was known as a young lady very gifted with a musical voice. She was known to me as being gifted in yet another way. Unknown to her parents, she had written a certain series of articles and short stories, and it had long been a desire of mine to put into novel form the church's attitude with regard to certain great subjects of the day. I suggested to her, and I take the full responsibility, that she should help me with the book. First of all, it was to deal with the church's attitude with regard to spiritualism. As I could see her only at intervals of a few minutes on Sunday mornings before going to Sunday school, I said I was going down to see my uncle at Bournemouth and that we would discuss it there. I stayed a week there, and saw her frequently. * * *

"Work on the book was proceeded with during the year. Then we come to 1921, and apparently during that year, according to certain statements that have been made, we had been having clandestine meetings in town. The Sunday school excursion in 1921 was to Southend, but before that I had spoken to Miss Pryce with regard to another book, and that was to be the church's attitude with regard to divorce."

The vicar stated that Miss Pryce agreed to collaborate with him in the writing of the book on divorce, a second novel. The girl visited St. Germans, and it was agreed that certain scenes in the book should be laid along the River Ouse.

"It took several months to write that book," the vicar continued. "At the end of November I was in church and was going out of the Lady Chapel when I saw Miss Pryce sitting down. I went and sat beside her, and it was with great difficulty that I got anything out of her. She said there was something wrong with her, and that it was like the heroine in the book. I have never told Mr. Pryce that she said someone had criminally assaulted her. I said she said someone had followed her.

"One Sunday morning Miss Pryce was very much upset. She told me her mother had said to her: 'Do you go down to St. Barnabas to confession?' Then the trouble began. Miss Pryce promised that she never would go to confession any more. On Jan. 24 I wrote another ending to the story. Her ending was that the heroine had drowned herself. I wrote another ending and posted it. On Wednesday evening I found in the letter box of the church the returned alternative ending, with these words written across: 'No, such an ending would be impossible, I think. It had to be.—G. P.' "

Subsequently, the vicar said, he met Miss Pryce in the church hall and she seemed very much distressed, remarking, "It is true." He inquired what was true. "What I told you in church some months ago," she replied. "I will tell the doctor or your parents," said the vicar, according to his statement. "I must tell someone. Come and see me tomorrow night."

"And then we had to go into the church," continued the clergyman's statement. "I came down to the foot of the church after evening service that Sunday and spoke to one or two ladies down there, and I spoke to Miss Pryce as well. She was very flushed, and it was not only I who noticed it that night; there were several people who noticed Miss Pryce in church and her strange appearance."

In explanation of the letter he wrote to Miss Pryce asking her to wire him the word "Right," and in reply to a suggestion that he wrote in that way to deceive his wife, the vicar said:

"I never tell my wife the private affairs of my parishioners. Doctors, I take it, tell their wives nothing of the private affairs of their patients, nor solicitors the affairs of their clients. I take it that it is the duty of a clergyman who has been told a thing in confidence to keep that confidence. I promised that I would not mention about this writing," referring to the two novels he said they had written in collaboration. "My reason for mentioning it now is to save her name from the foul things that are being said about her in this parish, and for the sake of the church. * * *

"I say once again, these insinuations and accusations that have been made against Miss Pryce and myself—these accusations are a lie. Miss Pryce was and is one of the purest, truest gentlewomen I have ever had the honor of knowing."

Mrs. Pryce, mother of Gladys, interviewed recently by a newspaper reporter, said she had no knowledge of the unpublished novels which the vicar said her daughter had written in collaboration with him.

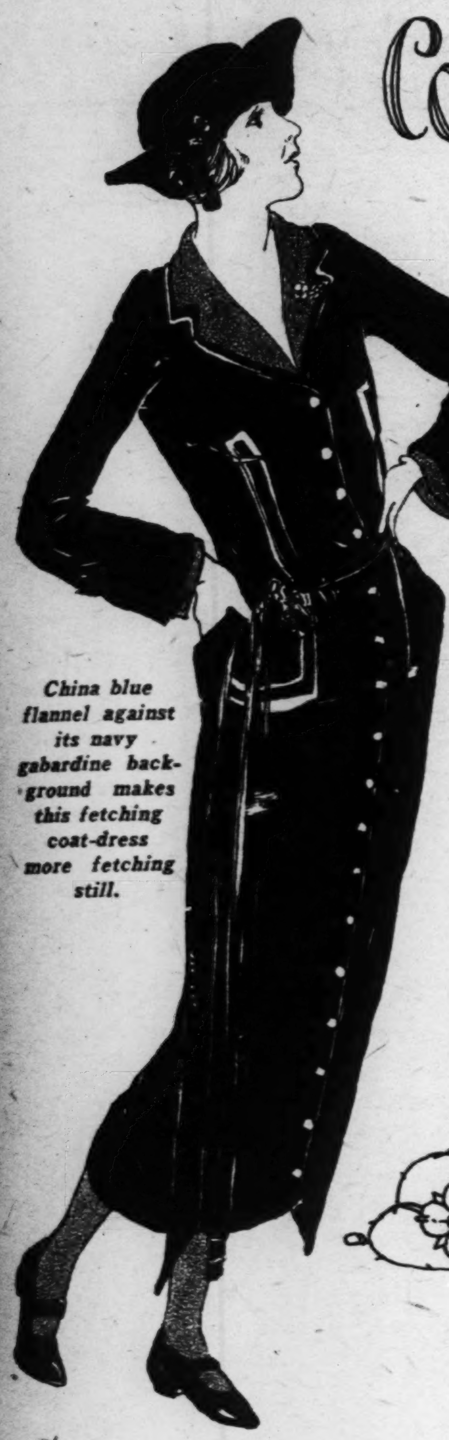
"My daughter had one great talent," she said. "She had a beautiful voice, but she never wrote."

The mother expressed the opinion that her daughter may have entered a convent under an assumed name. "That my daughter, my only child, still lives, I am firmly convinced," continued Mrs. Pryce.

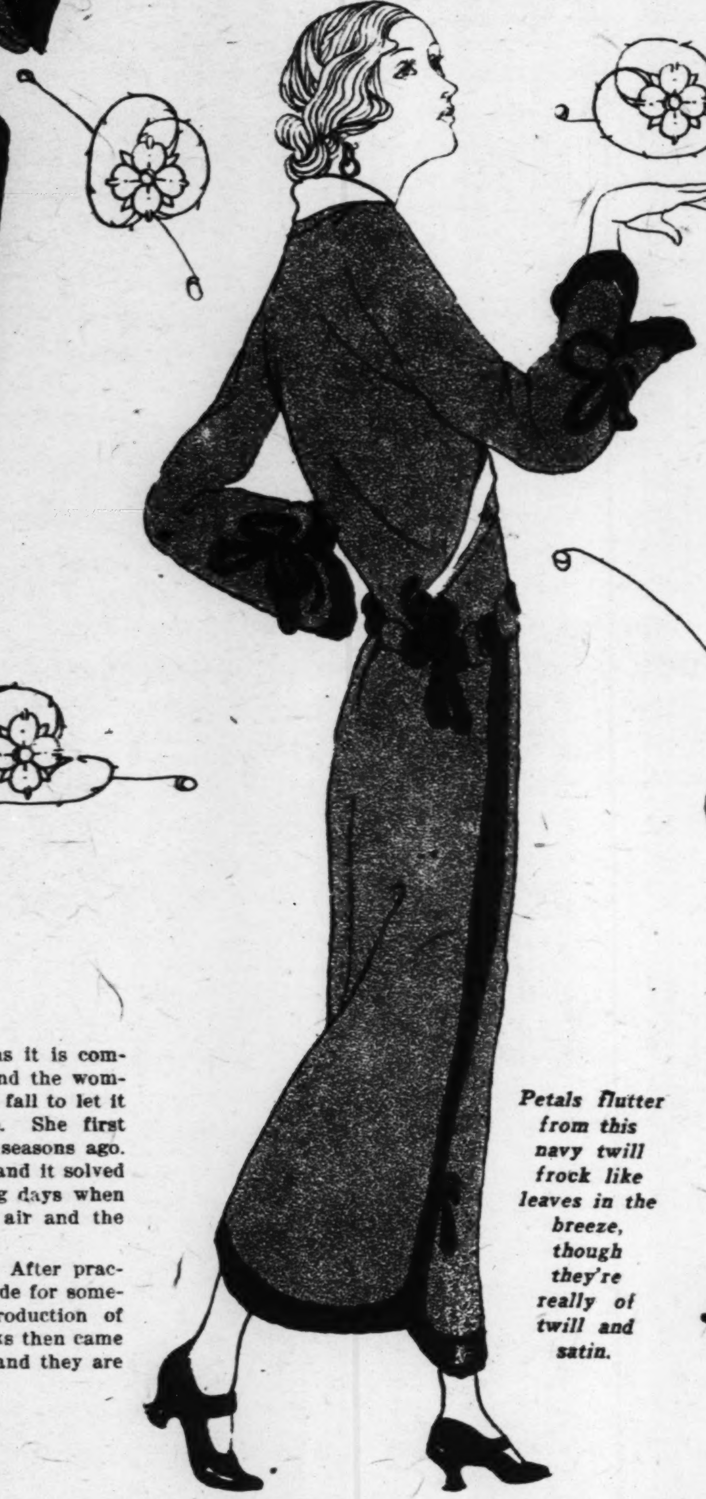
The story told by the two night watchmen tends to make firmer the conviction of the Pryces that Gladys Pryce, under the name of Gladys Loraine or Moraine, is living. The mystery, however, remains unsolved.

Coat Dresses Come Back

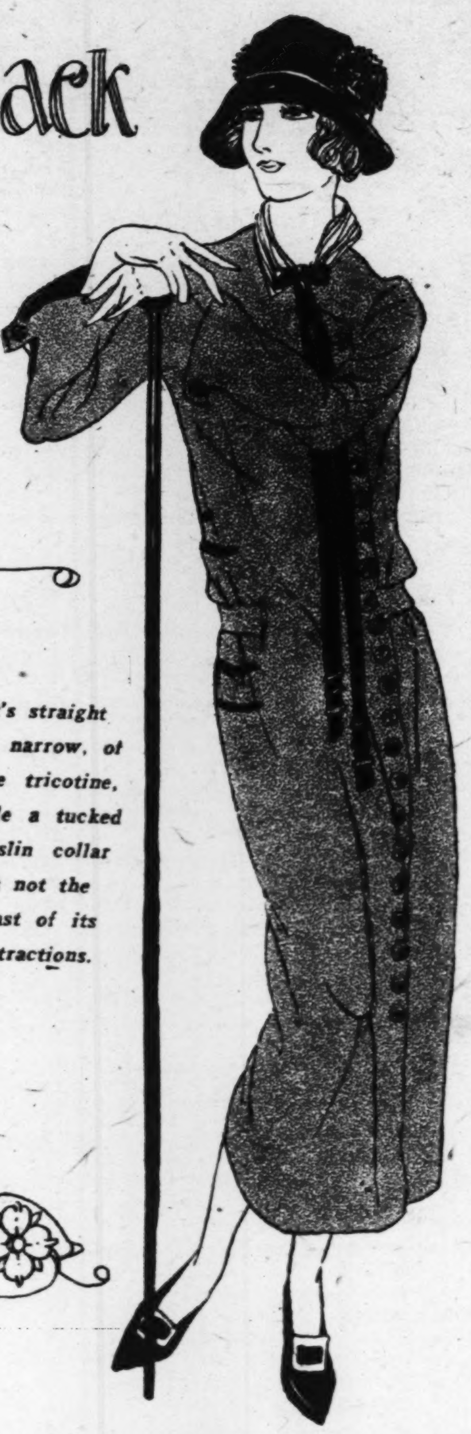
They're a trifle deceptive, but decidedly smart, and besides being very easy to wear they're becoming to most women



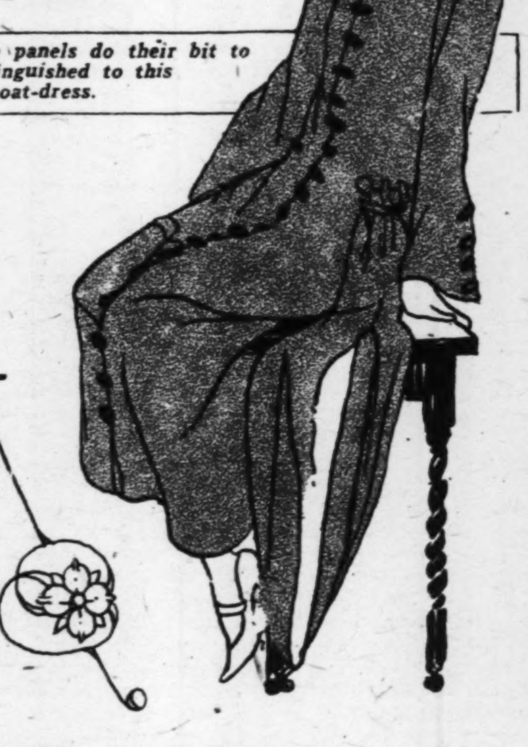
China blue flannel against its navy gabardine background makes this fetching coat-dress more fetching still.



Petals flutter from this navy twill frock like leaves in the breeze, though they're really of twill and satin.



It's straight and narrow, of blue tricotine, while a tucked muslin collar is not the least of its attractions.



Bullet buttons and double panels do their bit to impart an air distinguished to this navy twill coat-dress.

THE coat dress is as smart as it is comfortable and easy to wear, and the woman who is clever refuses this fall to let it pass from her wardrobe. She first learned to like it about two seasons ago. It was as smart as could be and it solved the problem for sunny spring days when there was still a bit of chilliness in the air and the top coat was yet too warm.

The coat suit had ceased to be smart. After practically years of service it had been laid aside for something newer which allowed for the introduction of more originality of design. One-piece frocks then came into their own. For winter they are chic and they are easily worn beneath the wrap, whether it be of the short fur variety or the enveloping top coat, which is as long as it is warm. Then the one-piece frock merged into the coat dress, which always buttons down the front or side and which combines a becoming amount of feminine softness with its tailored finish.

The silhouette of the coat dress is slender, the waistline is at the hips and the sleeves are always long. Sometimes they are close-fitting, but most often they flare ever so little, finishing with a clever button arrangement or with a cuff that is inserted beneath the end of the sleeve.

The neckline often turns back at the throat, following the tailored finish of the man's suit. It can be faced with flannel, satin or left plain, depending upon the trimming treatment of the frock.

Softened with flannel in a lovely China blue is the frock at the left. It's of navy gabardine that fastens down the front with round bone buttons and lets three-inch flaps serve as loose panels at the sides. Notice the clever sleeve finish. They flare ever so little and reveal an edge of blue flannel cuff which flares even less. It's a fold of flannel inserted at the edge of the sleeves, while two of the bone buttons attached to a little black cord make the cuff links. Narrow pipings of China-blue flannel appear at the sides and make a right angle turn to merge into the pockets.

Narrow contrasting strips placed in this way are smart, and at the same time they impart a slender line that is most flattering to the woman who needs to consider these clever tricks that simulate slenderness. A chic gray dress of this type has 18-inch strips applied at either side, pointed at the top and bottom where they are attached to the frock, and lined all the way down with tiny buttons placed very close together.

The frock on the enlarged figure is considered to be a very clever one. It is made of navy Poiret twill and trimmed in flat bands of black satin, while the two materials combine in silver-picotted petals which appear at girdle and hem. These petals, caught loosely at the top so that they flutter like real leaves in the breeze, make a trimming that is very smart. One of the most charming evening gowns is a black velvet, perfectly plain except for silver-edged velvet petals posed at its girdle. On this coat dress the petals are tacked flat about the girdle, alternating cloth and satin, while the loose ones at panel, girdle and sleeves are of satin.

The neckline, only partly revealed in the sketch, is the becoming surplice type. It slopes far over to the left, where the dress fastens, and is faced with a bias strip of white satin.

Next to this model, the navy twill uses the same tailored neckline as the first frock described, except that it features facing of black satin instead of China blue. The buttons are long, black, bullet affairs. Side panels are simply loops which drop down to the hem and come up to fasten again at the hip, where they are held in place by a strip clasped with a buckle of smoked pearl. When the wearer stands, these panels give the effect of circular insets.

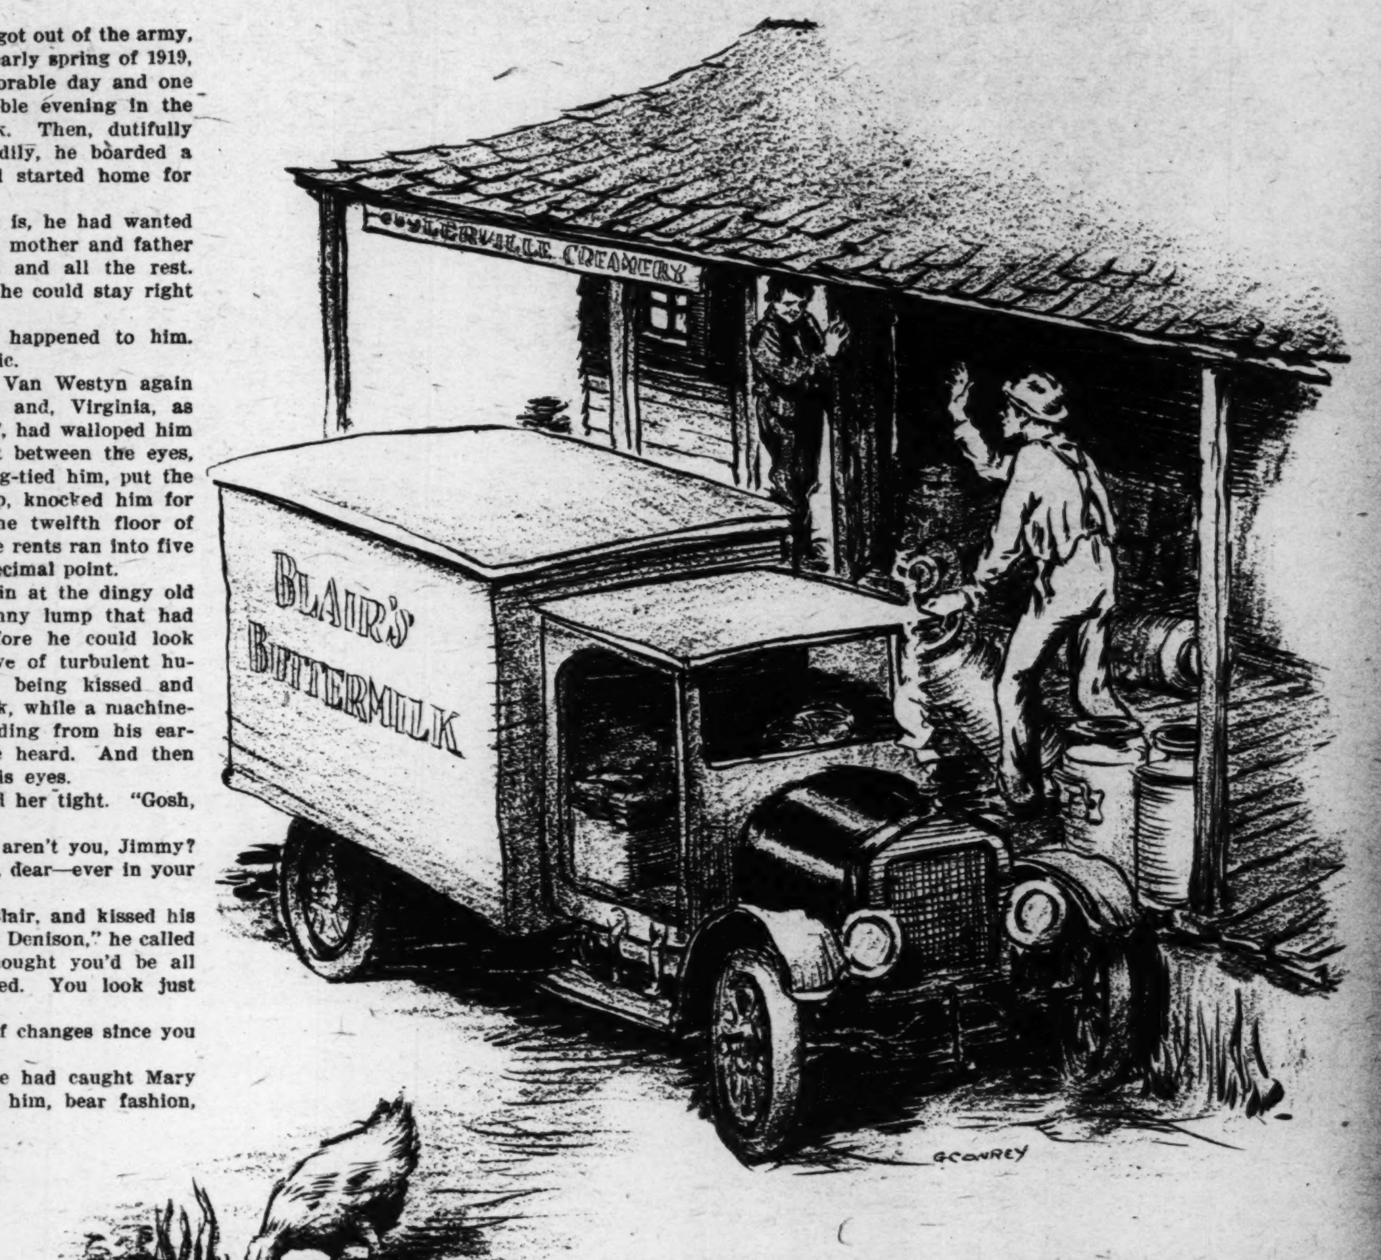
Narrow and very straight, with cleverly concealed gathers at the sides, is the navy tricotine coat dress at the right. The little muslin collar, closely tucked, is quite a smart feature, as is the narrow black satin tie. These ties, which drop long slim ends from a tiny bow at the neck, give a touch of distinction to any simple cloth frock. On this one, the green buttons find an answering glint of light from the tiny strips of green and blue that appear at the ends of the tie.

Now, sometimes, instead of the straight little dress that is plain and simple, you may want to vary the coat frock a trifle. The most delightful answer to this problem is the overblouse.

AS YOU WERE

by

GERALD MYGATT



"Eight cans this trip," he called out, as a man's head appeared in a doorway.

WHEN Jimmy Blair got out of the army, which was in the early spring of 1919, he spent one memorable day and one still more memorable evening in the City of New York. Then, dutifully and somewhat giddily, he boarded a morning train and started home for Carpenterville, five hours upstate.

Jimmy wanted to go home; that is, he had wanted to go home. He wanted to see his mother and father and Joe Hollis and the Denisons and all the rest. But, gosh, how he actually wished he could stay right on in the big town!

Jimmy knew exactly what had happened to him. He could even have put it into music.

In words, he had seen Virginia Van Westyn again for the first time in 15 months, and, Virginia, as he had admitted the fact to himself, had walloped him cold. She had pasted him straight between the eyes, had sent him to the ropes, had hog-tied him, put the Indian sign on him, sewed him up, knocked him for a goal; Virginia, who lived on the twelfth floor of a Park avenue apartment, where the rents ran into five figures to the left of the good old decimal point.

Yet as Jimmy swung off the train at the dingy old station he was conscious of a funny lump that had risen into his throat. Then, before he could look around, he was engulfed by a wave of turbulent humanity, and all at once he was being kissed and thumped and slapped upon the back, while a machine-gun fire of questions was rebounding from his eardrums. "You old scout, you!" he heard. And then his mother was looking up into his eyes.

"Hello, ma!" he said, and hugged her tight. "Gosh, it's good to be back!"

"You're going to stay back now, aren't you, Jimmy? You won't go away again, will you, dear—ever in your life?"

"Same old goose," said Jimmy Blair, and kissed his mother again. Then: "Why, Mary Denison," he called over his mother's shoulder, "I thought you'd be all grown up. Well, I'll be darned. You look just about 16."

Jimmy's father laughed: "Lot of changes since you been away, Jim."

But Jimmy wasn't listening. He had caught Mary Denison's hand and pulled her to him, bear fashion, and kissed her. And then he was patting her paternally on the back. "You look great, good to see everybody again."

It never occurred to Jimmy that the paternal pat and the casual "everybody" had completely neutralized the kiss—and everything else.

Mary Denison didn't know Virginia Van Westyn's name, or whether Virginia was a blonde or a brunette or tall or short or French or English, or what not; but Mary knew, instantly, that there was a Virginia and that she was a person to be hated.

Except for the fact that he was still in uniform, Jimmy was puzzled by the feeling that he had never been away from Carpenterville. The place was exactly as he expected it to be. He felt let down.

He wondered, pointedly, what Virginia would think of it—the somewhat shoddy streets of brown and yellow frame houses; the two-storied business district; the golf course itself, only nine holes and very seedy; the one white marble building, the bank, at the corner of Park and Main; the two movie houses that smelled of peanuts; the black soot of the freight yards hanging over everything like a pall.

Jimmy pressed his lips together and shook his head. He would have to break it to his mother that he was going back to New York—going back just as soon as he decently could. After supper that evening, he reflected, would be the time.

Yet during the meal itself Jimmy felt himself weakening. His mother simply beamed. She had prepared grapefruit and the tomato bisque that Jimmy loved so well; and there was a juicy steak, with baked potatoes and peas and cauliflower; and a salad—and then lemon meringue pie. Mrs. Blair was going through the ceremoney of cutting this delight when there came a knock at the door, and Joe Hollis stormed in, with little Mary Denison on his arm.

"Can't leave you alone, you see," Joe proclaimed. "Mary said we ought to lay off you, but I dragged her along just the same."

The girl laughed. "That's how we women fool you, Joe. As long as Jimmy wouldn't come to see me, why, I had to come to see him, that's all. That's the way girls are nowadays, so they tell us—very forward." She let her brown eyes rest for an imperceptible second on Jimmy's face. But Jimmy Blair was laughing without concern, and his eyes were not on hers.

"Don't be a goose, Mary," he said. "Since when have we got so formal, and everything?"

"You two sit down," Mrs. Blair was insisting, "and try a bite of this pie. It's your favorite, Jim."

After the last crumb of pie had disappeared, and they were settling themselves comfortably in the old-fashioned living-room rockers, Jimmy's father, lighting his cigar, asked what Jimmy, specifically, was going to do.

"Oh, you men!" broke in Jimmy's mother. "Why talk about jobs when Jim has so much to tell us?"

"Jobs," said her husband, slowly peeling the band from his cigar—"jobs, mother, are sometimes quite important. I'd say this was one of the times. Anyhow, I'd like to know. Done any figuring, son?"

"Why, yes," and Jimmy shot a glance at his mother. "You see, dad, my Major, a dandy chap named Hethall—he's a partner in a big brokerage house down on the street, and he sort of thought"——

"Street?" asked Mrs. Blair. "What street?"

"He means Wall street, mother," the boy's father explained.

"Oh, Jimmy! Down in New York?"

"I'm afraid so, ma. But, you see, the chances down there are wonderful—particularly with the social connections I had the luck to establish overseas. It's the chance of a lifetime, really."

"But you were doing so well here, Jim."

"Not very well, ma, as doing goes. Twelve hundred a year is just a scratch compared to what I can make down there. Besides"——

"Twelve hundred a year is a mighty comfortable income," his mother protested. "What with this home and everything." She turned impatiently to young Hollis. "Can't you do anything with him, Joe?"

Joe Hollis laughed. "It's a disease," he stated. "They've all got it."

"What do you mean?" Jimmy demanded. There was just an edge to his tone. Joe Hollis had waited for the draft, and had not been called.

"All you guys," Joe explained. "You've gone and got yourselves big ideas. Half the men that have come back are looking for soft jobs—soft jobs and big money."

Jimmy Blair leveled his gaze at the other. "Haven't your own earnings gone up considerably in the last year and a half? Haven't you got a few big ideas yourself? You've got a car now. How about that?"

Hollis scratched his head. "Sounds like an argument," he said. "Still, I suppose you're partly right, Jim. But, you see, we've actually been doing the work, turning all our spare cash over to the Government and carrying bigger loads than I knew a man could carry. Isn't that so, Mr. Blair?"

"Well, yes," said Jimmy's father. "I guess that's so."

Jimmy felt annoyed, but he compressed his jaws and managed to smile.

His mother was studying him. "Seems sort of funny, Jim," she observed, "the way you take up for New York. And you spent a whole day and a night there, too, when you could have come up on yesterday's train."

"What's her name, Jim?" Mr. Blair teased. "Blonde or brunette?"

Everybody roared, for there had been tension. So nobody but Joe Hollis noticed that little Mary Denison straightened up ever so slightly, and then, after a second, laughed loudest of all.

For only yesterday, Mary, very pink, had told Joe, as nicely as she could, that she liked him a lot, but that she could never, never think of marrying him; and Joe thought he knew the reason why, and the reason worried him. But now, seeing Mary laugh and watching that toss of her bobbed brown curls, Joe Hollis felt much better indeed. Joe was only a man.

The very day Jimmy Blair reached New York he called up Virginia Van Westyn, only to find that she was all tied up with engagements, but the second day he captured two hours of her time and put her in a taxi and took her to the Biltmore for tea; and they danced.

Jimmy danced. He danced then; he danced through the spring. When Virginia went out to Old Westbury he followed her there every week-end she would let him—which was about one in three. He followed her to Southampton in August. He followed her to Great Barrington in the fall. And he danced.

Not even Virginia's closest and dearest girl friend questioned the fact that she possessed a genius for attracting men. Some of them perhaps admitted to one another, in the strictest confidence, of course, that anybody who spent as much thought and time and money on herself as Virginia Van Westyn did ought certainly to make a splash. It was hinted, too, still in confidence, that Virginia's ethics in the matter of property—man being the property under discussion—were not above cavil. But that must be as it may.

Virginia was human. And Jimmy Blair was not un-attractive in his own right. There were only two things he lacked. One was social position and the other was money. Both of these were very important.

When Virginia reached this point in her estimate she would screw up her pretty white forehead in a petulant scowl—and wonder. She liked Jimmy, all right. Well, he might come through, at that. He was working hard, in a mighty good office—and maybe he might make a killing. And socially lots of people were taking him up; though naturally she herself had helped there. Anyway, and here Virginia would yawn prettily, there were heaps and heaps of time—and there always were heaps and heaps of other men.

There were, too. They bothered Jimmy Blair. For things were not going exactly as he had hoped they would.

For one thing, there was the job. It was a perfectly good job, and everybody told him he ought to be tickled to death with it, but somehow it seemed a little bit flat. Selling stocks and bonds!

Selling a pair of shoes, now—that would be easy. You'd have something in your hands, and you could say: "These are good shoes. Real leather! Look!" And the other person would look, and if he wanted a pair of good shoes—well, it would be a cinch. But this other thing was not a cinch. How could you know the shoes were good if you'd never even seen them? Yet you gave your word on it, just as if you personally knew. Funny business!

Then there was the cost of living. That was another thing to think about. They paid you what they called a drawing account of $60 a week down there at the office, and that was really your salary.

You got $60 a week; maybe a little bit more. Call it three hundred a month. Well, your room cost you $50, and your meals cost you at least seventy-five—just your own meals, that was—and you had to have two good suits for the office, and evening clothes and a dinner jacket and a silk hat and all sorts of shoes and shirts and things. Because in addition to all this there was Virginia.

Virginia! Jimmy Blair wiped his forehead.

If you took Virginia to tea it cost you a couple of dollars. That was easy. But if you took her to dinner, which you wanted to do once in a while, it cost you $15 before you got through with the taxis and the tips. If you took her to dinner and the theater—and, of course, you had to get decent seats—it would knock a good $30 hole in your wallet. Thirty dollars in one evening. Zip! Just like that! And by the same token, if you took her to dinner and the theater and out to dance afterwards—and you just had to do that occasionally—you were mighty lucky if you got out of it for 45 cool iron men. Jimmy knew. He knew until it hurt.

Just the same, New York was worth it. Nobody could tell Jimmy it wasn't. And Virginia was worth it—you bet she was! There was something about the whole thing that was worth it. Just walking up Fifth avenue, for instance, at 5 o'clock of a spring afternoon.

Take today, for instance. Jimmy Blair hadn't sold a single stock, but he had left the office at 4:30—that was one nice thing about Wall street—and now he was striding confidently up Fifth avenue.

Some day he'd be riding up this street in a shiny limousine, nodding casually to the traffic officers.

Well, it was a great town, full of hustling, clean-cut men, and just packed with the most wonderful looking girls a fellow ever saw. Couldn't touch Virginia for a minute, but good to look at just the same. They all were. Sleek, glossy furs and sleeker silk stockings and all kinds of smiles—that was New York. It was a darned shame to have to turn off Fifth avenue for anything, even to get to your room. Some day——

* * * * * * * *

There was a yellow envelope for Jimmy stuck cornerwise in the mirror of the dark entrance hall. He seized it gingerly, tore it open. Telegrams always made your heart stop a little, even though you pretended they didn't.

This one was from Jimmy's mother:

"Your father facing operation. Not serious, but want you home soon as possible."

Jimmy stood there, irresolute. He knew about his father's operation; the old man had told him six months ago. Just a couple of days in the hospital and then out again. But still! Jimmy scowled. Darn it, he'd been invited to Virginia's for dinner that evening! And afterward they were all going to the Ritz. Yes, and that Conrad bird would be there, and Jimmy didn't trust him a bit. Now, what difference would one evening make?

Jimmy looked at the telegram again. Then he shook his head mournfully, went to the telephone instrument that hung on the wall, dropped a nickel into its slot and called Virginia's number.

Virginia was out—likely enough with that Conrad bird!

"Please tell Miss Van Westyn," said Jimmy, evenly, "that I have been called home by a sudden illness in my family. Tell her I'm dreadfully sorry, but I can't help it. Yes, this is Mr. Blair."

Just before he was to be wheeled out to the operating room, Jimmy's father asked to see the boy alone.

"Son," he said, with a smile, "the doctor has told me about this thing of mine. Your mother doesn't know—not exactly. I've got a good chance, they say, but if anything should happen—if anything should happen, Jim, I'm depending on you." The older man hesitated. "Things aren't in as good shape—financially—as I'd like to have them. But I've got you. That's a—a big relief. That's all. Call 'em in, Jim. So long, old man. Wish me luck." He grinned again and held out his hand.

Jimmy took his mother downstairs to the waiting room. He was wishing his father did not look so pale. And why did hospitals always have such depressing medical smells?

After what seemed like hours and hours, a nurse, all in white, came softly into the room. Mr. Blair was out of the ether, she said, and resting comfortably.

"Thank God!" said Jimmy's mother, and stood up. "He's going to live!" she affirmed, her eyes gleaming moist, and clutched for Jimmy's hand. The nurse smiled and nodded.

But the nurse was wrong.

* * * * * * * *

It was not until the day after the funeral that Jimmy was able to set his thoughts in any kind of order. Somehow he had managed to wire his office to tell them he could not be back for another week at least. For the rest, he had arranged the funeral and seen about the cemetery lot and gone through two long talks with his father's lawyer and held his arm tight about his mother, hour after hour, all in a sort of daze.

But now at last he was facing facts. They were not pleasant facts.

First, there was his father's store. For four years past it had been losing money. Jimmy couldn't believe that until he had gone over the books several times and then talked with the president of the bank. His father had been old-fashioned and easy-going—and he had been in competition with three chain stores, each one of them run by a local man. They could underbuy him and undersell him, and they had. Only Mr. Blair's popularity and his name for square dealing had kept him in business at all.

The president of the bank explained that it was his best judgment that Jimmy had better take steps to sell the stock on hand and dispose of the lease on the store building. This would give him a few thousand dollars in hand and thereby place him in a position, financially, to meet most if not all of his father's debts.

"Debts?" Jimmy demanded.

Well, yes, there were some debts. Mr. Blair had made a number of investments, on margin, in the hope of recovering some of his recent losses, and the investments had turned out pretty much as everybody except Mr. Blair predicted they would. The banker coughed deprecatingly.

"That was about your father's only fault, Jim. He never could seem to understand the value of money."

Jimmy stared moodily at his finger tips. "I guess I don't, either," he confessed.

"Good time to learn," said the older man, not unkindly. "By the way, your father carried a little insurance. That's intact, as far as I know. I've been figuring things up for you, Jim, in a rough sort of way. If you can get rid of the stock on hand down there at the store for a fair price, and get rid of the lease, there'll be somewhere between fifteen hundrd and two thousand dollars left over after you've called in all the paper your father had out. Your mother will have that and the house. That's free and clear, you know, except for a $3000 first mortgage."

Jimmy continued to stare at his finger tips. "Of course," he said, presently, "we can sell the house and I can take mother down to New York with me. I'd thought of that a little." His voice trailed off uncertainly.

The banker laid a large, paternal hand upon Jimmy's knee.

"I'd think about that a long time," he said.

"What do you mean?" asked the boy.

"From what I know of our mother, Jim, I don't think she'd want much to go to New York. Carpenterville's been her home for a good many years. It's—well, it's about all she has left now. You're not old enough to understand that, maybe. But it's my opinion that taking your mother to New York—uprooting her right at this time—would just about end her."

"That's what Aunt Hat says," Jimmy muttered.

"Well, I'd listen to your Aunt Hat, Jim."

Jimmy Blair raised his eyes to those of the man opposite him.

"That means I'll have to stay here," he stated, dully.

"It does." The banker nodded slowly.

Jimmy shook his head doggedly. "There's not a salaried job in this town, Mr. Perry—none that I could get, anyway—that pays more than $25 a week."

The banker admitted this.

"I can't see that," said the boy, morosely. "I've been earning pretty near four thousand."

"Yes," put in the man, "and spending most of it to keep up a front."

"Most of it," Jimmy agreed, weakly.

The banker paused. "I tell you, son," he finally began. "I imagine I know about how you feel. You've gone and got yourself New York eyes. But maybe Carpenterville's a bigger place on the map—and on your map, Jim—than you'd think for offhand. Besides, I've got an idea for you."

"You have?" Jim was being polite. He really didn't much care. Inside of him he felt all torn apart. Why did problems like this have to be put up to a fellow? He couldn't leave his mother now; he knew that. But how, how on earth, was he going to be able to give up Virginia?

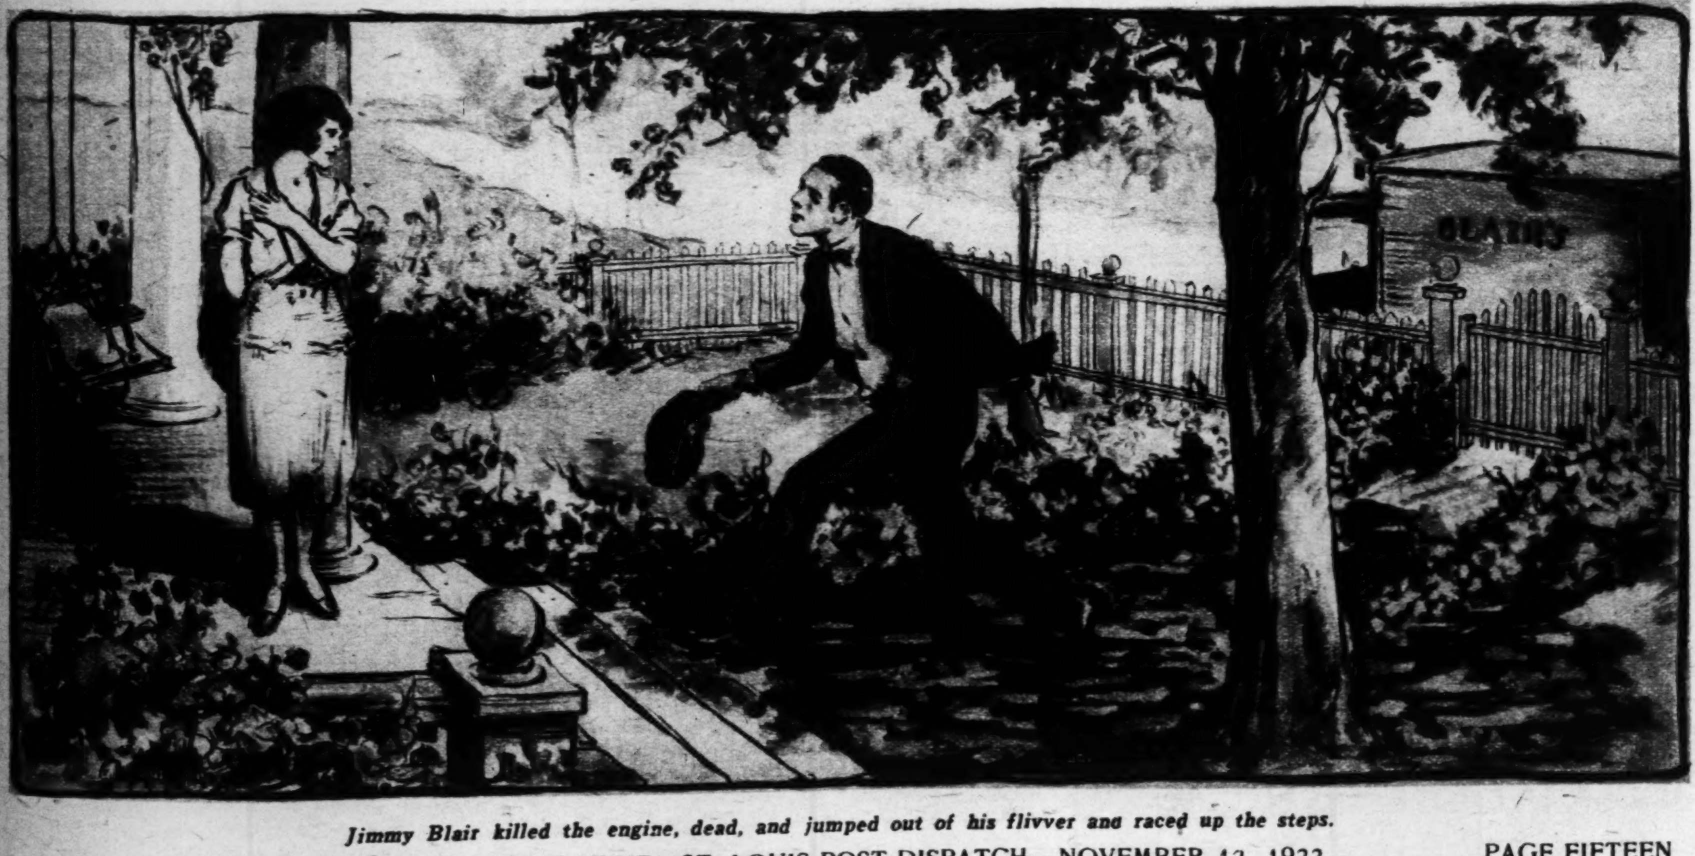
"My idea's this," the banker was explaining. "You know old Jed Fisher? Well, Jed has worked himself up quite a retail creamery business—covering this whole section of the county. He uses a horse and wagon, but my idea would be for you to use a flivver truck. Cover four times the territory. Well, Jed's getting pretty well along in years, Jim, and those 40-quart cans are something of a chore to handle"——

"What's he do?" asked Jimmy, impatiently. "Doesn't he peddle the stuff from house to house? I think I remember him. I don't want to do that, Mr. Perry."

"There's a whole lot of things in life we don't want to do, Jim, particularly when we're responsible for somebody outside of ourselves."

Jimmy said nothing.

"Jed's got a good trade worked up, Jim, and he's



Jimmy Blair killed the engine, dead, and jumped out of his flivver and raced up the steps.

willing to sell, I happen to know, for $600, asking price. He'll take five. Now, here's what I'll do, Jim: I'll advance you the five hundred and I'll advance you the first payment on a flivver truck—and the rest is up to you. But I'll back you that much."

"Yes," said Jimmy, wearily, "but I can't see that it's much of an opportunity, Mr. Perry."

"You can't, hey? Well, maybe it isn't, but I'm willing to take a little gamble on it if you are. You'll be at home with your mother, Jim, and keeping her happy. And you'll be in business for yourself, which is just about the greatest sensation in the world. Think it over, son, and come in to see me tomorrow."

* * * * * * * *

Well, he had done it, and here he was at last—a buttermilk peddler, rattling up the road toward the Cuylerville Creamery in a dusty truck that had seen many better days. Yes, he had done it—and that last day in New York had seared itself indelibly into his memory.

Resigning his job had been nothing. They did not seem surprised. They did not seem to care.

But saying good-by to Virginia had been another story. He had told her that he couldn't afford a party, so—and it was mighty decent of her—she had met him at the Waldorf and they had walked up Fifth avenue together and then over to her home.

Jimmy told her what he was going to do—that is, he almost told her. He was taking over a big creamery business, he explained, and it would mean working almost 25 hours a day.

"Isn't that splendid!" Virginia had cooed. "It must be so wonderful to be a man and accomplish things. I'll never forget you, Jimmy, boy," she added.

Somehow he managed to say good-by. He walked over to Fifth avenue, but Fifth avenue was but a collection of buildings along a paved street. Something had happened to Jimmy; he didn't know what. He only wished that it was midnight.

Well, and that was that. Jimmy laughed harshly as he swung his rattling flivver alongside the loading platform of the Cuylerville Creamery. Well—and this was this.

"Eight cans this trip," he called out, as a man's head appeared in a doorway. "And I'll be back for another load this afternoon."

Ten minutes later Jimmy and his flivver were roaring and bouncing down the road toward Carpenterville again. Casually he looked at his wrist watch. It was just 7:15—in the morning. But Jimmy grinned. The sun was warm and the leaves were green and the birds were singing by the roadside. And the earlier you got started the more milk you sold, and the more milk you sold—Jimmy's right hand straggled into the pocket of his blue overalls, and there sounded a pleasant jingling of small change. After all, life could be worse.

He was doing a real business. He had made a new contract with the creamery to take its entire buttermilk output; and as a side line he sold print butter and honey.

At 7:30 of a week-day evening Jimmy would pilot his little bus into the back yard of his mother's house and kill the engine. Then, with the shadows long across the cool, sweet grass of the lawns, Jimmy would unburden his overalls pockets of his day's earnings.

His mother would help him then, and generally Mary Denison, and they would count, smoothing the bills out in neat, thick piles, stacking half dollars and quarters and nickels and dimes. And Mrs. Blair would beam all over as they tallied the score, and little Mary Denison would literally jump up and down with happiness and excitement. For Jimmy was making money.

His profits, with his butter and all, were running over $20 a day. Of course, the car, with its upkeep, was coming out of that, but Jimmy was very well satisfied. In fact, he had already arranged with his friend, the president of the bank, to finance a second car and a helper, on commission; for Blair's buttermilk was becoming known, and Cohoes and Troy lay to the south.

But so did New York.

Jimmy Blair felt strangely guilty about New York; he felt, in fact, as if he were being disloyal. For New York—and what Jimmy really meant was somebody in New York—was not so constantly in his mind as he thought it ought to be.

Last Sunday he had written a long letter to Virginia Van Westyn, written her for the first time in almost a month; and the writing of it had made him feel better. She was the most wonderful girl in the world, he told himself, hotly, and some day—why, right now he was on the track!

* * * * * * * *

Then, out of a clear sky, Virginia's telegram came, and Jimmy found himself shaking as he read it. She was motoring through tomorrow, she informed him, on her way to her father's camp in the Adirondacks, and she would stop for him at 2 o'clock and pick him up and take him along for the week-end. Where should she meet him?

"Week-end!" Jimmy laughed. "Fat chance I've got, with the Friday and Saturday deliveries. Still, I can see her, anyway." He hurried to the telegraph office and wired his reply. He would be at the Cuylerville Creamery from 1 o'clock on. Jimmy smiled covertly at his choice of the Cuylerville Creamery as a meeting place. Might as well let Virginia think the place was his! Then, abruptly, he scowled.

Shucks! He'd promised Mary Denison to take her along on the route tomorrow. Mary enjoyed it so, just like a kid, and she'd been helping him a lot. Already she had lined up about half the housewives in Carpenterville as steady customers, and tomorrow she was planning to start in on Cuylerville. Well—he'd have to make some excuse and put her off. He'd tell her most of the truth, that he was expecting some New York friends of his to pick him up along the road.

Mary looked at him quite steadily with those soft brown eyes of hers and said: "Of course, Jimmy. What does it matter?" But it made Jimmy feel like a cheat.

Jimmy cut his morning deliveries short next day and raced back to the house at noon to change his clothes.

"You'll ruin that nice suit," his mother reproved him, mildly. "And how you can handle the cans with that stiff white collar on, Jim? Won't those New York people notice you in your working clothes?"

"Oh, I feel better in these things!" said Jimmy, lightly.

But he didn't. As he drove back up the Cuylerville road, with his empty flivver rattling under him, he felt suddenly foolish and out of place, nettled. He, Jimmy Blair, ashamed of the clothes he worked in! He wished hotly that he had left his flannel shirt and stained overalls on.

"If she doesn't like 'em," he informed himself, "she can lump 'em, that's all."

He reached the creamery at 1, and then he began to wait. One of the men there good-naturedly loaded his truck for him; and that again made Jimmy feel ashamed. He smoked a cigarette and looked at his watch. He smoked another and another and another. He walked around, sat down, stood up, walked around some more. He looked at his watch again. Great Scott—3:30! Two hours gone by, and those eight cans to be sold, quart by quart, before nightfall. Jimmy scowled.

At 4:10 a sleek Delft-blue touring car slid to a halt by the creamery gate. Jimmy Blair ran out.

"Hello, Jimmy, old thing," said Virginia. She was as gorgeous as ever, her fawn-colored hair fluffing out above a fawn-colored motoring coat.

"Hello, Virginia. Gosh, it's good to see you! Oh, hello, Conrad! How are you?" Jimmy extended his hand. It surprised him that his feeling toward this quondam rival was, for some reason, quite cordial.

"Hop in," the gorgeous girl commanded. "Where's your bag? We're two hours late now. Make it snappy, Jimmy."

"I know darned well you're two hours late," Jimmy heard himself saying, coolly. "But I can't go along with you, Virginia—can't leave the job. I wired you that."

"Oh, forget it!" the girl directed, petulantly. "You and your stupid old job! You make me sick. Come on—we're going to have a great party. You know the gang."

"Got a little of the old stuff on the hip, too," Conrad volunteered, pleasantly. "Here!" From somewhere beneath his feet he produced a quart bottle half full. "More where that came from," he added.

"You tempt me," laughed Jimmy, "but I can't. I'm awfully sorry. I hope you didn't misunderstand my wire, Virginia. I just wanted to say hello."

"Well, if you can't give up a blooming old job for me I'd like to know what good you are, anyway," Virginia stated, irritably.

"Can't you see I can't?" Jimmy pleaded.

Then suddenly he knew he was angry. He found himself appraising Virginia almost indifferently. For the first time since he had known her it occurred to him that she was a spoiled, selfish young person. Her nose, he now noticed, was a trifle wind-blown. It made him want to laugh. What a fatuous boob he'd been! Why, this girl's world was as far apart from his as—— He almost laughed aloud!

She was pressing her foot on the starter. "I think you're the most selfish thing I ever knew," she said, as the engine caught.

"Think away, old dear," said Jimmy, with a genial wave of his hand. "All we hicks think about is the almighty dollar, you know. Take a drink for me, Conrad—a couple of 'em."

"Well, you certainly are a hick," Virginia announced, for she was annoyed.

"I certainly am," said Jimmy, pleasantly. "I certainly am, from the ground up." Virginia was throwing in the gears. "So long, folks," Jimmy called. And they were gone.

Jimmy Blair walked slowly back to the creamery. "Darn fool!" he was muttering. "Well, that's the way life goes, I guess. Darned good thing." He scowled. "And to think of me, old Jimmy Blair, falling for a chicken like that—yeh, falling and scraping my nose on the pavement. Why, put her up against a girl like Mary Denison—wait a second, now!"

He seated himself on the splintered, sun-warmed boards of the creamery delivery platform, and there, for perhaps 10 minutes, he swung his legs and alternately frowned and grinned. Then he stood up, shook himself, and stalked in to the office, where stood a telephone.

"Sell that sour old stuff tomorrow," he murmured, cryptically. "Today goes to profit and loss." Then he called a Carpenterville number.

"That you, Mary?" he asked. "Say, Mary, wait for me—will you? I'll be at your place in half an hour."

Jimmy Blair made it in 22 minutes. On the way he rehearsed, over and over, just what he was going to say. He was going to tell Mary about being in the service, and seeing Paris and New York, and getting big ideas, and being all cuckoo and getting all balled up about life and its ramifications; and he was going to tell her—and Jimmy knew it now—that he had been in love with her all the time, which was a fact, and that he hoped—gosh, how he hoped!—that she'd let him hang around and try to show her that he was just an ordinary guy who would try like the dickens to prove himself worthy to kiss the hem of her dress—or something like that, anyway.

But when he pulled up at the Denison house there was Mary at the top of the porch steps, sort of holding her hands together at her throat and staring at him with that funny question-mark look in her big brown eyes. And she was dressed in that brown and white checked thing that he liked so much, and her brown hair all fuzzing out around her face, made her look just like a kid, and the sunlight was throwing leaf shadows across her so that she looked just like the heroine in a play.

Jimmy Blair killed the engine, dead, and jumped out of his flivver and raced up the steps.

He heard himself stammering, in a husky voice that didn't sound like his own at all:

"Mary, kid—look at me—no, look at me, right in the eyes! Say, Mary, do you think you could manage to fall in love with a guy who knows he's a blame fool?"

And then—now hadn't he been a fool?—little Mary Denison was leaning against his shoulder and crying and he was patting her on the back.

but full and deep. Masculinity, in a word, in the artist's opinion, is a predominant trait.

"We talked constantly of art, about which he knew and felt more deeply than myself. He had grown up surrounded by the best of human productions in painting, sculpture, goldsmith's work, bronzes, what-not; he knows the history of them all and his perception of beauty includes the Greek remains and follows down to all that is remarkable in modern art.

"The Pope's eyes are very wonderful, of a true sapphire blue, matching exactly his ring. On the day he received the 20,000 Italian pilgrims I knocked off work in order to be present at the ceremony. His blue eyes smiled at the people in a way that must have been reassuring, whatever their petition might have been. At this time he wore a scarlet cape of fine wool, lined with red silk, over his cassock. The cape is the same one he wears when walking in the Vatican garden, and is known in lay circles as the 'Pope's overcoat.'

"I should not like to give the impression of wishing to diminish the spirituality of the great personage who honored me with casual remarks in the progress of sittings, but perhaps I would do well to add that this quality was ever present in his demeanor and speech. He manifested the highest human type, that of a deeply religious soul and a wise and benevolent mind, chary of prophecy. I thus paraphrase what he once let fall when he was discussing human wisdom and human folly.

"One expression I think I am able to translate exactly. It was this: 'Those that have the most wisdom have the most love.'

"Of his charity towards all who hold a different creed from that of the pious Catholic I have made mention. He would bring, if he could, and he declared this more than once, peace and happiness to the world, regardless of creed. For here he said in substance that any man's religion, so long as it remained simple and modest, has the same right as that of the child in the cradle, to await the future for the testing of its worth.

"As to my own creed or religious belief the Pope never asked a question. He did not seem surprised when I told him I attended the reception to the pilgrims, but I admit that, without waiting for his comment, I explained that I went to it as to another sitting, that I might get the broadest comprehension possible of the subject of my picture.

"Once I told him I had visited this or that church in Rome, whereupon he would ask me concerning some celebrated picture or statue to be seen there. He knew them all and had his judgment of the art value of each treasure. Nor did these always correspond to the accepted view, for the Pope seems to have his own opinion about everything in the realm of art."

The artist said that as the painting neared completion the Pope's interest grew and he would ask a member of his official family or a Cardinal to go to the room where the artist was at work, after the sitting proper. The sittings he suffered no one to interrupt, not even his sister.

"Next day the Pope would repeat what the newest critic to visit the improvised studio had said about the portrait. As these criticisms were nearly all favorable his holiness would repeat them to me with a benevolent smile.

"'It is very much like me,' said the Pope, when the end had nearly come, 'and if I cannot myself go to your country I am happy to rely on so true a presentment. One can do no more. In the Pitti palace we speak not with the Mighty Julius, but with his phantom.'"

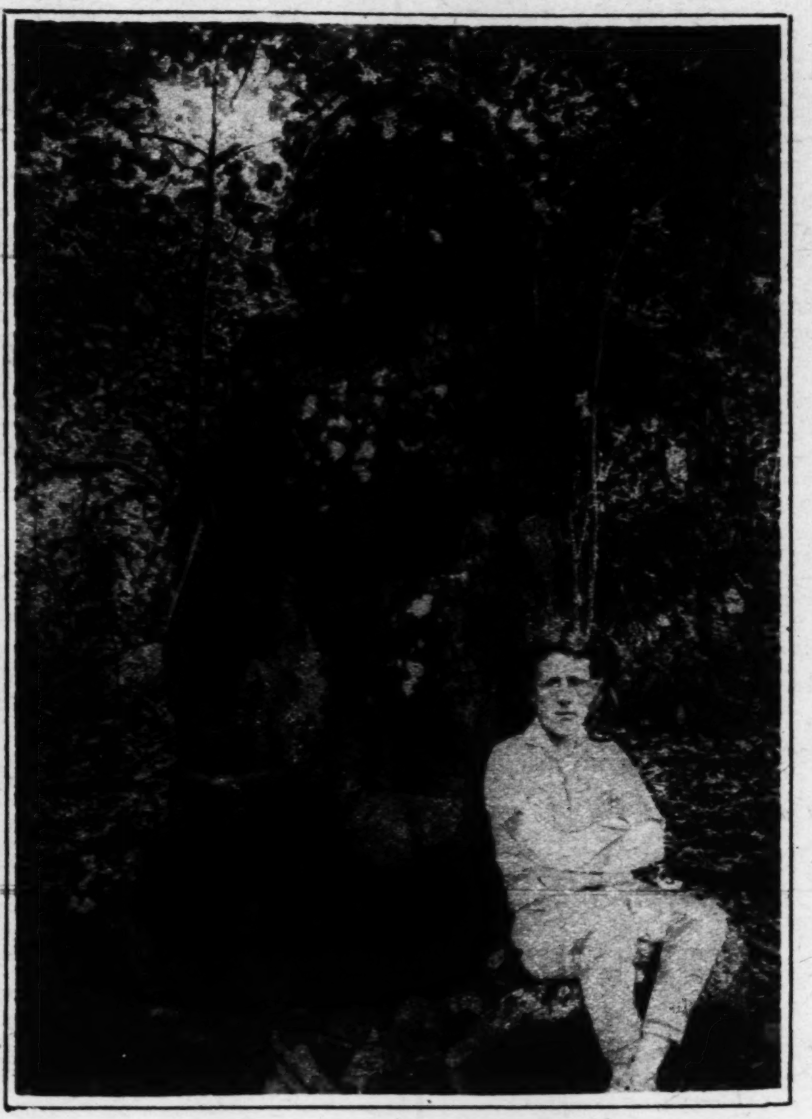
Spirit Tales From The South Sea Islands

House built over an ancient temple site by American resident was thronged with audible but invisible people every month at the full of the moon—The two visitors, "not afraid of ghosts," and what happened to them there—The native boy of Tahiti who learned a century-old song from woman who vanished before his eyes :: :: :: ::

By CHARLES B. NORDHOFF,

Author of "The Fledgeling," Etc.



An old stone god, photographed by a visitor to the South Sea Islands.

ALMOST everybody, nowadays, has been to a seance, or experimented with a ouija board, or read what Conan Doyle and Sir Oliver Lodge have to say about the spirit world. The spirits, in fact, seem to have attained a recognized position in society; they are consulted on a variety of questions, ranging from the welfare of relatives who have "passed on"—(it is no longer fashionable to say "passed out," or even "passed away!")—to the whereabouts of a schoolgirl's mislaid purse. But if you are one of the few still unconvinced, take my advice and buy a ticket for the South Sea Islands preferably to one of the groups in the Eastern Pacific.

In those remote lands, where the names of Lodge and Eusapia Palladino are unknown, you will find a race which has communicated with its dead since long before the dawn of history—men and women to whom the world of the dead is as much an actuality as the living world about them. Native superstitions? Perhaps. I can only reply that after a few years in the islands, the most skeptical white men seem to change their views.

In the Cook Group, six or seven hundred miles west of Tahiti, I was talking one evening with an American, the manager of a cocoanut plantation. I suspect that he is from Missouri—at any rate, he is as hard-headed and difficult to convince as the traditional citizen of that state.

"Ghosts," [illegible] said; "there are plenty of 'em in these islands. At home, I used to laugh at that sort of stuff, but I know better now. Yes, I've seen them once or twice; I lived three years in a house where you could hear them moving about and whispering all night long. You know the place—that little plantation back of Titikaveka. I used to run it for the German company. I cleared the land and built the house myself. When we chopped down the brush on the knoll I chose for a house site, I found the finest marae I ever saw outside of the Marquesas: a heathen temple nobody had laid eyes on for a hundred years. It was a kind of a big terrace, built with slabs of black volcanic rock. One corner of my house came right over the marae, and I had to get another white man to help me move the rocks away. Couldn't hire a native to touch a stone. Some of the Kanakas are good friends of mine; several old boys dropped in to warn me against trying to live in such a place—they reckoned it was bad medicine.

"In the old days, it seemed, hundreds of human sacrifices had been hung up there, and a high chief named Manotini—a first-class cannibal fighting man—was supposed to be buried in the place. He still wandered around on moonlight nights, in the form of a beg red rooster—the old men had heard all about it from their grandfathers. I laughed at their yarns, of course, but when my house was finished and I had moved in, I began to think maybe the natives were right, after all.

"It started one night when I was walking home from Titikaveka. It must have been 11 or 12 o'clock; the moon was full and it was light enough to read a paper without straining your eyes. When I got close to the house I saw something moving on the path ahead of me. There wasn't a cat or a dog on the place, and I wondered what else would be wandering around at that time of night. Then I saw it was a big, dark-colored rooster, standing there looking at me in a funny kind of way. He moved to one side as I passed, and kept on looking at me. 'This is a queer country, sure enough,' I said to myself. 'First time I ever heard of a place where chickens come down off their roosts and prowl around at night!' I didn't think of the yarn about old Manotini until I was in the house and had the lamp lit in my room.

In this house lived the native boy of Tahiti who saw the ghost of a woman combing her hair.

"I was baching it then—living all alone. My room was in front, opening on the veranda, and there was another bedroom behind mine, on the corner where the house was built over the old temple. When I blew out the lamp and rolled in, I was still thinking about the chicken I had seen. Then the noises began. At first, I thought a gang of neighbors had come to have a little fun with me. I could hear them walking on tiptoes all around the house, whispering to each other, and laughing softly now and then. I don't mind a joke—I thought I'd show them up, and then ask them in to have a drink—but when I sneaked to the door and made a run out, there was no one in sight—nothing but the house, the new clearing and the black wall of rocks—all clear as day in the moonlight. I left the lamp burning when I went back to bed, but that made no difference; the moment the door was closed I heard them again outside, and pretty soon they were in the bedroom next to me—whispering and chuckling and tiptoeing about. My hair felt kind of bristly—I didn't sleep much that first night. I could hear them talking plainly. You know, I speak the native pretty well; it's queer how I was always just on the point of understanding what they said. When I held my breath and listened, I could get a word here and there, but I could never quite make sense of their talk. Finally I dropped off to sleep.'

"I put in three years on that place. Every month, when the moon was full, there were two or three nights when the house was full of people—you're probably thinking I was full, too, but I wasn't—not all the time, anyhow. I got used to them after a while; they never bothered me. Maybe it was because I never slept in the back room.

"One steamer day, I met a fellow at the company store—stopping over with his wife to see the islands, on the way from Wellington to the States. We hit it off pretty well, and as his wife had found some friends in the village, I asked them out to spend the night at my place. It happened to be the full of the moon. We had a smoke and a yarn after dinner and finally he went to bed in the back room. Before I went to sleep I heard my dead heathens moving about and whispering, but I was so used to them by that time that I didn't stop to think about the other fellow being scared. An hour or so before daylight he gave a yell that made me sit up in bed, and next minute he nearly broke the door down getting into my room. 'What kind of a place is this, anyhow?' he said, when he had calmed down a little. 'There's been a bunch of people walking around outside my window all night, and when I finally got to sleep, someone grabbed me by the neck and nearly hauled me out of bed before he let go!'

"I told him what I knew about the place, and when I saw how interested he was, I asked him if he and his wife wouldn't like to stay with me until their boat left. They were spiritualists, he told me—not a bit afraid of ghosts.

"There was a big double bed in the back room. This fellow slept on the outside, with his wife next to the wall, under an open window. The spooks were out that night, and the two travelers lay awake listening to them, getting a thrill now and then when the voice came close. They thought it would make a great story to tell the folks at home. At last they fell asleep.

"Well, the yells that woke me up this time made me grab my flashlight and jump for the back room. The fellow's wife lay there screaming like a wildcat—eyes popping out of her head. His knees were across her body, and his head and shoulders clean through the window—I could hear him kind of gurgling outside. I took hold of his feet and pulled him in onto the bed. It was a minute or two before he could say anything.

"He had been sound asleep when a pair of big hands took him by the throat. He couldn't make much noise because his wind was cut off; he tried to pry the fingers loose, but they were too strong for him. Little by little, while he struggled and fought, the thing that had hold of him dragged him across his wife and out the window. When his head was outside, in the bright moonlight, he got the worst scare of all. His eyes were

"You Can Keep Your $100,000"

One rule of the Kryl household was absolute. No young men were to be permitted to call on the girls. The doors of the otherwise hospitable home were shut fast against all such tempters.

The Kryls live in a select residential section of Chicago's West Side, beyond Douglas Park. Many were the youths who would have presented their cards at the door, but those who dared soon learned the rule of exclusion. So far as outsiders have been made aware, both of the daughters kept faith with their father in this respect, not insisting that young men be permitted to call. They seemed to be happy enough in pursuing their art. The father was happy in their obedience to his wishes—not to say his contract with them—and he continued along the even tenor of his way in the fond assurance that all was going according to his cherished plans.

When the telegram from Boston was received, Bandmaster Kryl had the shock of his life. The shock lay not so much in the fact of his daughter's elopement as in the fact that he had failed to give due consideration to the natural course of human events, one outstanding event being love and marriage. That art had not proved loveproof upset the musician and caused him a tragic half-hour or more. Now must he revise and readjust himself. Readjustment was painful, but its demands were met by Papa Kryl with manful resignation.

The father recalled that day when a good-looking young man, a reporter, had been admitted to the house and permitted to interview, briefly, Josephine and Marie shortly after their return from abroad. Papa Kryl took care to be present during the interview, and he did virtually all of the talking. He told the newspaper man what great things he expected of the girls, and indicated how they were to achieve those great things.

"Because they are not going to marry," he said. "Why, never in their lives have my daughters given one thought to a young man. Such things as love—silly, romantic notions—haven't entered their heads."

The proud parent turned to Marie.

"Does such a thing ever come into your mind?" he asked.

"No, papa."

"And you, Josephine?"

"No, papa—of course not."

"So, you see," he said to the reporter, who, being but human, turned and fled from so much beauty under the spell of such devotion to art.

"I wonder if they really meant it?" thought the young man. "I'll bet they're human, after all."

Bohumir Kryl appears now to entertain the same suspicion. "Well, I have Marie left!" he exclaimed, after the disappearance of Josephine had been explained.

And Marie smiled. Marie is a dutiful daughter, and she is now past 22. In less than eight years she will be 30. Will it be worth $12,500 a year to obey, and keep the contract? Who knows?

After his first temperamental outburst, the musician calmed down. He had Marie left, but he didn't fancy the idea of having Marie meet some young man outside and run away with him as a bride to whom "love is everything." He said to his younger daughter:

"Now, as to that rule against young men coming to the house—well, it's no longer in force, Marie."

And Marie, smiling again, turned to her grand piano for an appeal to art as a fortifier.

It was toward the end of October that Josephine Kryl became Mrs. Paul Taylor White. She hastened things along, because her father had made arrangements for her to go to Europe, where engagements as a violin soloist awaited her. She was to leave for the long journey on Nov. 5. She was to carry with her a violin made by Stradivarius, which her father had promised to buy for her at a cost of $20,000. The European engagements and the Stradivarius were thrown into the discard along with the $100,000 to be hers at 30 if she remained single.

Josephine had another engagement, a more important one. In the course of her studies she had met a young man of congenial tastes, another violinist. Paul Taylor White, though he is a violin instructor at the New England Conservatory of Music and, like his bride, aspires to be a great artist, does not wear his hair long and wavy. He wears it a la pompadour,

The sojourn in Europe would have stretched out to a year, perhaps much longer. That depended upon the success of Miss Kryl as an artist. Anyhow, it was too long to wait—and those six years remaining before her thirtieth birth anniversary were too long even to contemplate. That explains why Josephine, instead of going to her dentist, went to the "Loop" in Chicago and met the lover of whose existence in that character her father had no suspicion.

The pair repaired to the marriage license bureau, then sought a minister. The marriage ceremony was said and Mr. and Mrs. Paul Taylor White went at once to Boston, where the young man had ready a little apartment. A friend of the Kryls in the Hub City called upon the couple a few days ago and found Mrs. White washing dishes in the tiny kitchen.

"Paul does the cooking," she said, "but I do all the other housework, and I practice on my violin seven hours a day. I am going to learn to cook, and Paul says he and I are going to have careers in spite of papa's theory that marriage and musical success do not go together."

Ghostly Tales From South Sea Isles

open; he could feel the hands on his neck, and a pair of hard forearms and wrists, but whatever had him was invisible as so much air. He reckoned if the hands hadn't let go when I grabbed his feet he'd have died of fright.

"They came into my room, both pretty shaky, and I made some coffee while we waited for daylight. After breakfast I drove them to town—he said he wouldn't sleep another night in my house if I made him a present of the whole layout!"

As for the truth of this story, I am sure of one thing at least: the man who told it believed what he said. Nearly every white man you run across in the islands has had some experience of this sort. Among the natives, of course, the existence of spirits is an admitted fact, and though they live in terror of the souls of the newly dead, many of their ghost stories are devoid of anything ghastly, terrible or grim. Not long ago, on Tahiti, I heard of a curious and rather well-authenticated ghost.

An hour before sunset a native boy was wading along the edge of the lagoon, spear in hand, on the lookout for fish. It was a lonely stretch of beach—a place where thick hibiscus trees overhung the water's edge. All at once—seeming to come from the other side of a little point that jutted out into the lagoon ahead of him—he heard a sound of singing, a sound which impressed itself so strangely on his mind that he went ashore and made his way quietly through the bush, toward the invisible singer. Finally he saw her—a woman—sitting on a gnarled limb, far out above the water. Her back was toward him; her dress was a drapery of strange cloth, beautifully white; she was combing her long black hair with a curious three-toothed comb—and as she combed she sang over and over again the same haunting and monotonous little song. The watcher, crouching in the underbrush knew at once that his eyes were gazing on an extraordinary thing; everything about the woman was uncanny—her clothing, her comb, even the song she sang Some of the words he understood; there were others he had heard old people use, and many that he had never heard before. In the end, a twig crackled under the boy's foot; the woman turned her head with an air of sudden panic, and the next moment she vanished before his eyes.

All evening, in the hut where he lived with his grandmother, the boy was singing the little song, which would not leave his mind. The old woman seemed puzzled, and finally she spoke. "Where have you heard that song?" she asked; "you, who know nothing of the old tongue of Tahiti? When I was a child my mother used to sing those words—the combing song of the women, a hundred years ago."

Such incidents, which happen every day in the South Seas, form an accumulation of evidence not easy to explain away. Perhaps—if spooks do walk the earth—they may reveal themselves in the islands with less hesitation than elsewhere—here in an atmosphere of sympathy, and in places where every square foot of ground is underlaid with human bones. Sometimes I feel my own convictions weakening, especially since the day when I saw something, at 4 in the afternoon, in bright sunlight, on an open stretch of beach. But I have said enough—no doubt your credulity is already overstrained.

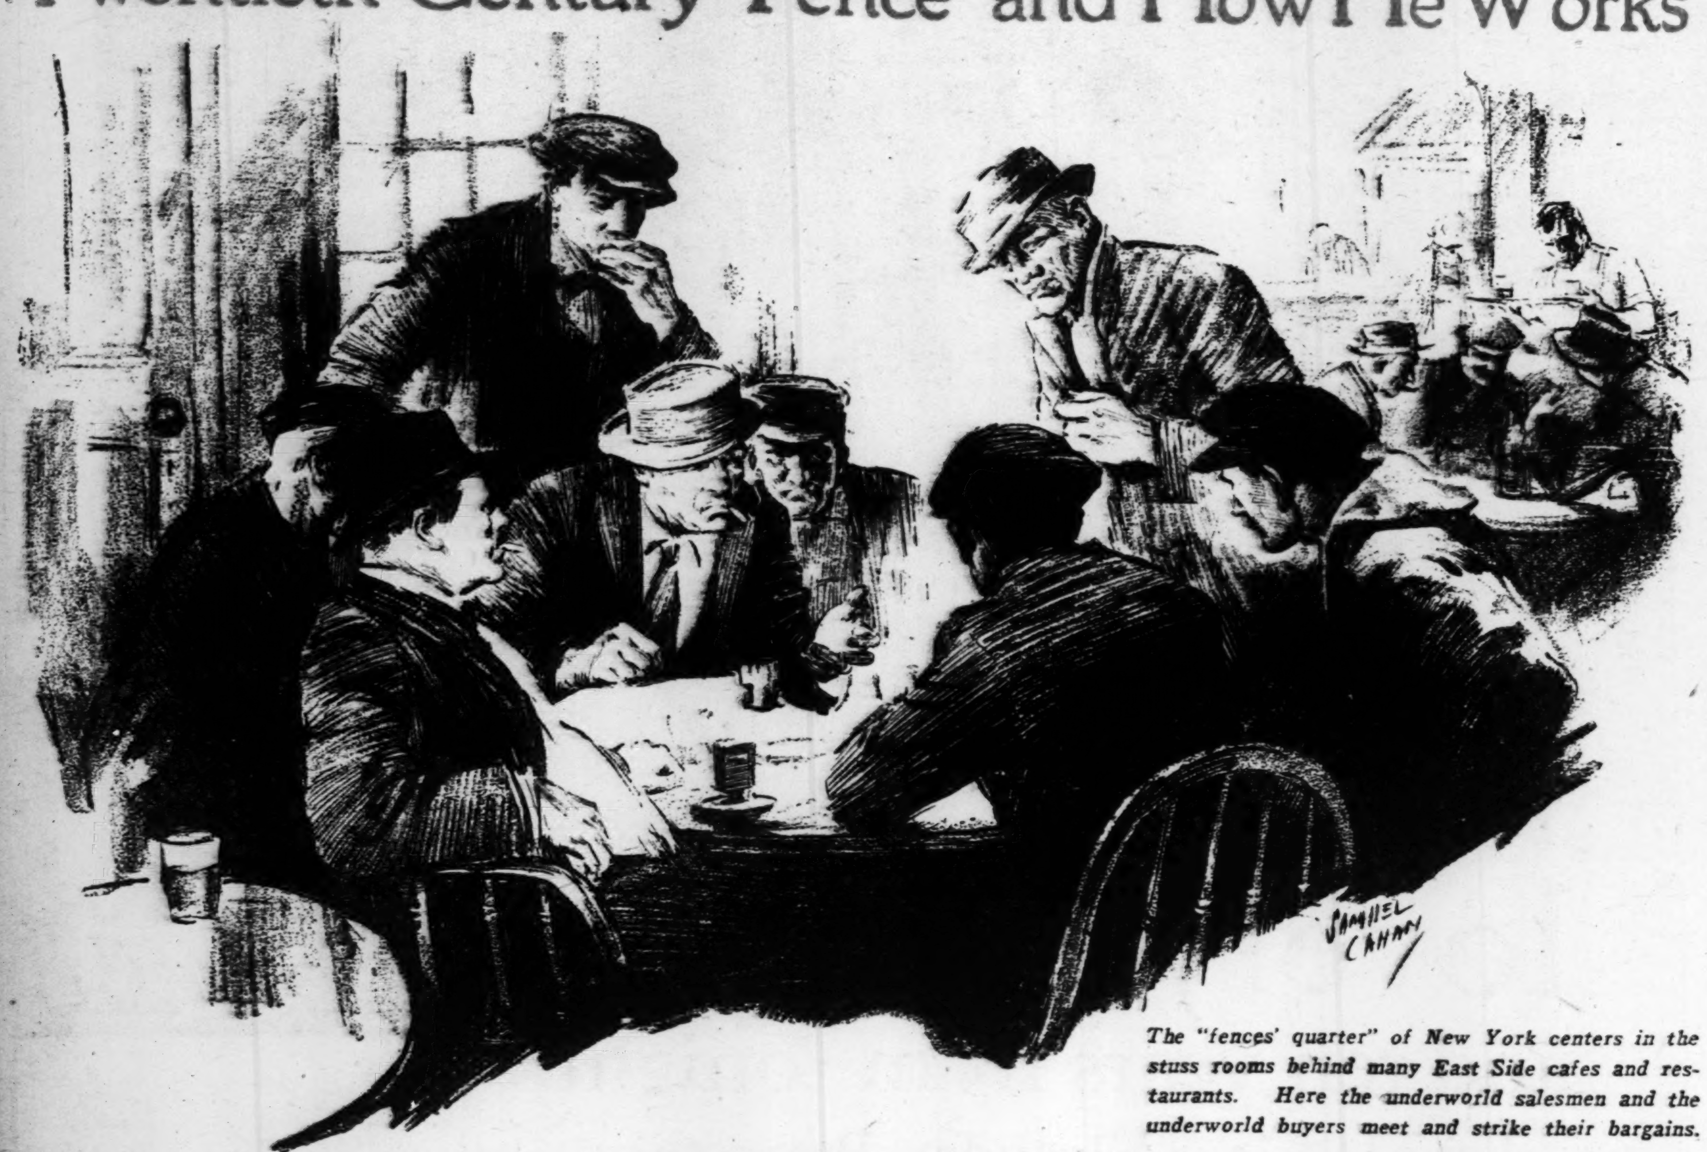
Twentieth Century "Fence" and How He Works



The "fences' quarter" of New York centers in the stuss rooms behind many East Side cafes and restaurants. Here the underworld salesmen and the underworld buyers meet and strike their bargains.

Organizations of thieves directed by receiver of stolen goods, are more extensive than ever before, taking silks, furs, laces, woolens, leather goods and other valuable merchandise in wholesale fashion. There are two methods, "stealing to order," and stealing desirable lots which then are distributed to merchants through salesmen on regular commission basis :: ::

IN THE course of a year, the newspaper reader sees a good many accounts of hundred-thousand-dollar thefts. Larcenies of such value as $25,000 and $50,000 in valuable merchandise are almost commonplace. On top of these daily depredations comes the occasional summing up, to the effect that tens or scores of millions of dollars worth of silks, furs, woolens, laces and other valuable goods have disappeared from the regular channels of trade into the dark zone of the robbers.

But what becomes of all this merchandise? Where does it go? How can thieves, even in a great city like New York, with its 50,000 public and private law officers, dispose of any such gluts of loot? After all, millions of dollars' worth of goods must have quite a large bulk. How can it be secreted, carted about, sold and resold?

The answer is to be found in the great organizations of thieves which infest the world's greatest city. And in these organizations the "fence," or, as he prefers to be called, the receiver, buyer and disposer, is the very heart of the organism. He functions literally in terms of millions. He is the true master mind, of whom endless talk and mystery are made. About his person and his business maneuver all the most persistent and dangerous forces of property criminality.

The newspaper reader sees a great deal printed about the "fence." The average reader may regard this dignitary as being largely a fictitious creature, just as he holds a cynical attitude toward the stories of criminal organizations. But syndicate crime is a fact, and so is its chief—more powerful, more complex and more dangerous today than ever before.

The Fagin of Dickens' day—a good enough portrait, save for the pathos injected therein—was a man who sent out a few pickpockets and who knew how to dispose of the things they stole. The same type of man kept a "hangout" in America, in the next generation, and housed various types of robbers and thieves. The keeper of a hangout for yeggs and safeblowers will serve to illustrate.

Several groups of cracksmen made their headquarters with him and spent their stolen riches over his bar, in his resort or in his rooming house. When they stole stamps from postoffices, these were turned in to the hangout keeper, who got cash for them through various connections, taking a commission of 20 per cent for his services. If the burglars scorched currency in robbing a safe, the fence got the disfigured bills redeemed. If they were arrested he furnished bail. He acted as go-between with the local police, was a small-fry politician and fixer and often helped plan the forays of the robbers.

Every large city in the country had specimens of this type. He organized the thing better than Fagin did, because outwardly at least he was not a party to the crimes of his guests. He was supposed to profit only from their riotous lives.

The hangouts began to disappear a dozen years ago and almost the last of them closed when the segregated districts were abolished. Prohibition sealed the doors of the few remaining resorts of this character. But the thieves, being scattered and not destroyed, continued to steal and thus continued to require the services of the fence. Accordingly a new organization for the disposal of loot was created—many organizations, in fact, all more difficult to deal with than the older and simpler systems.

Because of their high value, silks, furs and laces have been the goods most extensively stolen, excepting money, jewelry, precious metals and securities. They were the first and they remain the commonest wares to which the newer theft technique is applied. Their exorbitant prices during the war made worth while the creation of elaborate handling organizations, which remain in existence today and are functioning on a scale more grandiose than ever.

Woolens and leather goods were added to the list in the days of war-time inflation, and, just as there has been little decline in the prices of these commodities, so there has been no appreciable subsidence in the tide of thievery.

These larceny organizations go about their work by either of two well-established methods.

The simpler way is called "stealing to order." The receiver of stolen goods knows a wholesale or retail merchant who can use some furs, silks or woolens and who has both the facilities for concealing, converting and selling the stuff and the disposition to handle stolen materials at a price. When a bargain is struck the fence sends out his agents to find the desired materials. As soon as a supply has been located the thieves go to work.

They burglarize a manufacturer's loft, hold up a truck bringing such goods to market from the mill, or they plunder a freight car or a barge. Sometimes they corrupt truckmen, barge captains, railroad employes and others having access to the merchandise and get it in any of a dozen ways.

During the great epidemic of loft burglaries in New York's silk and fur district, it was freely said that more than half the stuff taken by the burglars had been sold before it was stolen, and this was certainly not far from the truth. The other method followed by the organizations which these fences manage is perhaps more like the older tradition of thievery, but more complex in its modern machinery and administration.

The fences who operate under this system are likewise closely in touch with the industries whose products they steal and distribute. Their agents are constantly watching for consignments which may be obtained by burglary, holdup or car looting. In their employ are specialists in various lines of endeavor—expert loft burglars, practiced truck bandits, daring rattler prowlers (freight car burglars) and thieves of all sorts. These men are sent out to work wherever their special talents are required or they operate on their own, and bring to the fences what they steal.

The fence is often a truckman himself or he employs apparently respectable haulers and storers, who have warehouses and lofts, where the stolen stuff may be put away temporarily. Often these men, whom no one suspects of underworld connections, put their stolen goods in the best storage vaults and lofts in the city, where they pass as wares in legitimate commercial transit.

Once the stuff is safely secreted, the underworld sales organization goes to work—a force of men directed just as are the salesmen of honest jobbers. The fence is the sales manager and he employs, on a commission basis, regular canvassers and salesmen, who know the trade, that is, all the retailers in the metropolis and its environs who are willing to handle stolen stuff if it can be bought a bit more cheaply.

In a recent case tried in the Federal court in Brooklyn, one of the conspirators confessed that he was such an underworld salesman, had been nothing else in a dozen years of activity and had never before been arrested. He turned State's evidence and helped break up an important league of thieves and disposers.

The "fences' quarter" of New York centers in the stuss rooms behind many East Side cafes and restaurants. Here the underworld salesmen and the underworld buyers meet and strike their bargains. Here the clearing is done for the thieves, the fences and hundreds of venal retailers.

The ruses used by the thieves and fences to get their goods delivered to distant points are numerous and of considerable interest. The railroads and express companies are the principal, although unwitting, means used by the criminals in such operations.

In one recent New York case, the thieves registered at a hotel and passed themselves off as traveling salesmen representing a St. Louis fur house. Their trunks, containing the loot, were thus given a record as salesmen's sample cases, and it was as such that they were expressed to St. Louis and passed the police, who were watching for the goods.

In another case the thieves packed the valuables into large trunks and checked them as the personal baggage of a confederate. This man bought a ticket to a city a few hundred miles away. There the trunks were stored in the baggage room awaiting their owner.

TO PREVENT CHAPPING—
a cream made to shield the skin

The cold winds of winter whip the moisture out of an unprotected skin and leave it rough and dry.

This is the cause of chapping. To prevent it you must shield your skin. The best possible shield is a cream that holds the natural moisture in and keeps the skin soft in spite of wind and cold.

The cream made especially to give this protection is Pond's Vanishing Cream. It is absorbed completely and does not come out again. So effective is this protection that wind and cold cannot harm the skin.

In countries and states that have severely cold climates and long winters—where women simply must protect their skin before venturing out they rely on Pond's Vanishing Cream. The enormous use of this cream in cold climates proves how effective it is as protection against wind and cold. No matter where you live, do not go out in winter until you have protected your skin with this cream.

This cream is too delicate in texture to clog the pores. It contains nothing that can encourage the growth of hair. You can buy it in jars or tubes at any drug or department store. The Pond's Extract Co., 131 Hudson Street, New York.

For cleansing, your skin needs an entirely different cream—Pond's Cold Cream made with just enough oil to penetrate the pores and remove every particle of dirt.

Blackheads indicate your cleansing method is wrong

BLACKHEADS indicate that you are not using the right method of cleansing for your type of skin.

A skin specialist would tell you that blackheads are caused by excessive oil collecting dirt in the pores of your skin.

To free your skin from this disfiguring trouble, use this simple treatment:

APPLY hot cloths to the face until the skin is reddened.

Then with a rough washcloth work up a heavy lather of Woodbury's Facial Soap and rub it into the pores thoroughly, always with an upward and outward motion.

Rinse with clear, hot water, then with cold—the colder the better. If possible, rub your face for thirty seconds with a piece of ice. Dry carefully.

To remove blackheads already formed, substitute a flesh brush for the washcloth. Then protect the fingers with a handkerchief and press out the blackheads.

GET a cake of Woodbury's today and begin this treatment tonight. A 25-cent cake lasts a month or six weeks.

Outside the rent profiteering belt. An Eskimo village found by the MacMillan expedition in the Far North. Every resident is his own ice-man.

—Copyright 1922, by Donald MacMillan.

It has brought back into the lives of thousands the radiant joy of Health

IT'S a pleasure to read them—the thousands of letters which are pouring in from every state in the Union—

From men who are finding again that abundance of health which gives energy and decision to a man's personality—

From women, young and old, who are rejoicing in the return of that freshness and glow which can come only from deep inner stores of buoyant health.

Why is it that many people lose so early their freshness and power?

When your strength begins to slip away—when you begin to show constant signs of vague ill-health, it is due to the fact that the body, from some deep underlying cause, is failing to perform two vital functions.

Either it is failing to build up properly the living cells which compose it, or it is not throwing off the poisons that gather in the intestines.

The fresh, living cells of Fleischmann's Yeast contain a natural food—with the very elements which help the body perform these two vital functions.

Like any other plant or vegetable, yeast produces the best results when fresh and "green"—not dried or "killed." Fleischmann's Yeast is the highest grade living yeast—always fresh. It is not a medicine, it is a natural food. Results cannot be expected unless it is eaten regularly. Eaten regularly, it helps to "tone" up the whole system and assures regular daily elimination.

Three thousand years ago yeast was used by Hippocrates, the famous physician of the ancient Greeks. Today Fleischmann's Yeast is being prescribed by physicians and hospitals everywhere.

Eat two or three cakes a day. If you prefer, get six cakes at a time. They will keep in a cool, dry place for several days. Begin at once to know what real health means. Be sure you get Fleischmann's Yeast. All grocers have it.

Fleischmann's Yeast builds health naturally and permanently

FOR HEALTH

Eat it plain—or spread it on crackers—or mix it with water or milk.

Appetite and digestion restored

The great problem for those who are run down or suffering from indigestion is first to stimulate the appetite, and at the same time make it possible to digest the increased food that is eaten. Fleischmann's Yeast has this remarkable effect on the digestive system. It enables you to eat more, and to get more benefit from the food you eat.

Laxatives made unnecessary

Fleischmann's Yeast does for you naturally and permanently what drugs at their best do only artificially and for a short time. In hospitals, even chronic cases respond to it and normal functions are restored in from 3 days to 5 weeks. People all over the country are telling how Fleischmann's Yeast has helped them.

Skin and complexion cleared

A poor complexion and even actual skin disorders are usually signs that your vitality is being lowered. Fleischmann's Yeast by increasing the number of white corpuscles in the blood acts as a powerful agent in clearing the skin of boils and pimples.

Have You These Two Striking Characteristics?

THE average woman has enough natural beauty to make her more or less interesting; but some women enhance their natural charms so skillfully that they are fascinating.

The same thing is true of Face Powders. Some Face Powders are merely—well—face powders, while others are Parties of the First Part in the secret treaty between a woman and her complexion.

When you choose a fine French Face Powder like Bourjois [pronounced Bourje-wah] Java,* you have two striking characteristics: a shrewd appreciation of your own natural beauty; and the unerring taste that enables you to make the most of it.

ASHES OF ROSES* ROUGE

is the Bourjois hand-made French rouge famous for its discretion. Both Java and Ashes of Roses are included in the 12 leading preparations found in the Bourjois Cabinet Assortment at progressive dealers. For the woman who prefers a lighter rouge, we suggest Rouge Mandarine.*
